PREFACE

A special interest in this volume attaches to the Edicts of Aśôka, whose discovery was epoch-making as regards the ancient history of India, and of the South in particular. The Anaji stone (Dg 161) is also of great importance in the same direction.

Much light is thrown upon the Pallavas, the Pâṇḍyas of Uchchaṅgi, and other rulers of the Noḷambavâḍi province which occupied this District. There are also very valuable records of the Râshṭrakûṭas, the Hoysaḷas and the Sêvuṇas or Yâdavas of Dêvagiri.

The most elaborate inscriptions are perhaps those set up around the Harihara temple at Harihar. Many of these, and others of this District, were published by me in 1878 in Mysore Inscriptions, but from greatly reduced and imperfect photographs. They now appear in complete and more accurate versions. Those relating to the erection of the Harihara temple (Dg 25 and 59), the construction of the dam across the Tungabhadrâ, its subsequent breach and restoration (Dg 23 and 29), and the establishment of a bank by Achyuta Râya (Dg 24 and Hk 123), are fine compositions. Also the Chaḷukya inscriptions, which contain very extended accounts of the line.

Those of the Chitaldroog and similar modern chiefs are of interest, as well as the farther instances of suicide of devoted dependents on the death of royal and other persons (see Dg 119 and Mk 12), a custom to which attention has been drawn in previous volumes.

The illustrations are by Namaśśivâyam Pillai of my office, and show that the Hoysaḷas were great promoters of art.

INTRODUCTION

The inscriptions of the Chitaldroog District number 642. Among them are included the oldest in the country, namely, the Edicts of Aśôka. From that period, the 3rd century B. C., we have, so far as the epigraphic remains in this District are concerned, to pass to the 5th century A. D., from which time there is a continuous record to the present time. The following is a list of such of the inscriptions as can be assigned to specified dynasties or periods :—

Maurya	3	B. C.	252	Sêvuṇa (or Yâdava)	22	1250—1300
Kadamba	9	A. D.	450—1171	Vijayanagar	130	1365—1415
Pallava	25		450—1205	Râyadurga	5	1386—1559
Râshṭrakûṭa	26		790—1060	Harati	18	1533—1739
Chaḷukya	74		694—1220	Bêlûr	14	1533—1562
Gaṅga	4		930—1220	Chitaldroog	48	1556—1756
Sinda	6		968—1172	Sante Bennûr	5	1571—1605
Kaḷachurya	6		1161—1220	Haṭṭi	3	1620—1685
Pâṇḍya	42		1032—1220	Muttinaḍu	5	1672—1747
Chôḷa	10		1106—1554	Mughals	4	1692—1720
Hoysaḷa	47		1193—1338	Mysore	13	1781—1885

These are reviewed in this Introduction as far as possible in chronological order under the heads indicated, attention being directed to whatever seems entitled to notice in regard to each.

In order to save space, the following abbreviations have been adopted for the names of the several taluqs :—Cd=Chitaldroog ; Dg=Dâvangere ; Jl=Jagalûr ; Mk=Moḷakâlmuru ; Cl=Challakere ; Hr=Hiriyûr ; Hk=Hoḷalkere.

Mauryas.

The discovery of the Edicts of Aśôka was made by me in 1892, in the course of the present Survey, and the event was described by one of the highest European authorities as forming an epoch in Indian archæology. For though Aśôka's edicts had been found inscribed on rocks in various parts in the north of India, the farthest points south in which they were known to occur were at Girnar in Kathiawar (the earliest discovered), and Jaugada in the Ganjam District. The present discovery therefore lifted as in a moment the veil that hid from our eyes the history of the South in this remote past age, and revealed the fact that the Maurya empire extended over at least the northern parts of the Mysore country.[1]

Previously to this I had published the inscriptions at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa and the various traditions which recount the migration southwards of Chandra Gupta (grandfather of Aśôka) to Mysore in the company of the great Jaina teacher Bhadrabhâhu, and the ending of their days at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa,

[1] The discovery was on the point of being missed. For myself and my people were all much fatigued with a long period of travel and I had spent my last rupee. I was therefore thinking of leaving Moḷakâlmuru as not promising any inscriptions of importance. But fortune proved more favorable, and I procured some funds by an excursion to Bellary. In order to make the discovery public as soon as possible, it was communicated to the Editor of the Madras Mail, who at once recognized its importance, and informed me that by the next morning it would be known at every breakfast table in England. I soon received hearty congratulations from all sides, from the veteran archæologist General Sir Alexander Cunningham, from Dr. G. Bühler, and many other learned and interested inquirers, all eager to know the particulars.

But he did not come here in any administrative capacity, having in fact abdicated the throne, to devote his last years to penance in compliance with the dictates of the Jain religion.[1] There was also the statement in the Mahâvaṃśa that among the countries to which Aśôka sent out Buddhist missionaries was Mahisa-maṇḍaḷa. This, it now became clear, was no other than Mysore, those parts of the country not within the limits of his direct government. A farther confirmation is found in the mention of Vanavâsi, the ancient city on the north western border of Mysore, as another of the places to which he sent missionaries.

The Aśôka inscriptions discovered by me were three in number, situated on hills on the right and left banks of the Janagi-haḷḷa or Chinna Haggari river, where it crosses the Moḷkâlmuru taluq from west to east. They are all in the neighbourhood of Siddâpura, between 14°47' and 51' north latitude and about 76°51' east longitude. The best preserved is the Brahmagiri inscription (Mk 21), engraved on the top of a great boulder of gneiss, at the north-west base of the hill of that name, at a point called the Ganjiguṇṭe mûle. The boulder was well known throughout the neighbourhood as the akshara guṇḍu or "letter rock," and was supposed to be endued with medicinal virtues. Accordingly, in various ailments of human beings and in diseases of cattle, the stone was washed and the water used for the purpose given to the patient to drink. It was the favourite seat for goatherds in the heat of the day when the flocks were collected into the shade of the surrounding rocks, and for ryots watching the crops in the neighbouring fields. The inscription is cut on the undressed horizontal surface of the rock, which slopes down somewhat at the end of the lines. It consists of thirteen not very regular lines, covering a space of 15'6" by 11'6." Half a dozen letters at the beginning of the 6th and 7th lines have been defaced by lodgement of water in a depression in the stone. But, with the exception of a few other letters here and there, the remainder is generally in good preservation.[2] This inscription has been adopted as the standard text, as all three are evidently replica, though probably with variations in detail and expression. But the other two are so much defaced that the differences cannot be determined with any certainty.

The second inscription (Mk 14) is less than a mile to the west of the first, and close to Siddâpura, on a ledge, facing south, some way up a rocky group of hills called Yenamana Timmayyana guṇḍlu or the buffalo-herd Timmayya's rocks. It consists of twenty-two lines, covering a space of 13'6" by 8', and is engraved in lines of varying length on the sloping and peeling horizontal surface of the rock. A great boulder overhangs the inscription on the north, under the eaves of which the lines end, leaving a very small space between the inscribed floor and the rock above. Considerable portions have been defaced, as the shady ledge on which the inscription is cut formed a favourite shelter for goats and cattle.

The third inscription (Mk 34) is on the western summit of the Jaṭiṅga-Râmêśvara hill, which is some three miles or more north by west of Brahmagiri. The inscription is cut on a very irregular slanting horizontal surface of rock, facing north-east, which has been quarried at some period. Overhanging the inscription on the south is an immense boulder, which still shows the marks of the mason's punches used in splitting off a considerable portion of its northern face. The floor on which the inscription is cut is immediately in front of the stairs leading up to the Jaṭiṅga-Râmêśvara temple. Consequently all pilgrims to the shrine used to walk right over the inscription, and have no doubt done so for centuries. Moreover, owing to the convenient shadow of the overhanging boulder, the site of the inscription was the favourite resort of the bangle-sellers at the annual festival. Hence the rock is called the Baḷegâra-gunḍu or "bangle-sellers' rock," and various holes have been punched in different parts of the rock on which the inscription is cut to receive the posts of the booths or tents erected by them at the annual fair. For the foregoing reasons it is not surprising that the inscription is very greatly defaced, so much so indeed that it is difficult to tell exactly where it begins or where it ends. So far as can be made out, it consists of at least twenty eight lines, covering a space of 17'6" by 6'6". There is a guiding line engraved in the margin to the left, apparently to show the direction of the lines, but those above this mark do not seem to have been parallel with those below it. The letters are not so large as those of the other two inscriptions.

[1] The historian is justified, Mr. Vincent A Smith observes, in assuming that the system of government developed by the genius of Chandragupta, the first emperor of India, was preserved intact in its main features, although supplemented by some novel institutions, and modified by certain reforms, in the reign of his grandson. (Aśôka, p. 72).

[2] Erections have now been put up over this and the other Aśôka inscriptions by the Mysore Government for their protection, and the headman of the village has the keys as custodian.

All are engraved in the Brahmi lipi,[1] the southern form of Aśôka characters, and expressed in Prâkṛit language.[2] But a very remarkable exception occurs in the case of the last word in each, in which the engraver, in stating his profession, has done so in the Kharôshṭhi characters, written from right to left, which are only found in the extreme north-west of the Punjab. This peculiarity does not occur elsewhere, and seems to indicate that the official who wrote the inscriptions had been transferred from the extreme north to the extreme south of the empire.

The three inscriptions found in Mysore resemble most of all the Three New Edicts of Bairât (in Râjputâna), Rûpnâth (in the Central Provinces), and Sahasrâm (in Bengal), first translated by Dr. Bühler. These "Minor Rock Edicts present a single short edict in variant forms, to which a second still shorter edict, a summary of the Buddhist moral law, is added in the Siddâpura group of copies only."[3]

All the three in Mysore begin in the same way,[4] with greeting from the Ayaputa (Âryaputra or Prince) and the mahâmâtas (or high officials) of Suvaṇṇagiri to the mahâmâtas of Isila. We thus come to know that Suvarṇagiri, which has not been identified, was the seat of a Viceroy, a member of the royal family. From various edicts we learn that there were three others,—Taxila (Shâh Dheri, in ruins, in Rawalpindi District in the Punjab), Ujjain (in Mâlva), and Tosali (perhaps Jaugaḍa in Ganjam District). Isila may possibly be represented by the Sidda in Siddâpura.

Our edicts are introduced with the formula "Dêvâṇaṃ Piye commands" or "Thus says Dêvâṇaṃ Piye."[6] This name (Dêvânâm priyaḥ), meaning Beloved of the gods, was a royal title borne by the Maurya kings. It is sometimes used alone, but more often in conjunction with the king's name. It thus occurs as an epithet of Piyadasi (=Priyadarśi) and of Dasaratha his grandson.

The main object of the present edicts is to exhort all classes to greater effort in pious duties. In doing this the king adduces his own example, how while he was a lay disciple he did not exert himself strenuously, but after he entered the Order he did so, and as the result, the men who were (regarded as) true in Jambu-dvîpa (were shown to be) false, together with the gods. This was the fruit of effort or exertion, and in the same way the lowly, as well as the great, could by exertion attain

1 The source of the Dêvanâgarî and other alphabets of India. It is of Semitic origin and was introduced into India in about the 9th century B.C.

2 Most of the inscriptions are written in the dialect known as Mâgadhi, then current at the capital of the empire, where the text was evidently prepared. The versions published at the distant stations of Girnâr and Shâbhâzgarhi were prepared in the viceregal offices, and exhibit many local peculiarities. The texts in the Central Provinces and Mysore are intermediate in character between those of Girnâr and those of the east. (Smith's As'ôka, p. 107).

3 id., p. 105.

4 Translations have appeared by Dr. Bühler in Epigraphia Indica, III, 140; by M. Senart, (in French) in the Journal Asiatique for 1892; and by Mr. V. A. Smith in As'ôka (Rulers of India Series), 138, 141. Plaster casts of the Brahmagiri inscription, prepared (with those of other As'ôka Edicts) at the expense of Sir Charles Elliott when Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, have been placed in the Indian Museum at Calcutta and the Madras Museum.

5 As'ôka himself was the Viceroy here at the time of his father's death.

6 This fformula, with which most of the Edicts are introduced, recalls the similar one in the famous Persian inscription of Darius, 516 B. C., at Behistan, every section of which commences with,—"Says Darius the king."

to svarga (or heavenly bliss). A precept to this effect is quoted, said to have been delivered by the Vyûtha (or the Departed, that is, Buddha) 256 (? years ago).

With regard to the various circumstances referred to in the above summary, the conversion of the king, as he informs us in the 13th Rock Edict, was due to the remorse he felt on account of the slaughter and devastation that attended his conquest of Kaḷiṅga. Henceforth he resolved to maintain peace and devote himself to religion. That conquest, as he tells as, was in the 9th year after his coronation. During the two years and a half that he was an upâsaka (or lay disciple) he did not put forth much effort. But more than six years before the time of our present inscription, he entered the sangha (or religious order) and vigorously exerted himself. What ensued from these special efforts has been stated above, but the sentence is elliptic and not over clear.[1] But it is generally agreed, and there can be no question, that the reference is to the Brahmans, who are designated throughout Hindu literature by several terms which mean "gods on earth." As stated by M. Senart, "After his conversion the king proceeded to deprive the Brahmans of that almost divine prestige which they enjoyed throughout the whole of India." Their authority being rejected, their gods were also deposed (as Mr. Smith remarks). That the king's conversion was to Buddhism there can be no doubt. Previous to this change of faith he was in the opinion of some a Jain,[2] but according to others he held the creed of the Brahmans. Aśôka signalized his conversion not by persecution of his former co-religionists but by inducing a revolution throughout India in the public estimation of them. In short, the members of the Saṅgha no doubt took advantage of the king's presence and adhesion to influence him to depose their rivals, whether Brahmans or Jains, from their former pre-eminence. This action of his does not invalidate the express injunctions to toleration contained in so many of his edicts, wherein he inculcates more than once the duty of reverence to and the bestowal of alms upon both Brâhmaṇas and S'ramaṇas. Toleration was denied only to their false claims. On the other hand it would be strange if no trace whatever could be discovered of the resentment which would naturally be evoked by so powerful though silent and peaceful a revolution in time-honoured beliefs. And we may perhaps find a trace in the fact that Dêvânâmpriyaḥ, as one word, is explained by Kâtyâyana in the Vârttikas to Pâṇini as synonymous with mûrkha, a fool ! This was a very characteristic retaliation, if so meant, and the use of the word thus authorized has come down even to the present time and is common, so I am told, at all events among the Brahmans. See also the satirical verses quoted in Vol. V. Intro. p. 30, 31.

As regards the numerals 256, no one has been able satisfactorily to explain what they refer to.[3] They do not, however, whether embodying a date or not, affect the accuracy of the dates

[1] The parallel passages to this difficult sentence, which are somewhat differently expressed at Sahasrâm and Rûpnâth, have been thus interpreted :—Sahasrâm : (Dr. Bühler)—"During this interval those gods that were (held to be) true gods in Jambu-dvîpa have been made (to be regarded as) men and false." (M. Senart)—"During this period the men who were the real gods of Jambu-dvîpa have been reduced to be no longer really the gods." Rûpnâth : (Dr. Bühler)—"Those gods who during this time were considered to be true (gods) in Jambu-dvîpa have now been abjured." (M. Senart)—"Those who at that time were the real gods of Jambu-dvîpa are now reduced to be really so no longer."

[2] That ChandraGupta, As'ôka's grandfather, was a Jain has been stated above, and this seems to be supported by the testimony of the Greek ambassador Megasthenes (see McCrindle's Indika of Megasthenes). For As'ôka, see Thomas's Jainism or the Early Faith of As'ôka. As'ôka's grandson Sampadi or Samprati was apparently a devoted Jain.

[3] The following interpretations given of the parallel passages at Sahasrâm and Rûpnâth will show the difficulties connected with it :—Sahasrâm : (Dr. Bühler)—"And this sermon (is) by the Departed (i. e. Buddha). Two hundred (years) exceeded by fifty-six, 256, have passed since." (M. Senart)—"It is by the missionary that this teaching is spread abroad. Two hundred and fifty-six men have been sent forth on missions, 256." Rûpnâth : (Dr. Bühler)—"This sermon has been preached by the Departed. 256 (years have elapsed) since the departure of the Teacher." (M. Senart)—"It is through the missionary that my teaching is spread abroad. There have been 256 settings forth of missionaries." Dr. Oldenberg lays down the following as the exact translations, whatever the words left in the original may be found to mean. Sahasrâm : "256 satas are vivuthas." Rûpnâth: "There are 256 vivâsas of the sata."

otherwise assigned to Asôka, which are sufficiently established. Assuming that the figures indicate the number of years since the death of Buddha, Mr. V. A. Smith has constructed a table (Asôka, p. 140) showing how they can be made to tally with the known chronology, and thus arrives at 252 B.C. as the date of the present and other Minor Rock Edicts.

The Edicts discovered in Mysore contain a short supplementary edict giving a summary of the dhamma or law of piety, the beginning and end of which bear a striking similarity to the fifth commandment in the tables of Moses.

The whole concludes with the statement that the edicts were written by Paḍa the scribe. It is in this last word (lipikarêna) that he makes use of the Kharôshṭhi characters of the north-west Punjab, written from right to left,—a form of Aramaic script introduced by the Persians after the conquests of Darius in the 6th century B.C.

Kadambas.

The earliest Kadamba inscription in this volume is Dg 161, which is engraved in Cave characters similar to those on the Maḷavaḷḷi pillar (Sk 263, Vol. VII), but expressed entirely in Sanskrit. It informs us of a disastrous battle in which Kṛishṇavarmma-Râja, evidently a Kadamba, was ruinously defeated by the Pallava-Râja Naṇakkâsa. The site of this battle is not mentioned, but it may be assumed that it was somewhere near Anaji, where the inscription is. So complete was the ruin of his country, that Sivanandavarmmâ, who we must suppose was the son of the Kadamba king, although he had distinguished himself by acts of courage, resolved to retire from the world and deliberately gave himself up to a life of penance, hoping thus to accumulate merit which should retrieve the fortunes of his line.[1] Of this prince we have some important details. He was devoted to the feet of his father and mother (who are not however specifically named), and is said to belong also to the family of the Kêkayas, who made intermarriages with the Ikshvâkus and râjarshis. As regards the Kêkayas we know from the Bannahaḷḷi plates (Bl 121; Vol. V) that Kṛishṇavarmmâ married the daughter of Kaikêya, and had by her a son named Vishṇuvarmmâ. This was perhaps another son by the same mother. The Kêkayas are farther said to have intermarried with the Ikshvâkus. The reference may be to the Gaṅgas, who claim descent from Ikshvâku (see Sh 4, 64; Vol. VII), an opinion which is supported by the statement in Gaṅga grants that Taḍangâḷa Mâdhava, the fifth king of the line, married the sister of the Kadamba king Kṛishṇavarmmâ, who is himself described in the Beṇṇûr plates (Bl 245; Vol. V) as the fifth king of the Kadambas. Both Sivanandavarmmâ and Naṇakkâsa are names new to the lists respectively of Kadambas and Pallavas.

We then pass on to Cd 42 and 43, finely engraved in old characters on two slabs of stones lying in a field north west from Chitaldroog. They contain the praises of a Brahman named Guṇa-madhura, who is described as the adhipati of Mâsikkâ-pura, and son of Manâgama, the son of Dhanâgama. There is nothing to throw light upon the question as to who he was, nor is there any local name bearing any resemblance to Mâsikkâ-pura. There are two villages some distance to the west, in the next taluq, named HireMadhura and Chikka Madhura, but there is nothing to connect Guṇa-madhura with them.

In Mk 40 and 42 we have an Ajavarmmarasa in 987, who was probably a Kadamba though this is not stated. He also appears in Mk 26 in 1032, when Jayasinga-Dêva was ruling the kingdom, the Châḷukya king of that name. The lord of Kânchî-pura who transmitted the king's orders must have been a Pallava.

[1] This was perhaps accomplished by Ravivarmmâ, who is said to have uprooted Chaṇḍadaṇḍa, the lord of Kânchî. (Halsi plates, Ind. Ant. VI, 30).

The next Kadamba record (Mk 41) is dated in 1100 A. D. In this we have the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, lord of Banavâsi-pura, Bancharasa-Dêva ruling the kingdom from the fort of Luṇke, and making a grant for the god Lunkêśvara. This fort was immediately to the north of Moḷakâlmuru and the temple of Nunke Bhairava, as it is called, is in a rocky ravine near where this inscription is engraved.[1] A neighbouring hill to the north east is called Ucchaṅgi-durga, (said to have been formerly known as Hire-Âryana-durga). Seeing that the Kadambas had a seat of government in this part, it may possibly be the Uchchâśriṅgi from which some of their copper plate grants were issued, hitherto supposed to be the famous Uchchaṅgi-durga in the south west of the Bellary District, just over the Mysore border.

In Dg 35 we have a Kadamba king named Sôma in control of the manneya of the Nâgarakhaṇḍa Seventy in about 1160. The origin of the Kadambas is here traced to Mayûravarmmâ, who was born to Rudra and the Earth under a kadamba tree. As he was born with an eye in his forehead, the crown could not be bound there, as it would cover it up: it was therefore bound near his knee, where it would show well. As he grew up in the shade of the kadamba tree, his family became the Kâdambas. After Mukkaṇṇa-Kadamba Mayûravarmmâ, many kings of that line succeeded. At length arose Barmma-Dêva, whose fame none of them had equalled. His son was Boppa-Dêva, whose son was Sôyi-Dêva, the Sôma above mentioned.

In Dg 32 we have a Kadamba king named Nâgatiyarasa in 1171, together with his junior uncles Hamparasa and Sattiyarasa, his younger brother Hariyarasa and his sons Kêtarasa and Mâcharasa, remitting for the god S'aṅkara-Nârâyaṇa certain tribute payable to them from the Kûḍalûr agrahâra and its hamlet Belvâḍi. Nâgati was the son of Kêtarasa and Kanakabeyarasi, and has all the Kadamba titles and epithets. He is also called lord of the Uchchangi hill.

Pallavas. Nolamba.

The oldest inscription here relating to the Pallavas is Dg 161 already treated of above. In it we have a Nanakkâsa-Pallava-Râja inflicting a crushing defeat on the army of Kṛishṇavarmma-Râja. No more is said about him, nor has his name been met with before[2]. He may be one of the early Pallava kings known to us under a different name.

The name Pallava at the beginning of the 9th century becomes interchangeable with Noṇamba or Noḷamba, whence the Nonambavâḍi or Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-six Thousand province, which was more or less identical with the Chitaldroog District, its subjects being represented by the existing Noṇabas.

In Cl 5,7 and 8 we have Singappotta Kali-Noḷambâdi. He is the Simhapôta mentioned as the second of the Noḷambas in the inscription discovered by me at Hêmâvati, the ancient Heñjeru.[3] In Cl 8 he is described as acting under the orders of Permmânaḍi, who on becoming the ruler of a new kingdom (nava-râjyam), that is, on coming to the throne, was incensed against Duggamarasa for trying to assert his independence, and directed Singapôta to attack him. Permmânaḍi was the Pallava title taken away from them by the Ganga king Srîpurusha on his gaining a decisive victory over them, and ever after assumed by the Gangas.[4] Duggamâra was a son of Srîpurusha. The Permmânaḍi here referred to must therefore be Sivamâra II, the son who succeeded Srîpurusha on the throne in about 780.

Next come Cl 33 and 34, a little later. In these we find the Râshṭrakûṭas as the supreme rulers, and Singhappotta's son Paramêśvara-Pallavâdhirâja, with the latter's son Pallava-Malla, governing certain provinces under them. We know that the Râshṭrakûṭas at about this period seized the Ganga territories and imprisoned the Ganga king, conjectured to be the S'ivamâra above mentioned, which is thus apparently confirmed. Pallavâdhirâja is called Châru Ponnera in the Hêmâvati stone. Of the provinces he was governing, the two chief were the Nolambalige Thousand and the Nirggunda-nâḍ Three Hundred. The latter was in the south west of the Chitaldroog District. The other, which was the most important, may have been the nucleus of the Nolambavâdi Thirty-six Thousand. Of Singapôta's daughters, one is described as the mother of Permmânaḍi's queen, and we know from other inscriptions that intermarriages took place at this time between the Gangas and Pallavas more than once.

In Cl 29 we have Pallava-Chôra, no doubt the Polal-Chôra Nolamba given in the Hêmâvati stone as the successor of Châru Ponnera. In Hr 33 Mahêndra is ruling. He was the son of Polal-Chôra by a Ganga princess, the sister of Nîtimârgga. We next have in Cd 62 Ayyapa-Dêva ruling in 918, with another name of Nannigâśraya. He appears again in Jl 29, where he is styled Nolambâdhirâja, and Aṇṇayya was governing some place under him. In Cl 6 and 56 the latter, with the title Bîra-Nolamba, has succeeded his father. Hr 31 of 971 and Cl 4 of 974 belong to this period but contain no name of the ruling king. Hr 1 brings us in 975 to Iriva-Nolamba Dilipayya's son Nanni-Nolamba. Iriva was a second son of Ayyapa and ruled after his brother.

Next comes Mk 10 of 1022, in which we have Jagadêkamalla-Nolamba-Pallava-Permmânaḍi ruling under the Châlukya king Jagadêkamalla or Jayasimha-Dêva. His name appears from Dg 71 to have been Udayâditya-Dêva. His seat (âsana) is said to be in Kampili, which is on the Tuṅgabhadrâ, in the north west of the Bellary District, and he is described merely as ruling the kingdom. In Dg 126 and 19 of 1037 and 1043, Jagadêkamalla-Immaḍi-Nolamba-Pallava-Permmânaḍi appears ruling various provinces, of which the chief was the Kadambalige Thousand, which is often met with in the inscriptions of this District. It evidently takes its name from the Kadambas, as Nolambalige from the Nolambas. His minister was Pallavâbharaṇa Brahmâdirâja. Dg 124 and 20, the latter dated in 1045, show us Trailôkyamalla-Nanni-Nolamba-Pallava-Permmânaḍi ruling Kadambalige and other provinces, together with the nidhi-nidhâna-nikshêpam and a sahasra-daṇḍam. These expressions recur in many of the inscriptions of this District, and may perhaps refer to (gold) mines. Nidhi and nikshêpa are always included in the ashṭa-bhôga-têjas-svâmya or eight rights of full possession, and refer to hidden treasure and underground stores. But here they are described, along with nidhâna, also meaning hidden treasure, as objects of the ruler's government, and he appears to have been provided with a force of a thousand men to guard them.[1] Nidhi is also used to denote a bank (see Dg 24 and Hl 123). Dg 124 was composed by Pallavâbharaṇa Brahmâdirâja's perggaḍe S'ântivarmmayya, Jl 10 of 1054 introduces Nàrasinga-Dêva as ruling Kadambalige and other provinces under Trailôkyamalla, and his son Kumâra-Chôraya-Dêva as ruling the Uchchangi Thirty. A grant was made for the temple at Asagagôḍu, which is declared to be a Kâlâmukha-sthâna, the maṭha of the Naishṭika-vêdi Karttâra, who rewarded the sûtradhâra, or engineer who superintended its erection, with some land.

In Mk 28 and Cd 82 of 1072 and 1074 we have grants made under Trailôkyamalla-Nolamba-Pallava-Permmâḍi Jayasinga-Dêva, the younger brother by a Pallava mother of the Châlukya emperor Vikramâditya Tribhuvanamalla. In both he is given the imperial titles, and in the former described as his elder brother's lion, He was then in the outer camp of Gondavâḍi. In the latter he is styled the Châlukya regent elephant, not bounded by his elder brother (aṇṇa-nissîmam).

[1] In Cd. 34 a grant is made—with freedom from trouble about the nidhi-nidhâna-nikshêpa and the sahasra-daṇḍa.

Dg 113 mentions a Pallava king, but with no name. Cd 23 informs us that in 1205 the Pallava prince Mâchi-Dêva was governing the Hoḷalakere-nâḍ and the Honkunda Thirty under the Hoysala king. His descent is also given.

Râshtrakûtas.

The Râsṭrakûṭa inscriptions begin with Cl 33 and 34. They are both on the same pillar and represent Akâlavarsha's son Jagattunga-Prabhûtavarsha-Pratâpâvalôka-S'rivallaha as ruling the kingdom of the world,—designations which indicate a Gôvinda. It was at one time uncertain whether this Gôvinda actually came to the throne. But in inscriptions published by Dr. Bhandarkar[1] it is said that sensual pleasures made him careless of the kingdom, and he left the cares of government to his younger brother Nirupama, allowing the sovereignty to drop away from his hands. He attempted afterwards to recover his power, but in vain. He is said at the end of Jinasêna's Harivamśa to be ruling the south in S'aka 705 (783 A.D.)[2] To this period therefore our two inscriptions must belong.

Dg 17 of 889 and Jl 19 of 907 are of the time of Kannara-Dêva Akâlavarisha. The former is a grant by the descendant in the seventh degree, all specified, of a dancing girl. The latter is a vîrakal, much defaced, in which the Gangas and Noḷambas appear. Dg 119 of 930 belongs to the reign of Suvarṇṇavarsha, a title of Gôvinda IV. We here have Barddhega governing the Kadambaḷige Thousand, and a Ganga named Chandi .. as governor under him.[3] On his death his retainer Alliga became kîl-gunthe. This obscure expression was first met with in the interesting Doḍḍahunḍi stone (TN 91, Vol III) in connection with the death of the Ganga king Nîtimârgga. For reasons given below in my note on p. 73 of the Translations I consider that it means "buried under."

Cd 76 and 77, of 937 and 940, bring us to Amôghavarsha. In both, Kannayya or Kannarasa was governing the Kadambaḷige Thousand, together with the nidhi-nidhâna-nikshêpa and a sahasra-daṇḍa, already described above (p. 7). In Cd 76 is given a genealogy of the Raṭṭa kings. After describing the descent of the Yâdava race from Brahma, it says that many of that race ruled the earth in peace, after whom arose Dantiga, who stood in all the wealth of the kingdom. He died without a son, and his junior uncle (kiṟiy-ammam) Kannara[4] entered the line. He was succeeded by his son Nirupama, to whom was born Jagattunga, whose son was the celebrated Amôghavarisha. His son was Dêva, whose eldest son was Indara, whose son was Dêva, celebrated like his father. Dêva-Râja's son was Gabhindara, whose son was Iṟiva-Kannara. The same genealogy is repeated in Cd 49. In this list Gôvinda II (of Cl 33 and 34) is omitted, as usual. The first Dêva represents Kannara Akâlavarsha II. The second Dêva, being the son of Indra and a celebrated king, must be Gôvinda IV. So far as hitherto known he had no son, and was succeeded by his uncle Baddiga Amôghavarsha, whose son Kannara Akâlavarsha III followed. If Gôvinda IV had no son it is strange that an inscription of almost his own time (918-933) should represent him as having one. But Iriva-Kannara must be the Kannara who was the son of Baddiga, and the latter must be the Gabhindara of these inscriptions and the uncle of Gôvinda IV. But though not the son of Gôvinda IV, he was the son of a Gôvinda, his grandfather Jagattunga, the invariable title of the Gôvindas in this family, who died before coming to the throne. Cd 76 closes with a brief summary of the notable exploits of the kings, as follows :— In Paḷeyâr, Dêva attacked and slew Pâṇḍya, (that is, Kannara II slew probably a Pâṇḍya of Uchchangi) ; Dêva's son (Indra) slew Vîra, (of this reference I cannot find any explanation) ; in S'rîpura, Indra's son (Gôvinda IV) smote the Pallava king, (the Pallava king during Gôvinda's reign, 918-933, would be Ayyapa Nanniga or his son Anniga Bira-Nolamba, but according to the Deoli plates the latter was subdued by Kannara III) ; Indra defeated Kaḷa, (Indra appears here to represent Baddiga as before explained, but we have no information about Kala) ; this Kannara (Kannara III) slew Ganga-Permmâḍi and gave the land to Bhûvallabha, (the reference is to the murder of the Ganga prince Râchamalla, and the establishment on the Ganga throne of Bûtuga, as related in the Âtakûr stone (Md 41, Vol III) and in the Deoli plates (Ep. Ind. V, 188), Bûtuga being given Kannara's sister in marriage, together with the Banavase Twelve Thousand and other important provinces.

From Cd 75 of 941 to Hl 88 of 965 we have several inscriptions of the reign of Akâlavarsha Kannara III. In these, Kannayya is still governing Kadambaḷige, together with the nidhi-nidhâna &c, as before, down to 964 (Hl 30), when .. lôkayva succeeded him in this charge, and Kannayya is governing the Seven Gauḍas and the Komara-gadyâṇa of the Thousand (i. e. Kadambaḷige). In 946 (Cd 26) he appears with a number of titles, and in 947 (Cd 49) calls the Raṭṭa genealogy above given in Cd 76, his genealogy (âtana vams'âvaḷi). Mk 27 of 962 is the inscription on the Jaṭinga-Râmêśvara hill which records the rebuilding with stone of the unfinished brick temple said to have been erected on the spot where Jaṭâyu fought and fell when Râvaṇa carried off Sîte. No king's name is given, but the mention of Goggi connects it with this reign, as is clear from Hl 33, where also it appears that he was Kannayya's brother-in-law. He has various titles, among which are Permmâḍi.. 's (baṇṭa, or warrior), and bhujanga (serpent or paramour) of Ujjeni, and is called Goggiyamma .. :. kayya, evidently the same as Kannayya's successor in Hl 30. His descent is given in Cd 74. Kannayya's mother Polegabbe, given to fasting and purified by bathing in the Ganges, along with her son Sûdrakayya, makes a grant in Hl 33. She was no doubt a widow. In Hl 88 we have Mârasinga-Permmâḍi ruling the Gangavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand under Kannara-Dêva. This explains the Permmâḍi above as referring to the Ganga king known as Noḷamba-kulântaka. In Hl 23 Sûdrakayya was governing Kadambaḷige, with the nidhi-nidhâna &c. He has the titles,—master of the Ândra-maṇḍala (Ândra-maṇḍalâṇma) and bhujanga of Ujjeni. He makes a grant for a temple not only with washing of the feet of the priest, as usual, but rubbing them as well. Guṇḍêri, where the grant was made, is called a city of the Lôkâyatas, an atheistical sect, followers of the doctrines of Chârvâka. A grant was also made by a Sinda prince at the same time.

With Cd 50 and 74 we pass to Nityavarsha Kottiga-Dêva, ruling in Mannekhêḍa or Mânyakhêṭa[1]. Pandayya or Pandiga was governing Kadambaḷige. He claims Chaḷukya descent, which is given in detail in Cd 74, and was the son of Goggi. He was apparently the same as Sûdraka above. Among his titles are,—the Châḷukya omniscient. His wife was Jakki Sundari, a Jain. In Hl 86 and 87 of 975, and 85 of 977, we have vîrakal of the time when Arabalava was ruling. No overlord is mentioned, and he describes himself as a Kûka. There is a Kukkavâḍi in Hk 68.

Dg 152 of 976 closes the independent Râshṭrakûṭa inscriptions in this volume. Kokkala-Dêva was ruling the earth as far as the ocean, and Pandiyayya was still governing Kadambaḷige. But Cd 78 shows a Raṭṭa chief Singana-Dêva governing, under the Châḷukyas, and he would seem to have been married to the Châḷukya king's daughter.

Châlukyas.

The first document is the Harihara plates[2] (Dg 66), dated in the 14th year of Vinayâditya Satyâśraya, (694 A. D.). The Chaḷukyas claim to be of the Mânavya-gôtra, sons of Hâritî, nourished by the Seven Mothers the seven mothers of the world,[3] owing their good fortune to Kârttikêya, and subjecting all kings in a moment at the sight of the Boar ensign obtained from Nârâyaṇa. The earliest king here mentioned is Pulikêsi, who performed the horse-sacrifice. His son was Kîrttivarmmâ, who established his fame in Vanavâsi and other foreign territories subdued by his valour. His son was Satyâśraya, who, by defeating Harshavarddhana, the warlike lord of all the north, gained another name of Paramêśvara. His son was Vikramâditya, who by his own effort alone, aided by his intelligence, acquired the proper royal glory of his line. He was victorious over many hostile kings whose battle cries were uttered in various languages. After defeating the king of the Pallavas, who threatened destruction to a family as pure as the rays of the moon,—that is, the Chaḷukyas, who were of the Lunar race,—he seized Kânchî-pura; split the peaks of the pride of the triple mountains Chôḷa, Pâṇḍya and Kêraḷa; and received obeisance from the Kânchi king, who had bowed to no other. His son was Vinayâditya-Satyâśraya, who, by command of his father, put a stop to the overgrown power of Trairâjya Pallava (or Pallava who ruled over three kingdoms), and pleased him by bringing all the countries into peace. The Pallavas Kalabhras Kêralas Haihayas Viḷas Mâḷavas Chôḷas Pâṇḍyas and others were brought into his service equally with the Âḷuvas Gaṅgas and others of old-standing (maulaiḥ). He commands all people, and makes it known, that his camp being at the village of Karanja patra near to Harisha-pura (probably Harihara),—on the application of Âḷuva-Râja, he has granted to Îśânaśarmmâ, son of Mâraśarmmâ and grandson of S'rîśarmma-Sômayâji, the village of Kiṟu-Kâgâmâsi in the Edevoḷal division (bhâga) of the Vanavâsi-maṇḍala. Also some land to the west of Per-Gâgâmasi. The śâsana was written by the great minister for peace and war, Râma-puṇyavallabha.

The Chaḷukyas were superseded by the Râshṭrakûṭas for more than two centuries, but finally recovered their power under Tailapa in 973. In Cl 15, however, we have an inscription of special interest dated 971, in the time of Vikramâditya, the father of Tailapa. Pandarasa, who as we have seen above was of Châḷukya descent, was retained by the Châḷukyas as governor of Kadambaḷige, with the nidhi-nidhâna &c. But there was some see-saw in the overlordship until the Châḷukyas were established again in sole dominion, for Dg 152 above, of later date than the present, shows a Râshṭrakûṭa as overlord. Paudarasa or Pandiyayya therefore kept his place under both.

Dg 114 of 992 belongs to the reign of Tailapa under his title of Âhavamalla. A Sinda chief named Jâtarasa was now governing Kadambaḷige. The nidhi-nidhâna &c. do not appear. In Jl 13, without date, we have Daśavarmma's son Binayita ruling. I have assumed that this is Daśavarmmâ the son of Satyâśraya. Then follow several inscriptions of Jayasimha Jagadêkamalla, who was the son of Daśavarmmâ. In Cl 21, and probably 22, we have Vira-Noṇamba Jagadêkamalla Malla-Dêva-Chôḷa-mahârâja ruling the Rodda, Sîre and other nâḍs in 1027. He was the son of Iruṅgôḷa-Chôḷa-mahârâja, among whose titles are,—lord of Oreyûr-pura (the old Chôḷa capital near Trichinopoly), breaker of the heads of 64 chieftains, Gôvinda-Dêva's (his father's) warrior, gôva of Rodda. In Dg 71, Udayâditya, apparently called the Noḷamba-Pallava-Permmânaḍi-Dêva, is ruling in 1035. Two years later, in Dg 126, Jagadêkamalla Immaḍi-Noḷamba-Pallava-Permmânaḍi is ruling the Kadambaḷige Thousand and several other provinces, together with the nidhi-nidhâna &c. In ? 1041, again, we have in Dg 159 (which is very much defaced) Châḷukya-Gaṅga-Permmânaḍi ruling the Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-six Thousand and some Nâyaka governing Kadambaḷige. Cd 13 is said to be of the time of Jagadêkamalla, but dated in a year that does not fall within his reign. Vijaya-Pâṇḍya was ruling Noḷambavâḍi.

With Dg 124 begin the inscriptions of Trailôkyamalla (Sômêśvara I). In this, Trailôkyamalla Nanni-Noḷamba-Pallava-Permmânaḍi is governing Kadambaḷige in 1044. Hl 65 shows that the emperor was at ? Bandaṇike in 1051, while Nârasiṅgha was ruling Kadambaḷige. Jl 10 describes him as a Pallava and gives him the government of other provinces besides, in 1054. These Dg 153 of 1058 places under Châlukya-Ganga-Permmâḍi. Cd 78 brings in a Raṭṭa named Singana Dêva as ruler in 1060 of Uchchangi, Maṇḍaḷi and other parts, together with the nidhi-nidhâna &c. He has numerous epithets, among which are,—lord of Laṭṭalûr, gôva of Kollipâke, champion over the gôva of Peñjeru, destruction to the Chôḷa and Lâḷa feudatories, a door to the southern region (dakshiṇa-diśâ-kavâṭam), his father-in-law's lion. This last implies that he married the Châḷukya king's daughter. Dg 140 of the same date shows us Trailôkyamalla Châḷukya-Ganga-Permmânaḍi Vikramâditya-Dêva ruling the Gangavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand. He was Trailôkyamalla's son by a Ganga princess, and must be the Châḷukya-Ganga-Permmâḍi above mentioned. Dg 143 and those which follow show us Vishṇuvarddhana-mahârâja Vijayâditya-Dêva ruling the Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand from 1062 to 1066. He was another of the king's sons, by an Eastern Châḷukya princess. Hence he is called the Vengi-maṇḍalêśvara (Mk 29). His residence was at Kampili, which, as before mentioned, was on the Tungabhadrâ, in the north-west of the Bellary district. He is styled (Dg 11) Âhavamalla's warrior, the Châḷukya ruby, his father's garland (daṇḍe) or warder (daṇḍi). Dg 143 was written by Srînandi-paṇḍita, supporter of the Prabhâchandra Jinâlaya. The Udayâditya-Nâyaka mentioned in Dg 11 may be the same as the governor in Dg 71 above. Cd 47 of 1067 shows the same Vijayâditya ruling several provinces, including the Kadambaḷige Thousand, and under him a Pallava prince, apparently his younger brother, named Bachchayya-Nâyaka, who is said to have split the skull of Irmmaḍi-Ghasani. The inscription was engraved by the Rudra sculptor Mahâkâla Brahma, of whose ornamental lettering it is said,—When he can entwine the forms of elephant, lion, parrots and many other shapes so as to shine among the letters, would you madly compete with such a sculptor ? In Dg 133 probably, and in Cd 82 certainly, or in 1071 and 1074, we have Trailôkyamalla Noḷamba-Pallava-Permmâḍi Jayasinga-Dêva in power. He was another of the king's sons, by a Pallava princess.

Hl 3 of 1093 brings us to the time of Tribhuvanamalla (Vikramâditya). Hl 25 describes him as king over .... Magadha Pâñchâla Nêpâla Barbara ...... Karahâṭa ...... Kâśmîra Gurjara Sindhu Draviḷa .... Pâṇḍya-Dêva was ruling under him. (The Pâṇḍyas are treated of separately in a section farther on). In 1101 Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍya-Dêva was ruling the Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand (Dg 151) and continued to do so till 1123 (Cd 34). In 1108 Cl 43 brings up Tribhuvanamalla Malli-Dêva-Chôḷa-mahârâja making a grant. He has titles similar to those of Irungôḷa before mentioned. In 1109, with various high titles, Anantapâlayya was the great minister, and Bammarasa had control of the pannâya of Noḷambavâḍi (Dg 12). In 1111 Mallarasa had the perjjunka of the same (Jl 9). In Dg 149, a grant made at the Koḍanganûr agrahâra in 1113, special praise is given to Ikkuḍôja, "who so well understood how to engrave the different parts of letters, with their head strokes." Could he have had anything to do with preparing the alleged Janamêjaya grants ? (See Intro. Vol. VII). In Dg 3 Vikramâditya is styled the lord of Kuntala, and is said to have subdued the Maru Vanga Anga Kaḷinga Gauḍa Magadha Pâñchâḷa Nêpâḷa Barbhara Saurâshṭra Varâṭa Lâṭa Karahâṭa Chchêdi Kâsmîra Gurjjara Sindhu Draviḷa Ândhra Mâḷava Turushka and other famous kings. He had such confidence in Pâṇḍya that he considered him able alone to break the pride of Chôḷa, to harrass Ândhra, to cause Kaḷinga to fall, to frighten and attack the Anga Vanga and Magadha kings, to conquer Mâḷava in battle, and to trample on the famous Gurjjara. Pâṇḍya's residence was at Beḷtur (Bettur, to the north east of Dâvangere), which was governed by three prabhus (named). In Cd 34 is a mahâ-sâmanta Oddiga or Udayâditya of the Raṇamûrkkha family, Noḷamba's Garuḍa, ruling certain districts.

Dg 1 of 1123 is a grand inscription, containing a most elaborate account of the Châḷukyas from the beginning. They are described as of the Mânavya-gôtra, sons of Hâriti, having a white umbrell and other royal emblems obtained from Kauśika, nourished by the Seven Mothers,[1] having as flags the peacock's tail and lance obtained from Kârttikêya, having the territories of hostile kings brought into subjection in a moment at sight of the Boar crest obtained from Nârâyaṇa, having such distinctive names as samasta-bhuvanâs'raya, sarvvalôkâśraya, Vishṇuvarddhana, Vijayâditya, and so forth; devouring the wealth of the Nalas, seizing the power of the Durjjayas,[2] destroying the pride of the great Kadambas, subduing the Mauryyas, uprooting the Râshṭrakûtas, swallowing up the wealth of the Kaḷachuris. One less than sixty Châḷukya kings having governed the kingdom from the city of Ayôdhyâ and passed away, sixteen kings of that line ruled the South. The Châḷukya fortunes were then obstructed by wicked people until Jayasimha arose, who renewed the achievements of the early rulers, subdued the Râshṭrakûṭa king Indra, the son of Kṛishṇa, in whose army were eight hundred elephants, consumed five hundred other kings, and restored the Châḷukya family to prosperity. His son was Raṇarâga, whose son was Puḷakêśi, lord of Vâtâpi-puri (Bâdâmi), who performed the horse-sacrifice and bestowed gifts so liberally on the officiating priests that at the recollecteon of them, "even now we feel the hair on our bodies stand erect through pleasure." His son Kîrttivarmmâ destroyed the Nalas, expelled the Mauryyas, and cut down the great Kadambas. His younger brother Maṅgalîsa succeeded him, and crossing the sea by bridges of boats, plundered the island of Rêvatî (to the north of Goa), and subdued the Kalachchuris. He had acted as the guardian of his elder brother's son Satyâsraya while a minor, and on his becoming of age restored to him the kingdom of which he was the heir,—"for who of the Châḷukyas would deviate from the path of righteousness?" Satyâśraya subdued the great king Harsha, elsewhere called Harshavarddhana, the king of all the north.[3] Satyâśraya's son was Tidamari, whose son was Âdityavarmmâ. His son was Vikramâditya, whose son was Yuddhamalla, whose son was Vijayâditya, who in single combat slew the champions of four countries. His son was Vikramâditya, whose son was Kirttivarmmâ, "by whom the fortune of the Châḷukya kingdom became impeded in the earth". Vikramâditya's brother was? Bhîma, whose son was Kirttivarmmâ, "who thrust out the wicked people". His son was Taila, whose son was Vikramâditya, whose son was Bhîma. His son was the noble Ayyaṇa, "the special fortune of whose line, as great as that of her own line, was enshrined in the daughter of Kṛishṇa".[4] Their son was Vikramâditya, who married Bontha-Dêvî, daughter of the Chêdi king Lakshmaṇa. Their son was Taila, who cut down the two war pillars (raṇa-stambhau) that had been erected by the Râshṭrakûṭa king Karkara, and as the original Boar raised up the Earth which had been submerged in the ocean, so raised up the fortunes of the Châḷukya family which had been submerged by the frauds of the Râshṭrakûṭas. He then married Jâkabbâ, daughter of the Raṭṭa or Râshṭrakûṭa king, and they had the sons Satyâśraya and Daśavarmmâ. The latter had for wife Bhâgyavati, and their son was Vikramâditya, who succeeded his jyêshṭha-pituḥ (noble father or? uncle) on the throne. His younger brother Jagadêkamalla Jayasimha followed. His son was Âhavamalla, whose glory drove away the Mâḷava and Chôḷa kings, as well as the great Kanyâkubja king, and who uprooted . . . . the son of Antaka, and conquered the Fish-bannered (i. e. Pâṇḍya). His son was Bhuvanaikamalla, whose younger brother was Vikramâditya Tribhuvanamalla. He set forth in search of great wealth, together with his brother, a fine army, and the son of his friend, and arrived through manifold dangers at the shore of the ocean.[5]

[1] These are connected with Siva's son Kârttikêya, and are identified with the Pleiades.

[2] The Nalas are mentioned in other inscriptions, and Dr. Fleet says that Nalavâḍi was probably in the direction of Bellary and Karnûl (Kan. Dyn., 282). The Durjjayas, if meant for the name of a people, are not known from any other source, unless the Jyâyas mentioned in the Tâḷagunda pillar inscription (Sk 176, Vol. VII) can be supposed to throw any light on the matter.

[3] See above, p. 10.

[4] The meaning probably is that he married the daughter of the Râshṭrakûṭa king Kṛishṇa, and the hopes of the Châḷukyas depended on the issue of this union.

[5] Such seems to the meaning, but there are many gaps in the verse owing to words being defaced.

He, (with the usual Châḷukya titles), Tribhuvanamalla-Vallabha-Narêndra-Dêva, being in good health, commands all who are concerned,—you, the râshṭra-pati, vishaya-pati, grâma-kûṭaka, âyuktaka, niyuktaka, adhikârika, mahattara and all others,—that the royal genealogy (râjâvaḷi) being completed (samâpta) by us,—at the conclusion of many gifts at the time of dakshiṇâ, grants were made of two tanks for the god Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍyêśvara set up by Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍya. The grant was also made known to the guru of Dravidâditya-daṇḍanâyaka, resident of Jayantî-pura (Banavâsi), "to the control of which he had appointed himself by his own victory." Beḷtûr, the locality of one of the tanks, is said to be in the Kadamba Ten Thousand, which may perhaps be taken as a clue to the situation of the Kadambaḷige Thousand, so often mentioned above. Among the rights conveyed were the nidhi-nidhâna-nikshêpa, which have previously been remarked upon.

Dg 2 repeats the list of Vikramâditya's conquests as given above in connection with Dg 3. Râya-Pâṇḍya was now (1124) ruling the Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand and the Sântaḷige Thousand, having his residence at Beḷtûr. He must be the same as the Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍya of Dg 155, who also had the control of the numerous agrahâras of Banavase-nâḍ, and of the nidhi-nidhâna &c. This inscription was engraved by Ikkuḍâchâri, to whom attention has already been drawn above. He is described as the son of the Sarasvati-gaṇa-dâsi Chengôja, and built two temples, besides inscribing the grants. In Hk 68 we have a Gangarasa, with all the Ganga titles, as governor of the Kukkavâḍi Three Hundred. Dg 90 attributes mighty achievements to Pâṇḍya. His minister was Sûryya, whose wife made grants for a Jain temple. A list of Jaina gurus is incidentally given, namely, Samantabhadra, Vâdirâja, Ajitasêna, Mallishêna-Maladhâri, S'rîpâla, with stock descriptions of each.

Dg 4 brings us to Bhûlôkamalla. Under him Vîra-Pâṇḍya was ruling Noḷambavâḍi, having his residence in the Uchchangi fort. Dg 61 goes on to the time of Jagadêkamalla, who is called in Dg 85 the Kuntala-Râya and said to have made the Chôl-nela or Chôḷa country an âḷ-nela or servant country, and to have attacked Hoysaḷa and captured his elephant. This would be in the time of the Hoysaḷa king Nârasimha I. Dg 168 says that Vîra-Pâṇḍya, ruling Noḷambavâḍi, subdued Male and gave it to the Châḷukya king.

Dg 41 contains a genealogy of the Châḷukyas and explains the origin of their name. From the navel of Vishṇu arose a white lotus, and from the heart (or mind) of Brahma who was born from that lotus, sprang the famous Harîta, the progenitor of the family. His son was Hârîta, in the water of whose chuḷuka (waterpot, or hand hollowed to hold water)[1] was miraculously born Sattima with a drawn sword. From that Satyâśraya did this Châḷukya royal line rule with true glory over Kuntala. After many renowned kings had so ruled, there arose Tailapa, who subdued the earth. His son was Sattima, whose son was Vikrama, whose younger brothers were Ayyaṇa and Jayasiṃha. The son of the latter was Trailôkyamalla Âhavamalla, whose son was Sômêśvara, whose younger brother was the victorious Vikramânka. His son, called Sarvvajña (omniscient), was Sôma Bhûlôkamalla, whose son was Permma Jagadêkamalla. Then follows a detailed genealogy of the Pâṇḍyas, which will be noticed under that head. Vîra-Pâṇḍya was still (1148) ruling Noḷambavâḍi. The poetry of the śâsana was composed by his preceptor Madhusûdana, and written by the minister for peace and war, S'ankara.

Dg 35 brings us down to the time of Bijjala. This also contains the Châḷukya genealogy as follows :—Taila delivered the earth out of the hands of the Râshṭrakûṭas and re-established the Châ-

[1] This is given as the derivation of Chaḷukya, but is evidently a story made up from the name. As I have stated elsewhere (Ind. Ant. VIII, 23; Mys. Gaz. 1, 320) Chaḷukya bears a suggestive resemblance to Seleukeia, and their inveterate antagonists the Pallavas being by origin Pahlavas or Parthians, these two families may represent the Seleucidæ and Arsacidæ of classic history.

ḷukyas in power. His son (not named) then ruled, and after that his younger brother's son Vikramâṅka, whose younger brother Ayyaṇayya followed, and then his younger brother Jayasiṃha. This king's son Âhavamalla came next, and then his son Sôyi-Dêva. His younger brother was Vikrama, who broke his sword on the Magadha king's head, threaded Choḷa's two sides on his spear, fixed his blade across the inside of Nêpâḷa's mouth, and gained possession of the whole circle of the earth. His son was Bhûlôkamalla, whose son was Jagadêkamalla, who captured every king great and small of Mâḷava, reduced the Pallava territory to submission, forced the Lâṭa king to do obeisance, and drove Kaḷinga into tears His younger brother was Nûrmmaḍi Taila, in whose time was the king Bijjaḷa, who subdued the earth from the southern ocean to the northern Châḷukya boundary. Kasapayya was governing the Banavâse Twelve Thousand, and Sôma the manneya of the Nâgarakhaṇḍa Seventy. He was a Kadamba. Dg 43 gives a similar account of Jagadêkamalla, and says that at that time was the king Bijjaḷa. Pâṇḍya was governing Noḷambavâḍi, and then follows an interesting genealogy of the Sindas, which will be noticed under that head.

Cd 33 of 1187 shows Tribhuvanamalla in the residence of Jayantî-pura (Banavâsi). But the Châḷukya power was now at the last stage. Hk 56 merely says that they ruled and were followed by the Kaḷachuryya king Bijjaṇa.

Gangas.

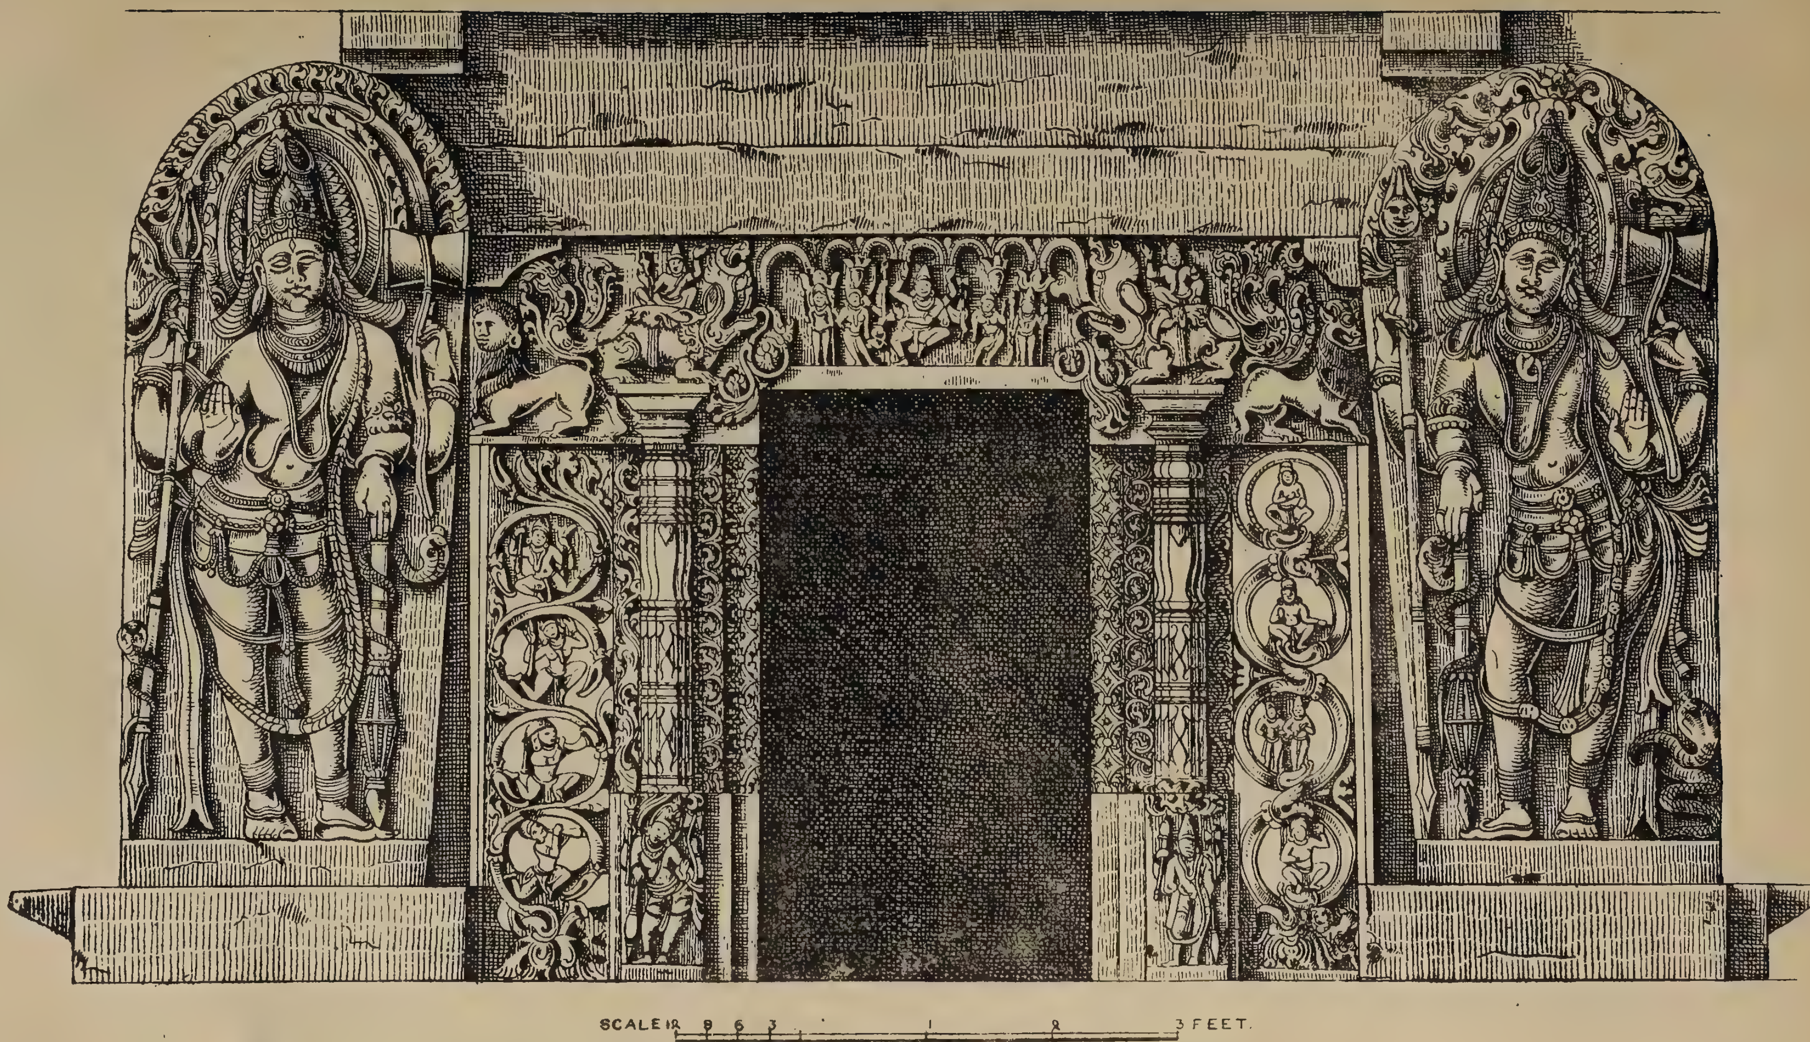

Dg 119 mentions Chandi.... of the Ganga family as ruling [Sul]gal in 930. His servant Alliga became kîḷ-gunthe, or was buried under him (see above, p. 8). Cd 24, which is engraved in large characters on a cliff to the west of Chitaldroog, records a grant of Sulgal by Chandiyammarasa, no doubt the same. In Hk 68 a Gaṅgarasa, with all the Gaṅga titles, was ruling the Kukkavâḍi Three hundred in 1126. Hk 56 mentions Vaijarasa, whose son was Bammarasa, whose son was Hariparasa, whose son was Bammarasa, as masters of Emmeganûr. The last made a grant in 1220. In addition to the usual Gaṅga titles, they have that of kaṇṇambi-nâtha, which connects them with the Âsandi family already brought to notice in Vol. VI (Intro. p. 10), where this title is accounted for.

Sindas.

An account of the Sindas, who gave their name to Sindavâḍi, will be found in the Shimoga volume, Part I, (Vol VII, Intro. p. 31). The story of their origin is here repeated in Dg 43 with some additional particulars. From the union of Siva and Sindhu (the name of the river Indus) was born a son, to whom Bhava (S'iva) with affection gave the name Saindhava, with the king of the serpents as his guardian. Saying that unless his son drank tigress's milk he would not become brave, S'iva created a tigress whose milk the child drank and grew in the world. Moreover Paramêsvara directed the goddess Mâlatî to aid his son in war, and gave him a second name of Niḍudôḷ-Sinda. Being told that Karahâṭa the yôga-pîṭha was his abode, he took possession of it, driving out the kings that were there. Among his titles are,—mahâ-maṇḍalêsvara, lord of Karahâṭa-pura, obtainer of a boon from the goddess Mâlatî, distinguished by the blue flag (nîla-dhvaja), of the Phaṇirâja-vaṃśa (the race of the king of serpents), having the tiger and deer crest. He ruled over many countries included in the Karahâṭa Four Thousand.[1]

After many of his line had ruled, there arose in it Piriya-Chaṭṭarasa, whose wife was Dôrabarasi. Their son was Jôgarasa, whose son was Chaṭṭarasa. After him came Mâcharasa or Mâchi-Dêva, whose queen was Chaṭṭala-Dêvî. His younger brother was Mallí-Dêva, whose younger brother was Ayharasa, whose son was Râyarasa. Râya's wife was Bâchala-Dêvî, and their son was Îśvara-Dêva. At his coronation the sound of the drums and conchs roused up Uragêndra (the king of the serpents), who saying, "This is a glorification of my line: ho! I must see this,"—came there in haste. S'iva also came, with Gangâ and Pârvvatî, and Gaṇêśa, and blessed the king. The blessing of Vishṇu is farther invoked. With a signet ring of the serpent-jewel on his hand, with his powerful arms and body, his sword and beard, this Sinda king Iśvara appeared to his enemies like a terrible dragon, ready to swallow them up. The names of the districts he was ruling are unfortunately defaced, but his residence was at Haḷḷavûru on the bank of the Tungabhadrâ. This was the place at which the Hoysaḷa king Ballâla II is often said to be residing later on (see Vol. V, Intro. p. 22), called also Vijayasamudra, and must be the Hulloor of the maps, in Râṇi-Bennûr taluq.

Hk 23 mentions Kerasiga Nanniya-Sinda in 968, and Dg 114 Mulgunda-Sinda Jâtarasa in 992. Both these are earlier than any given in Vol. VII. Dg 45 is of the time of Malli-Dêvarasa. Jl 12 introduces Sindharasa, without any other name. In Dg 61 we have Aiharasa, his son-in-law Mâcharasa, and his younger brothers Mallarasa and Kâma in 1143, and Haḷḷavûr Mâcharasa's grandson Iśvara-Dêvarasa in 1172.

Kalachuryas.

The Kalachurya inscriptions open with Dg 84 of 1161, with the reign of Tribhuvanamalla-Bijjaṇa-Dêva. Under him was Sênâpati, the general whom we shall see below claimed such an exalted position with regard to the Pâṇḍyas. His wife Mahadêvi here makes a grant. Dg 42 contains an account of the origin of the Kalachuryas. A certain Brâhmaṇi girl conceived by S'iva in a dream, and bore a son Kṛishṇa. He slew in Kâlanjara[1] an evil-minded king who was a cannibal and followed the calling of a barber, and took possession of the Nine-lakh Dahaḷa country. After many kings of his line had ruled there, Kannama-Dêva appeared, who had two sons, Râja and Bijjaḷa; the latter being the elder. But the younger brother had four sons, Ammugi, S'ankha-varmmâ, Kannara and Jôgama. The first and last of these ruled in succession, and Talikâḍa Jôgama, as he is here called, had a son Permmâḍi, whose son was Bijjaḷa-Dêva. His birth plunged the wives of the Yavanas into a world of distress, and he acquired by capture and purchase hosts of elephants and horses. Among his titles are,—mahârâjâdhirâja, lord of Kâlanjara-pura, having the flag of a golden bull, and the sounds of the ḍamaraka and tûryya, a sun to the lotus the Kalachuri-kula, Sanivâra-siddhi, Giridurggamalla, and Nissankamalla. His minister was Kasapayya-Nâyaka, whose brother-in-law Barmmarasa, son of Munjala-Dêva of the Sagarânvaya, mounted on his single horse, routed the army of Poysaḷa and drove them into the Tungabhadrâ. He was ruling the Banavâsi Twelve Thousand when one day a discourse took place on dharmma, and he was thereby induced to make some grant at Harihara. Dg 33 shows the minister Duggarasa governing the Banavâsi province in 1172.

Dg 44 describes Bijjaṇa as a thunderbolt to the Chôḷa king, a submarine fire to the ocean Simhaḷa, a wild-fire to the forest Mâḷava, a gale to the cloud Gurjjara, a lion to the rutting elephant Nêpâḷa, and a sword in smiting off the crown of Lâṭa. It goes on to say that his younger brother was Mailugi-Dêva, and his grandson Kali-Dêva. Sôvi-Dêva, known as Râya-Murâri, succeeded him on the throne, whose younger brother was Mailugi. Nissankamalla Sankama-Dêva next came to the throne and was ruling from Kalyâṇa. His minister was Kavaṇayya-daṇḍanâyaka, whose descent and family are given. He had the titles gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra and gaṇḍara-gôva. This great minister and general, master over seventy two officials, uprooter of Velunâḍ-Chôḷeya, displacer of Hoysaṇa, terrifier of Koṅkaṇa,—after making a victorious expedition to the South, came and pitched his camp in ? Bettavur in the Banavâsi country. Much of the rest is effaced, but Mâdêva-daṇḍanâyaka, a subordinate of Pâṇḍya, made a grant for the god Harihara. Hk 4 and 56 merely mention Bijjaṇa as the successor of the Châḷukyas.

Pândyas.

The Pâṇḍyas of Uchchaṅgi were an interesting and important family, of whom some account has already been given in the Shimoga volume, Part I, (Vol. VII, Intro. p. 26). From that it appeared that one branch were rulers of Hayve in the Koṅkaṇa, with their capital at Sisugali. The Pâṇḍya king in 1113 claims to be lord of Gôkarṇa-pura, and protector of the Koṅkaṇa-râshṭra. On the conquest of the Seven Koṅkaṇas by the Châḷukya prince Jayasimha, the Pâṇḍyas became identified with Uchchangi, a celebrated hill fort in the south-west of the Bellary District, just over the Mysore border near Dâvangere.

In the present volume the fullest account of the Pâṇḍyas is contained in Dg 41, 39, 40, and 5, and Hk 56. The first of these traces their origin to Mangaya or Aditya-Dêva of the Yâdava branch of the Lunar race. From him sprang Pâṇḍya, to whom Chêdi-Râja was the son, who was so called from subduing the Chêdi[1] kings. His son was Paḷamaṇḍa-Pâṇḍya, whose son was Irukavêla. His son was Râja-Pâṇḍya, of whom it is mysteriously said that he was "reputed as having a fortune four inches higher." His wife was Sôvala-Dêvî, daughter of Billava-Râya, and younger sister of Vikramâditya. Their eldest son was Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya, who had as his preceptor the learned Madhusûdana. The other sons were Vîra-Pâṇḍya, Paḷamâṇḍa, and Kâma-Dêva. Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya's son was Tailapa. Vîra-Pâṇḍya had two wives,—Gaṅgâ-Dêvî, daughter of the great minister Âditya-daṇḍanâtha, and Vijayâ-Dêvî, younger sister of king Vikramâditya. From his breaking down the pride of mighty enemies he received the name Jagadêkamalla. He made the Ganga Kaḷinga Vanga Maru Gûrjjara Kêraḷa Chêra Chôḷa Gauḍa Anga Varâṭa Lâṭa Khasa Parbara Kôsaḷa Puṇḍra Pârasi Kongaṇa Konga Konkaṇa Kuru Prathara Andhra Turushka and Magadha kings tremble.

Dg 39 says that in the Yâdava race,—which included Haihaya and many other emperors, and in which Vishṇu himself became incarnate (as Kṛishṇa),—Chêdi-Râja was for a long time conspicuous. Though king over the whole circle of the earth, he was permanently partial to the Pâṇḍya country, and so became famous by the name of Pâṇḍya. The blows from his bracelets had resounded on the conch-shell on the top of Paurandara's head, and his fish crest was set up on great rocks on the chief mountains.[2] His son was Paḷanta, who secured their kingdoms to both the Châḷukya and Chôḷa kings His son was Irukkavêla, whose son was Râya-Pâṇḍya, whose wife was Sôma-Dêvi, and she gave birth to Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya, Vîra-Pâṇḍya and Nigaḷaṅkamalla Vijaya-Pâṇḍya or Kâma.

Hk 56 says that at the rise of the Kaḷachurya king Bijjaṇa, Pallatta-Pâṇḍya was ruling. After him came Phoṇḍi-Pâṇḍya, after whom was .. ... and then Râya-Pâṇḍya. After him was Noḷeya-Pâṇḍya, whose son was Kâma, whose son was .. ..., in whose time they were subdued by the Hoysaḷas. This seems to be a different branch.

The general distinctive titles of the Pâṇḍyas are,--mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, lord of Kânchî-pura,[3] champion in cutting on both sides (parichchêdi-gaṇḍa),[4] defeater of the designs of Râjiga-Chôḷa,—and they ruled as viceroys of the Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-six Thousand.

The earliest Pâṇḍya inscription in this volume is Mk 26 of 1032, but the name is defaced. From Hk 25 we have Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍya ruling Noḷambavâḍi and the Ballakunde Three

[1] Bandelkhand.—The Kaḷachuryas were rulers of Chêdi, and their inscriptions in the north are dated in the Chêdi or Kalachuri era, which began in 249 A. D. (as determined by Dr. Kielhorn, Ep. Ind. II, 299).

[2] The fish crest is an emblem of the Pâṇḍyas of Madura in the south.

[3] This seems to be adopted in consequence of their defeat of the Chôḷas. But in two places (Dg 139, 149) we have lord of Kuḷumba-pura instead.

[4] Perhaps a covert allusion to the defeat of the Chêdi kings.

Hundred under the Châḷukya emperor Tribhuvanamalla, whose right hand he is said to be in Dg 139 and others. Such was the emperor's confidence in him, says Dg 3, that he was considered sufficient by himself to break the pride of Chôḷa, harrass Andhra, upset Kaḷinga, frighten and attack the Aṅga Vanga and Magadha kings, conquer Mâlava, and trample on Gurjjara,—and by his valour he brought the whole earth encompassed by the four oceans into subjection to king Vikrama. His residence was at Beḷtur (Bettur, near Dâvangere on the north east). Dg 155 shows him in 1124 ruling the Sântaḷige Thousand and various agrahâras in Banavâsi-nâḍ, as well as Noḷambavâḍi, and the nidhi-nidhâna &c., but calls him Tribhuvanamalla-Vîra-Noḷamba-Pallava-Permmânaḍi-Dêva's younger brother. This Tribhuvanamalla-Vîra-Noḷamba-Pallava has the same titles as the Pâṇḍyas, and is described as a bee at the feet of the Châḷukya emperor Tribhuvanamalla. I think he must be identified with this emperor's younger brother Jayasimha, who we have seen above (under the Châḷukyas) had the names Trailôkyamalla-Noḷamba-Pallava-Permmâḍi. He was then under his father Trailôkyamalla, but was now under his elder brother Tribhuvanamalla ; hence the dfference in the designations. But how Pâṇḍya can claim to be a brother is not evident, unless perhaps it is intended in a complimentary sense as betokening a close intimacy between this Châḷukya-Pallava prince and Pâṇḍya.

With Dg 2 we come to Tribhuvanamalla-Râya-Pâṇḍya, who continued to rule Noḷambavâḍi and Sântaḷige from Beḷtur. A grant was made by a subordinate for the god Vâsudêva of Râyarâja-Bannalûr, set up in the paḍevîḍu of Parichchêdi-gaṇḍa Pallava-Râya, ruler of Kuṛungudi. In Hk 68 a Gangarasa, with all the Ganga titles, appears ruling the Kukkuvâḍi Three Hundred under him. In Dg 90 we have two ministers and generals, Sûryya and Aditya, sons of Sênavara.[1] Dg 77 describes Râya-Pâṇḍya as a confounder of the Chôḷa king, destroyer of Nêpâḷa, a warrior to Kaḷinga, uprooter of the unsubmissive Singhaḷa, Chyêndra, Singha and Kauḷûta kings. His chief queen was Sôvala-Dêvi, who on becoming his consort obtained hero wifehood, and on bearing three sons obtained hero motherhood.

Dg 4 brings us to Vîra-Pâṇḍya, ruling Noḷambavâḍi from the Uchchangi fort. Dg 168 says he subdued Male and gave it to the ornament of the Châḷukyas. Dg 41 is an elaborate eulogy of the Pâṇḍyas, well composed by Madhusûdana, the preceptor of Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya. The genealogical details it supplies have already been extracted above at the beginning of this section. He represents Vîra-Pâṇḍya as ruling Noḷambavâḍi and many other countries kumâra-vṛittiyinda, which may mean as a minor or from boyhood. At the time of a solar eclipse in 1148 he made great gifts at the confluence of the Tungabhadrâ and Haridrâ.[2]

Dg 115 carries us on to Vijaya-Pâṇḍya. Down to 1184 he seems free from any overlord. This was the period when the Châḷukya power was declining and the Kaḷachuryas were gaining the succession. Some chief under him is described as destroyer of Toṇḍa, glory of the Bâya-kula, ruling the kingdom of Osana and other places. Dg 85 informed us of a Sênâpati-daṇḍanâtha, a son of Sûryyâṇḍa-nâtha and the soul of Vîra-Pâṇḍya's city.[3] In Dg 84 he puts forward extraordinary pretensions. To the Lakshmî the Pâṇḍya kingdom, and in the rank of general, he was the chief, it says, in promoting a peaceful succession. As for his experience, it was he who chose from among the sons of the Pâṇḍya king, from the former Palatta downwards, established the king and made the kingdom strong. Without him they were ciphers (pûjya)! Dg 5 says that the points of Vijaya-Pâṇḍya's crown were formed of separate large sapphires, and his arms adorned with golden bracelets, that he subdued in mere sport the Seven Konkanas, set up in the Kanaka mountain a pillar of victory with the fish crest, had a treasury filled with jewels set with pearls from the Tâmraparṇṇî, and had a pleasure-house

1 For Sênavaras see Vols. VI and VII. 2 Cf. Janamêjaya grants, Vol. VII. 3 His descent is given in Dg, 86.

among the sandal trees on the slopes of the Malaya mountain. His chief minister Kumâra-Vijaya-Permmâdi-daṇḍanâtha made a grant in 1168 of Kûḍalûr to the 104 Brahmans, for the god Harihara (Dg 39). In Dg 32 it is said that he received the title of Kumâra (or prince) from his master as a reward for his unbounded fidelity. The next year the king, after full inquiry, restored the lands of the god Avimuktêśvara which had been formerly set up by those on the battle-field in the reign (or kingdom) of Kiḷvogoḍeyarasa-Dêva, in the old royal city Hiriya Bêtûr (Dg 6). In 1171 the Kadamba prince Nâgatiyarasa and his sons and other relatives granted for the god S'ankara-Nârâyaṇa (that is, Harihara) the dues payable to them from the Kûḍalûr agrahâra and its hamlet Belvâḍi (Dg 32). From Cd 13 there are several inscriptions in which Udayâditya or Oddiga appears ruling the Haḍuvagere Five Hundred and other districts, He is called Noḷamba's Garuḍa and light of the Raṇamûrkkha-kula. In Cd 36 his son Kâmayya is ruling from Bemmattanûr (the old name of Chitaldroog).[1]

In Hk 4 and 56 we find the Pâṇḍya-nâḍ under the Hoysaḷas, who it says had thrashed the Pâṇḍya kings on the field of battle. Some grants were made in 1220 at Emmeganûr, which it appears belonged to Vaijarasa, whose son was Bammarasa, whose son was Hariparasa,[2] whose son was Bammarasa. They had all, it says, rendered good service to the former rulers.[3]

The following is a table of the Pâṇḍyas of Uchchangi, putting together as well as can be made out the information from the various inscriptions in this and previous volumes :—

[1] In Cd 34 it looks like Chimmachanûr. [2] These were Gangas, as we have seen in connection with Asandi (Vol. VI).
[3] Hk 43 of 1573 says that Emmeganûr had long been in ruins.

Chôlas.

The Chôḷas here represented are not those of the main line, but a branch, established in the north-east of the Mysore country, in connection with Niḍugal and neighbouring parts.

In Cl 16 we have the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Irungôḷa-Chôḷa-mahârâja ruling in 1106. Cl 21 shows the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Tribhuvanamalla-Malli-Dêva-Chôḷa-mahârâja ruling in 1108 under the Châḷukya emperor Tribhuvanamalla. He has the titles,—lord of Oreyûr-pura (the old Chôḷa capital, now known as Warriore, near Trichinopoly), crest-jewel of the Kalikâla-Chôḷa-kula, Gôva of Rodda, Nigalankamalla. Hr 30 is a memorial of his daḷavâyi or chief of the army. Cl 21 of 1147 calls him Vîra-Noṇamba-Jagadêkamalla-Malla-Dêva-Chôḷa-mahârâja, and he was ruling the Rodda, Sîre, Haṟuve and Kaniyakal nâḍs under the Châḷukya king Jagadêkamalla. He is said to be the son of Irungôḷa-Chôḷa-mahârâja, who was himself apparently the son of Gôvinda-Dêva. He also has the title,—the champion who had taken the heads of 64 chieftains.

In Mk 23 is a Gôvinda-Râya in 1207, and in Hr 37 we have Irungôḷa-Dêva, with the title Dânava-Murâri, ruling in Niḍu (the existing Niḍugal, in Pâvagada taluq) in 1247. Mk 20 of ?1278 tells us that Gôvinda was the foremost of the Solar line (to which the Chôḷas belonged). His son was Irungôḷa, who ruled . . . . with the Heddore as his boundary. His son was Bhôga, to whom and to Bijjala-Dêvi was born Bamma. On his obtaining the crown, he took under his protection Rodda, Kaniyakal and Sîra-nâḍ, and farther attracted to himself several foreign parts, including Noṇamba-vâḍi and Râmaḍi. His minister was Bîcha, who built an impregnable line of fortifications connecting the fort of Hâniya[1] and the fort of Niḍugal. Hearing of this, Pallava shook, Andhra became as if blind, Karṇṇâṭa was scared, the Anga and Vanga kings . . . . , Mâḷava turned his back and got into a hole, Yâdava trembled lest he should made a servant. Such was the security created, that trouble about military exercises and schemes for repelling an enemy became unnecessary. Mk 24 gives us the names of Bomma-Dêva's four sons, namely, Bijjaṇa, Baira, Irungôḷa, and Bavantiga.

At a later period, in the time of Dêva-Râya of Vijayanagar, about 1410, Hl 28 informs as that Gôpa-chamûpa was ruling the great Niḍugal hill-fort. And in Hl 22 of 1554 we have, under Sadâ-śiva-Râya, a Pâpaidêva Chôla-mahâ-arasu, son of Vangala-Râya and grandson of Manubola-Aubhala-Râja, of the Sûrya-vams'a, ruling the Râyadurga kingdom.

Hoysalas.

The Hoysaḷa inscriptions begin from the time of Ballâḷa II. In Cd 23 it appears that his son Nârasinga-Dêva was associated with him in the government in 1205. A Pallava prince named Mâchi-Dêva had charge of the Hoḷalakere-nâḍ and the Honkunda Thirty. Hk 124 is very much defaced, but a Ballâḷa-Nalli-Seṭṭi, one of the mummuri-daṇḍas of the Five hundred svâmis of Ayyâ-vaḷe, was superintendent of the warehouses (maligegadhishṭâyaka) of Uchchangi, the head-jewel of the Noṇambavâḍi-nâḍ, and built a temple of Dêmêśvara in the name of his father. Hk 13 and 14 represent the king, with his queen Padma-Dêvi and their son Nârasimha-dêva, as ruling together in 1210, which confirms what has been said above regarding the latter.[2] Cd 79 shows the mahâ-vaḍḍa-byavahâri, the râja-s'rêshṭhi Malliyôgapa of the Kamme-kula, building a temple in the name of his father. In Hk 2 Ballâḷa is called the tiger king, gaṇḍa-bhêruṇḍa, setter up of Pâṇḍya-Râya, hunter of elephants. His minister Sôme-daṇṇâyaka, the senior Ballâḷa-daṇṇâyaka, was governing in Bemmatûr-paṭṭaṇa (Chitaldroog). Mk 12 mentions his capture of the Hâneya fort and founding of a city named Vijayagiri. The former is on the Brahmagiri where the Aśôka edicts were found. On the death of Honnakka-nâyakitti, mother of Halivâna-sâvanta, a nâyakitti named Honni gave her head to the hook. This seems to refer to the hook-swinging festival (see note on p. 91 of Translations), now prohibited, and must be another case of self-sacrifice, of which so many instances have come to light in former inscriptions, showing the existence of a regalar custom for devoted friends to immolate themselves in accordance with a vow previously taken that they would not survive their friend or patron. Hk 4 shows Aṇṇamarasa governing Hoḷalakere in 1217. In Dg 105 we are introduced to the queen Abhinava-Kêtala-Dêvi, who directed the establishment of a Wednesday fair at Kundavâḍa, reckoned to be the southern Saurâshṭra.

Hk 56 of 1220 brings us to the reign of Nârasimha II. The inscription begins by referring to the rule of the Châḷukyas and their being succeeded by the Kaḷachurya Bijjaṇa. At his rise the Pâṇḍyas were governing Noṇambavâḍi. But the Hoysaḷa king vîra-Ballâḷa thrashed them on the field of battle and took possession of Noṇambavâḍi. Then follow praises of Emmaganûr in Pâṇḍya-nâḍ, and of various persons in it, including two brothers named Râghava and S'ankara, who apparently were Noḷambas and officers of the palace. Some grants were made for a god at the time of an eclipse of the sun by these and others. Also the Ganga prince Bammarasa, who had the title kaṇṇambi,[1] is said to have previously made a grant for the same.

Dg 25 of 1224 is an elaborate and important inscription giving an account of the erection of the Harihara temple at Harihara. Some saying that beside Hari (Vishṇu) there is no god in the earth, and some saying that beside Hara (S'iva) there is no god in the earth,—in order to remove the doubts of mankind, they assumed in Kûḍalûr the one form of Harihara. The celebrated S'iva took the form of Vishṇu, and Vishṇu took the great and famous form of S'iva, in order that the saying of the Vêda (that they are one) might be fully established, and they became manifest in the single form Harihara. After this prologue an elaborate account follows of the origin and rise of the Hoysaḷas, in accordance with what is already known from numerous other inscriptions (see especially Vol. V, Intro.). Of Vishṇuvarddhana it is said that when like a jaṭṭiga (or wrestler) Biṭṭiga (another of his names) marched forth to war, Kanchi turned its back, Kongu at once gave in, the great Virâṭa-kôṭe cried out, Koyatûr was tossed about and ruined, the famous Chakragoṭṭa gave a pledge (of submission), the Seven Konkaṇas cast away their weapons and plunged into the sea. Of Ballâḷa II it is said that though he came with as many as 200,000 infantry (sutthaṇeyar) armed with thunderbolts, and 12,000 cavalry, conspicuous with high saddles and jewelled breast-plates, Ballâḷa-Râya on his one elephant charged the Sêvuṇa king's army, put them to flight and slaughtered them from Soraṭûr to the bank of the Krishṇavêṇi river. When a host of hostile kings combined against him, he suddenly besieged and took the forts (situated) within Erambarage (Yelburga in the Nizam's Dominions), Virâṭana-kôṭe (Hânugal), Gutti, Beḷḷiṭṭage, Raṭṭapaḷḷi, Soraṭûr and Kurugôḍ (places in the Bellary and Dharwar districts). His son by Padmala-Dêvi was Nârasimha II, of whom it is said that his victories cannot be counted as one, two, and three. The Sêvuṇas coming against him, died of vexation. He slew first of all Vikramapâla and Pâvusa (apparently their generals) in one quarter, then in another quarter made Kâdava-Râya, Magara and the Pâṇḍya king roll on the ground and captured their elephants; being pleased with Chôḷa, placed him before him and bound the crown upon him; and finally set up a pillar of victory in Sêtu (Râmêśvara). When he, a lion to the elephant Adiyama, a thunderbolt to the rock Pâṇḍya, destroyer of the demon Kâḍava-Râya, uprooter of Makara-Râya's kingdom, setter up of Chôḷa-Râya's kingdom,—surrounded by a host of great chieftains, generals, feudatories and women, was in his own royal city Dôrasamudra,—his chief minister was Pôlâḷva-Dêva, who had the title tolagada-kamba (unshaken pillar). He belonged to Nâranapura in the Andhra country. His praises are set forth at great length. In the council, he was the tongue, the other councillors being like statues ; in war he was a shield against the four-fold armies of the southern king. As among kings Nârasimha was the first, having by his bravery defeated Bâṇôdara there, so among councillors Pôlâḷava was the first, having guarded the whole of the Hoysaḷa empire here. Can farther praise be added, it says, quoting the proverbial saying—After taking milk, can anything else be taken ? He caused the temple of the god Harihara to be made, adorned with 115 golden kalaśas. A description is given of its beauties ; and how he was divinely directed to build it, which had never been done by any of the great kings of old. Hermmâḍi-Râya had wanted to do it previously, but was stopped by the god in a dream. Pôlâḷva having completed the temple, made a grant of Bânavaḷḷi to the 104 Brahmans of the agrahâra, and built there a temple of Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa. He is also said to have composed a Hari-charita in shaṭpadi metre.

Hk 104 of 1228 belongs to this reign but is attributed to Ballâḷa II, who seems to have been a favourite with the merchants. A grant was made by a mahâ-nâḷprabhu of Sirâlamallige and other places, who is described as the lineally descended âchâryya of the Harihara, Hiraṇyagarbha and other the five hundred systems praised in all worlds, head-jewel in Jambu-dvîpa of the Five hundred svâmis and the seven and a half and eleven and a half (? castes).

Jl 33 of 1235 brings us to the reign of Sômêśvara. He is said to have marched to the Chôḷa-Pâṇḍya kingdom and to be residing in . . . . samudra. Hk 121 is one of those Hoysala inscriptions which are expressed in such a way as to make it appear as if each king in succession was presently ruling. Nalla-Seṭṭi, also called Ballâḷa-Seṭṭi, repaired the ruined temple and restored the breached tank at Nirugunda at his own expense, and gained the name of Oḍagere-malla. The king made grants for the temple of Gangêśvara, which was the original one of the place, and for that of Siddhanâtha now restored. And the citizens granted certain tolls,

With Dg 36 of 1268 we come to Nârasimha III. This is another elaborate inscription. After the lofty invocations, we have the genealogy of Sôma, the king's minister and general. He was descended from the race born from the feet of Brahma, that is, he was a Sûdra. First is mentioned Rudra, who was minister to the king Hemâdri, master of Kalyâṇa. His son was Mailaya-Nâyaka, whose son was Heggada-Maila, whose son, by his wife Rêvala, was Heggaḍa-Nâyaka, the father of Sôma. This was the general of the king vira-Sôma's great son the king Nârasimha, the establisher of Chôḷa-Pâṇḍya and other kings. The inscription goes on to describe the Sômanâthapura agrahâra which Sôma established on the banks of the Kâvêri and the splendid temple he built there (see Vol. III, Intro. p. 19, and TN 97), one of the best remaining complete examples of the Châḷukyan style (see Vol. III, Intro. p. 35). After praise of the learned Gaṅgâdharâryya and of Harihara, who became incarnate to establish the non-duality of Vaikunṭha (Vishnu) and Nîlakaṇṭha (S'iva) as declared in the vêdas, the inscription goes on to say that at the eastern gate of the Harihara temple Sôma had a tower of five storeys built, adorned with golden kalas'as. The foregoing particulars are then repeated with variations and additions. The genealogy here begins with Duddeya-Nâyaka, gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra, whose son Maileya-Nâyaka, gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra and gâyi-gôvaḷa, was minister to the Châḷukya king Jagadêkamalla. Cd 12 of 1286 introduces as to another great minister of this king, namely Perumâle-mantri,[1] a Brahman. When both armies were looking on, he offered up with his sword the lotus of the brave Ratnapâla's head to the Lakshmî of victory, and captured his javanike (curtain or tent), whence he acquired the title of Javanike-Nârâyaṇa. Cd 7 informs us that he made the Brahmapuri hill (one of the heights above Chitaldroog) into Perumâle-pura. In the present inscription it says that he purchased the Kuruba-Kâleya tank, with the lands under it, and forming them into 24 shares, gave them to the Brahmans of the Brahmapuri of Perumâlepura which he had established at the Hûli well of the Bemmattanûr-durgga. He also rebuilt the tank, and naming it Peru-mâle-samudra after himself, gave it to provide for the Aindra-parvva ceremonies of the god Panchikêśvara. Cd 32 is of the same date, and describes the grants made by Perumâle-Dêva-daṇṇâyaka at Esagûr for the Pancha Linga of the tîrtha established by the Pâṇḍavas in the .. of Bemmattanûr.

The remaining inscriptions are of the time of Ballâḷa III. Hk 136 shows the king in 1307 ruling along with Mâdigi-Dêva-daṇṇâyaka. A grant was made in connection with Nirugunda, which was the great agrahâra Udbhava-Sômanâthapura, in the possession of 120 Brahmans. The grant was for a god at Honneyakere in the Arabala Seventy of the Gangavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand. In Hk 137 we have the vîra-Bananju Seṭṭi-guttas, the paṭṭaṇa-svâmi, the temple priests and all the eighteen castes appointing a nâḍ-heggaḍe of Honneyakere in 1307 and granting dues for his support. Cd 1, after giving the usual account of the origin and genealogy of the Hoysalas, shows the great minister Aḷiya (or son-in-law) Mâchaya-daṇṇâyaka associated with the king besides the minister above mentioned. In Hr 87 of 1313 we have an interesting account of the present of a hodake (or wrapper) to the king, which the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Vinjha-Dêva-Râṇe sent to appease him for not coming to the meeting of Huliyara-nâḍ. The king gave the bearer of it a koḍagi village. It is not improbable that the reference is to one of the fine camblets for which this district is noted (see note to p 113 of Translations). In Cd 4 we find the king, attended by four princes, probably his sons, and various ministers and generals who are named, including Ballappa-daṇṇâyaka, gone away to reside at Uṇṇâmale, which is Tiruvuṇṇâmale, popularly called Trinomali, in the South Arcot district. Ballappa and his brother Singeya set up a linga in Bemmatûrakallu in the name of their father Bêba-daṇṇâyaka, and made a grant of Beṇṇedoṇe for that god Bêbanâtha. Cd 6 of 1338 describes the king as terrifier of Chôḷa Mâḷava Gauḷa and Gurjjara, splitter of the skull of the Magadha king, sun of the South, emperor of the South, a royal tiger to kings, but does not mention his residence. His house minister Hiriya-Ballappa-daṇṇâyaka is represented as ruling the kingdom. The Hoysaḷa power was in fact now nearing its end. This is the last of their inscriptions in this District.

Sevuṇas.

The inscriptions of the Sêvuṇas, also called Yâdavas of Dêvagiri, belong to the reigns of Kanhara, Mahadêva and Râmachandra. Dg 59 and 70 contain the genealogy of the line. Bhillama is mentioned as the first king, whose son was Jaitugi, whose son was Singhaṇa, the foremost of all. He ruled in Dêvagiri. His grandson was Kandhara, at whose birth the hostile kings, seized with fear, gave up their authority. His younger brother was Mahadêva, whose heralds made proclamation calling upon Kêraḷa, Hammîra, Konkaṇa and Chôḷa to come and submit to him at once. The Gauḷas, Utkalas, Mâḷavas and Lâḷas made submission, and the remaining kings from time to time became his servants. He subdued the Telunga kingdoms, and captured their three cities. Kandhara's son was Râmachandra or Râma-Râya, who was a destroyer of Mâḷava-Râya, an elephant-goad to Gûrjjara-Râya, establisher of Telunga-Râya, and seizer of the wealth of the Hoysaṇa-Râya's empire.

The first inscription is Dg 88 of Kannara-Dêva, dated 1250, but all else is defaced. In Dg 103 he is called lord of Dvârâvatî-pura (Dvâraka in Kathiawar, from which the Yadu-vaṁśa trace their origin, and not the Hoysaḷa capital), having the flag of a golden Garuḍa, to hostile kings a jagajh-jhampa,[1] a destroyer of Mâḷava-Râya, terrifier of Gûrjjara-Râya, establisher of Telunga-Râya. One of his generals set up the god Kannêśvara in Bidare, on the east bank of the Tungabhadrâ, in the Bikkiga Seventy of the Noṇambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand, and made grants for it.

[1] This formidable term of threatening sound is applied to the other kings also.

In Mahadêva's reign, Beyi-dêva, Kannara's master of the horse, fell in battle in 1264 (Dg 87), and Kûcha-chamûpati made a grant for the god Kannêśvara (Dg 97). In 1265 Dg 162 and 163 describe the king as a wrestler with Mâḷavi, an elephant-goad to Gurjjara-Râya, and an elephant's trunk in pulling out the stalk of the lotus Telunga-Râya's head. A grant was made by Hemmâḍi-dêvarasa's son Viṭṭhala-dêvarasa for the god of the great agrahâra Anuje. Dg 172 records another grant by the same person. Dg 171 describes Hemmana-Bêtûr as superior to Kânchî in the worship of the faithful, and the chief place in all the world for the Jangama worship. Its date is 1266.

Dg 13 is the first of Râmachandra's reign. Bêtûr[1] in the Pâṇḍya-dêśa is praised. Kûchi-Râja who was placed in charge of a circle containing Bêtûr and other villages, on his wife having obtained to the happiness in paradise of freedom from re-birth, erected to her memory the Lakshmî Jinâlaya. In Dg 70 we have Tipparasa as minister to the king, who gave to him the country extending from Râyanakhaṇḍe on the south to the Perddore on the north, saying,—My wealth will not be diminished, tribute will come in from the eight quarters, and the kingdom is not growing old. Jl 30 of 1279 describes the king as an elephant-goad to Gurjjara-Râya, an elephant's trunk in uprooting the lotus stalk Telunga-Râya, seizer of the great kingdoms, defended by elephant troops, of the abusive Varâṭa king Kâkala-Dêva and the S'rîranga drunken king Jâjala-Dêva; a destroying elephant to the root of the vine Ballâḷa-Râya, a lion in smiting the elephant the Mâḷava king, a rod for inflicting wounds on the roots of the group of forest trees the three kingdoms of the powerful Peṇḍâra Lakshmi-Dêva. It is not clear who some of these are.

Dg 59 of 1280 is a high-flown composition, commencing with elaborate invocations and the genealogy of the kings as already noticed above. Râmachandra is described as destroyer of Mâḷava Râya, an elephant-goad to Gurjjara-Râya, establisher of Telunga-Râya, seizer of the wealth of the Hoysaṇa-Râya's empire, to hostile kings a jagaj-jhampa, head of all the paṇas (or castes). The general of his army was Sâḷuva-Tikkama, whose family and prowess are described. The mahâmaṇḍalêśvara, obtainer of a boon from Tryambaka or Harihara, establisher of the Kadamba-Râya, displacer of the Hoysaḷa-Râya, the generalissimo Sâḷuva-Tikkama-Dêva-Râṇe having in a victorious expedition to the South invaded Dôrasamudra had brought back a tribute of all kinds of wealth, especially elephants and horses. The king Mahadêva on first seeing Harihara-pura, where Hari and Hara had manifested themselves, not separately but in one form, for the destruction of Guha; looking upon it as combining all the glories of Kuru Kâśi Vâraṇâsi Himagiri Gaye Gôdâvari and S'rîranga; having also Vârâhi and 104 chief Brahmans,—had made it mânya (rent free) in his name. On account of Sâḷuva-Tikkama's victorious expedition to the South, the king again paid a visit to the god Harihara and made his agrahâra sarbba-mânya (free from all taxes). And Sâḷuva-Tikkama, obtaining permission, set up near the god Harihara an image of Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa in the name of his master Mahadêva-Râya, as directed by Îśvara. He bought the ground in 1277, set up the image Lakshmî-vallabha-Mahadêva-Râya-Nârâyaṇa in 1279, and in 1280 completed the temple by fixing on it a golden kalas'a, and made grants for it. Also all the merchants of Pâṇḍya-nâḍ and the mummuri-daṇḍas of the castes granted for it the tolls of the fair. And all the Brahmans of Harihara, the citizens of Uchchangi, Bêtûr and all the chief cities of Noṇambavâḍi, the merchant guild and the eighteen castes, with both sects of the Nânâ-Dêśis at their head, held a great meeting in Harihara, and placing the diamond layisanige before the god, sat down and decided on the dues to be granted for the god.[2] These are all specified in detail. Dg 26 states that Harihara was formerly a Brahman endowment, that it was afterwards restored by Krishṇa-Kandâra, and that now, in 1300, in Râmachandra's reign, it was again granted by Mummuḍi-Singeya-Nâyaka's son Khanḍeya-Râya.

[2] A similar proceeding is described in Bêlur No. 75, Vol. V, but I have been unable to ascertain exactly what the diamond vaisaṇige is.

Vijayanagar.

The earliest Vijayanagar inscriptions in this volume are those of the time of Bukka-Râya. Dg 67 records a grant made by him in 1354 of a hamlet of Hariharadêvapura in the Uchchangi-vênṭhe, which belonged to the Koṭṭûr-châvadi. Cd 2 says that in 1355 he was in Hosapaṭṭaṇa in the Hoysaṇa country, the royal city of Nijagali Kaṭaka-Râya. There is no certainty as to this place. Sir Walter Elliott says (Num. Or., 91) that the first name of Vijayanagar was Hosapaṭṭaṇa, which is quite possible, as the word merely means New Town. But that would not be in the Hoysaṇa country. Some other place must therefore be meant. No reference has been found to Nijagali Kaṭaka-Râya. Hosapaṭṭaṇa is also mentioned in the inscription recording the reconciliation of the Jainas and Vaishṇavas by Bukka-Râya (Sk 136). It is there given as if one of the boundaries of the kingdom, namely, Anegonḍi (on the opposite side of the river to Vijayanagar), Hosapaṭṭaṇa, Penugonḍe (in Anantapur district), and Kallehada-paṭṭaṇa (Kalya in Mâgaḍi taluq).[1] Both Cd 2 and 3 show Mallinâtha-Voḍeyar ruling at Bemmattanakallu (or Chitaldroog), where he built an upper storey of stone to the Siddhanâtha temple. He was the son of Aḷiya-Sâyi-Nâyaka, who may have been a son-in-law (aḷiya) of the king. Mallinâtha had gained renown on the Turuka army, the Sêvuṇa army, the Telunga army, the immense Pânḍya army, and the Hoysaṇa army, besides which the Suratâla (the Bahmani Sultân) honoured him as a brave warrior of a foreign army.

Dg 34 brings as in 1379 to Harihara-Râya II, who succeeded his father Bukka-Râya. He had, it says, an eminent minister named Mudda-danḍâdhipa, to whom he entrusted the burden of the kingdom and was at ease. In Dg 68 the king, also called Vijaya, makes a grant to Râma-dêva and his son Linga, who were masters of the śâstras in the earth, for the continual recital of the vêdas and śâstras in the temple of Hariharêśvara.

Dg 23 is an important and elaborate inscription of the time of Dêva-Râya, the son of Harihara II, recording an agreement made in 1410 on behalf of the god Harihara and the Brahmans living in the Harihara-kshêtra. On the Brahmans at their own expense building a dam to the river Haridrâ within the boundary of the god's land, and leading a channel through the god's land to Harihara, of all the lands irrigated by the said channel, as far as it might go, two-thirds were to be for the god and one-third for the Brahmans who at their own expense constructed the channel. The minister Jagannâtha, son of Mangarâja, obtained permission from the king through his minister Nâgapa, and entrusted the work of the dam to his son Buḷḷappa, who carried it out to the satisfaction of the Brahmans. A farther agreement was made that all expenses for repairs on wells or tanks made under the channel should be borne in the same proportions as above stated. Also the distribution of water. At the time of consecrating the dam, grants were made to Bharatârâdhya (who probably performed the ceremony), to Bayanâchâryya who composed this śâsana, and to S'ankara-bhaṭṭa who performed the anga-pradakshina.

Dg 29 gives us the farther history of this dam. It was some time after unfortunately breached, and the Brahmans were in great distress at the loss of their means of livelihood. Buḷḷarâja, who had built it, therefore looked about him to see who he could get to provide for the expense of restoring it. He thus fixed upon Châma-nṛipâla, the commander of the whole of the king's army. To him he explained all the calamitous results of the breach of the dam in the loss of the provision both for the worship of the god and the living of the Brahmans, and also pointed out the unlimited merit that would be the reward of whoever repaired it. The general listened, bowed (compliance), and paid over to Buḷḷarasa and the Brahmans the amount the dam would cost, saying "You have the dam built on my behalf," and sent them away with his advice in the matter. So the dam was restored in 1424, and the inscription is filled with praises of Châma-nṛipa and Bullarâja who enabled it to be done. The latter is eulogised as follows:—The heroic Bhagîratha brought the Ganges of the sky to the earth it is said,—what ability was there in that? the Haridrâ, which was lower than the sky and unable to flow anywhere, our Buḷḷa bound, seized, stopped and brought to Hariśapura. The Haridrâ river, which by mingling with the waters of the Tungabhadrâ lost its glory, he with great ease made to approach the feet of Hariśa, together with all the fruits and crops grown on the channel, as offerings. When you said Stop!—at your command she stood still: when you called, she at once came on, flowing through the channel.

In Cd 14 the king's son Mallaṇṇa-Voḍeyar made grants in 1411 in memory of his mother. Hr 52 relates to the widow of a chief of Kâreyapaṭṭana, which Harihara-Râya had captured, it says by the will of God. Its situation is described as in the west of the Abhinava (or new) Jambu-dvîpa The widow, with her son Jakka-Dêva and three other children, were given protection by Kaṇḍikeṟe Bayire-Nâyaka, and by order of Saurâshṭra-Sôma, their family god, Jakka-Dêva built a tank in 1417 to the south of the river called Meddeṟa-haḷḷa to the south of Hiriyûr, and set up the god Sômêśvara, in order that Bayire-Nâyaka the protector of the family might acquire merit. The mother died in 1428, on which the son made grants in the presence of the god. Among the final verses of the inscription is the one stating that the quail and the boar, the she-buffalo and the elephant, the teacher and the donor,—these six went to svarga. It relates to the merit of making a well or tank,[1] and though apparently well known, has only once before been met with.[2]

Cd 29 goes on to Dêva-Râya II, the son of Vijaya-Râya. The king's elder sister Harima was married to Sâḷuva-Tippa-Râya, who is called râya-beuhatta-malla. His head accountant built a temple and made grants. The imprecation at the end is novel, and classes a thief of gold amongst the most heinous criminals. In Mk 7 the king appears sanctioning a grant for the god Jeṭôgi-Râma, the god on the hill where an edict of Aśôka was found by me (see above, p. 2). Mk 32 records a later grant in 1434 for the same god, Jaṭâṅgi-Râma, by the king. When he came to Mâchanahaḷḷi for hunting, he paid a visit to the god, and directed that a village should be granted for it, yielding an income of 20 varaha, the amount formerly paid for the offerings of the god from the Râyadurga châvaḍi.

Hk 129 is of the time of Mallikârjjuna-Dêva, and Jl 43 of that of Virûpâksha-Dêva.

With Hk 94 begin the inscriptions of Krishṇa-Râya. We have here the genealogy of the second Vijayanagar dynasty as given already in so many inscriptions. In the line of Turvasu arose Timma-bhûpati, renowned among the Tuḷuva kings. By his wife Dêvakî he had Îśvara, whose wife was Bukkama, and they had a son Narasa. Quickly damming the Kâvêrî when in full flood, he crossed over, and seizing the enemy alive, took possession of his kingdom and of the city S'rîraṅgapaṭṭaṇa (Seringapatam), and erected a pillar of victory. Having conqured Chêra, Chôḷa and Pâṇḍya, together with the lord of Madhurâ, the fierce Turushka, the Gajapati king and others, he imposed his commands on all the famous kings from the banks of the Ganges to Lanka (or Ceylon), and from the rising to the setting sun. From Tippâji and Nâgalâ-Dêvî respectively he had the sons Nṛisimha and Kṛishṇa-Râya. Nârasiṃha ruled with consummate policy from Sêtu to Sumêru and from the eastern to the western mountains, drawing all hearts to himself. A list is given of the holy places in which he made all manner of gifts. He was succeeded by Krishṇa-Râya, who was even mightier than him, and who was equally liberal in his gifts to sacred places (named). In this inscription he grants to a Brahman the village of Bobûr in the Maleyanûr-sthala of the Hiriyûr-sîma of the Kuntala-dêśa, together with its hamlets. The śâsana, which is on copper plates, was composed by Sabhâpati, and engraved by the carpenter Vîraṇâchârya, son of Mallaṇa. Hk 95 is a similar grant, but incomplete, containing only the opening portion. From Dg 107 we learn the interesting fact that Krishṇa-Râya had given the Maleya-Bennûr country, for the office of Nâyak, to the Draviḷa-maṇḍalêśvara Gajapati Pratâpa-Rudra-mahârâya's son Vîrabhadra-mahârâya, who in 1516 remitted the marriage dues payable to his palace in the Liṅgadahaḷḷi country. Ten years later Raṅganâtha-râutta, who is described as an Arshêya-Kshatriya, in the presence of the god Kallinâtha of Kallinâthapura on the Hana river, which was the âśrama of the great ṛishi Jamadagni, made a grant (Jl 41) in the Jagalûr-sîme which had been given to him for the office of Nâyak. In 1528 remission was made of the kâṇike, mêḷavana and dues on sugar-cane in Maleya-Bennûr, as there was a danger of the people not being able to pay the taxes that had been imposed (Dg 106).

Achyuta-Râya's grants begin with Dg 28. A village was given in the Harihara-sîme of the Pâṇḍya-nâḍ in the Uchchaṅgi-vênthe attached to the Koṭṭûr-châvaḍi. The imprecations deserve notice. Hk 132 of 1533 is another of the eloquent copper plate śâsanas composed by Sabhâpati. On the application of Haḍapa Baiapêndra, the king granted to Brahmans the village of Kêdagere in the Nirugunda-sîme attached to Yakkaṭi in the Hoysaṇa kingdom. Cd 45 calls the capital Vidyânagarî, Harihara-Râya having built it in the name of Vidyâraṇya-śrîpâda (see the same in Cl 54). Dg 27 of 1538 commences with skilfully composed invocations of Harihara, and records a grant for the god by Achyuta-Mallapaṇṇa, who was employed in all the king's affairs. Mallaṇârâdhya, who was a Vâdhula and Yâjusha learned man, composed the verses of the śâsana. Dg 24 and Hk 123 are of considerable interest, as they record the formation by the king in 1539, for the benefit of the Brahmans, of a bank or fund called the Ânanda-nidhi. It soon gained celebrity as a very new (ati nava) thing, superior to the nine (nava) treasures of Kubêra. No details are given from which the nature of the institution can be determined, as only the praise of it is expressed, in two verses (padya dvayam). Hk 111, like a good many others of this period, records the remission of the marriage tax. There seems to have been much rejoicing at this, and the family of even the writer of the śâsana recording it will, it is said, be "certainly undying."

Hr 29 brings us to the time of Sadâśiva-Râya. Hk 11 and 110, of 1546, are similar to several others granting remission of taxes to barbers. See especially Mk 6 and 43 of 1555. Mk 8 and 9 of 1551 relate to grants of rent-free lands to the salt-makers for the removal of saline earth. Hk 112 records the rebuilding in 1554 of the outer pêṭhe of Bâgûr, which was in ruins, and the naming of it Krishṇâpura after Ere-Krishṇappa-Nâyaka, the founder of the Bêlûr family (see section below under that head). Special inducements were held out to settlers in the new pêṭhe, such as freedom from taxation for one year, and confirmation to the exclusion of old claims if they had taken possession. From Mk 4 it appears that the king had given the Râyadurga-sîme, for the office of Nâyak, to the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Râmarâju-Viṭhalarâju-Tirumalaiya-Dêva-mahârâja. Mk 1 of 1557 says that the king sent for a copy of the stone śâsana of the Viṭhala temple, "set up in the righteous administration (dharmma-pârupatya) of Aḷiya-Râmarâjaiya-mahâ-arasu," and finding the grant originally given by Krishṇa-Râya was not sufficient to provide for the offerings, made a farther grant. Dg 18, besides the verse previously quoted (see above, p. 20), describes the god Harihara as destroyer of the contradictory statements of S'aivas, Vaishṇavas and others, tearer asunder of the pride of Guhâsura, thus removing the fears of the dwellers in the Guhâraṇya forest, lord of Kûḍalûr-pura, on the eastern bank of the Tungabhadrâ. Dg 30 repeats these praises and adds—The saying of the s'ruti (or vêda) that they (Hari and Hara) are one being displayed in bodily form, people who create division Yama will thrust into hell. Hk 6 of 1568 says that the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Aḷiya-Ramarâjaya-Dêva-mahâ-arasu, through the action of the kings of the Turukas, having set (or died), the city, throne and countries of the kingdom were destroyed and in ruins. Hl 7 makes the same statement, but for Turukas substitutes turuttu, suddenly,—through the action of kings, having suddenly set.

Hr 88 of 1589 and the remainder are of the time of Veṅkaṭapati-Râya, who makes an extensive grant of lands in the Hiriyûr-sthala to one Vîrayya who was in his service, and whose previous history had been made known to him by Kenchappa-Nâyaka. Cl 25 records the grant of the gauḍike of Chaḷakere in 1615.

Râyadurga.

In Mk 31 Vîra-Bhûpati-Voḍeyar in 1386 assigns to the god Jaṭaṅgi Râma (see above, p. 2) the 400 Pratâpa gadyâṇa which were payable to his palace yearly from a village in Hânya-nâḍ belonging to Râyadurga.

We next go to Hr 22 of 1554, which says that a village in Râyadurga had been granted as an umbali by the representative of Vijayanagar to Pâpai-Dêva-Chôla-mahâ-arasu, son of Vengaḷa-Râja, and grandson of Manubôla-Aubhala-Râja of the Sûrya-vaṃśa. Mk 4 and 5 of 1556 state that Sadâśiva-Râya granted the Râyadurga-śîme, for the office of Nâyak, to the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Râmarâju-Viṭhalarâju-Tirumalaiya-Dêva-mahârâja. It is he that made the preceding grant. Cl 54 of 1559 records a grant by this chief's agent Hoṭṭenna-Nâyaka, who has extraordinary epithets, such as,—brother of the Nâga virgins of the Nâga-lôka, a Bêḍa without guile, one of the 850 worthies of the 350 gôtras.

Harati.

The Harati chiefs are called in their earlier inscriptions chiefs of Harati Aymaṅgala, and in the later ones, of Harati Nidugal. The founder of the family is said by tradition to have come from the Bijapur country, and on being granted as an estate the east of the Chitaldroog District, built Doḍḍêri and Harati, naming them after the towns of his ancestors. At his death he divided his territory among seven sons, who were dispossessed by the Bijapur army when it invaded those parts. The son who lost Doḍḍêri retired to Nidugal, which his descendants held till the time of Tipu Sultân, who put to death the last representative and added their country to Mysore.

The only inscriptions here that give a connected account of the family are Hr 6 of 1592 and Cl 38 of 1739. In the former we have the following list of mahâ-nâyakâchâryas, the succession being from father to son throughout:—

Kâmi-Nâyaka	Hoṭṭeṇṇa-Nâyaka	Îsvara-Dûlappa-Nâyaka
Abi-Nâyaka	Îsvara-Dêva-Nâyaka	Duṇḍappa-Nâyaka
Kâmi-Nâyaka	Basavi-Nâyaka	Lakshmîpati-Nâyaka
Guḍḍa-Brahma-Nâyaka	Mummaḍi-Brahma-Nâyaka	Chikka-Rangappa-Nâyaka

In Cl 38 we have—

Immaḍi-Hoṭṭeṇṇa-Nâyaka	Vîra-Timmaṇṇa-Nâyaka
Vîra-Hoṭṭeṇṇa-Nâyaka	Hoṭṭeṇṇa-Nâyaka

Hk 36 and 39 gave us Tippala-Nâyaka. Cl 54 represents Hottenna-Nâyaka as making a grant in 1559 of a village in the Doḍḍêri-sîme, belonging to the Kôṭekere-vêṇṭe of the Râyadurga kingdom, which, in the reign of Sadâsiva-mahârâya, Tirumalarâjai-Dêva-mahâ-arasu had granted to him as an amara-mâgaṇi. He is given some peculiar titles, including,—confounder of the kings of Aṅga and Vaṅga, brother of the Nâga virgins of the Nâga-lôka, a Bêḍa without guile, of the 850 worthies of the 350 gôtras. He is said to be born in the line of Kôṭekere Abbeya-Nâyaka and Bomme-Nâyaka, and to be the son of Hariya Hiriyoḍeyar Chikkaṇṇa-Nâyaka. In Cl 3 we have Viṭhaṇa-Nâyaka in 1560; in Hr 47, 79 and 85, Abbaṇa-Nâyaka's son Kenchapa-Nâyaka from 1568 to 1570; in Hr 15 Sauraja-Ranga-Nâyaka; in Hr 25 Padaṇa-Nâyaka; in Hr 67 Chalami-Nâyaka; in Hr 6 and 13 Chikka-Rangappa-Nâyaka, from 1592 to 1620; in Cl 59 Timmaṇṇa-Nâyaka in 1736; and in Cl 38, Hoṭṭeṇṇa-Nâyaka in 1739. All these variations can only be reconciled by supposing that they are members of the different families of the seven sons among whom the possessions were divided.

Bêlûr. = Balam

A number of inscriptions introduce the founders of the Bêlûr family, described in Vol. V. Hk 132 represents Timma-Nâyaka's son, the Haḍapa Baiyapêndra, as applying to Achyuta-mahârâya in 1533 for a grant made to Brahmans. From Hk 110 it appears that the Bâgûr-sîme had been granted to Eṛe-Kṛishṇappa-Nâyaka in the time of Sadâśiva-Râya, and in Hk 114 he makes a grant for the god Chenniga-Râya at Bâgûr. Dg 22, 18 and 30 introduce, with all his titles, Sâdâśiva-mahârâya's Haḍapa (or betel-bearer), Sindhu-Gôvinda, dhavalâṅka-Bhîma, lord of Maṇinâgapura, Baiyappa-Nâyaka's son Krishnappa-Nâyaka. In the first he granted a village for the satra of the god Harihara, and the money obtained from the ferry. In Jl 2 his agent appears abolishing the sheep tax in the Bilichêḍ (now called Bilichôḍ) country in 1554. In Hk 112 the agent of Pôtappa-Nâyaka's son Kṛishṇappa-Nâyaka causes the ruined outer pêṭhe of Bâgûr to be rebuilt in 1554, and names it Kṛishṇâpura after Eṛa-Krishnappa-Nâyaka. In Hk 113 we have Sadâśiva-mahârâya's Haḍapa Bomma-Nâyaka's son Kṛishṇappa-Nâyaka in 1556. Cl 47 gives us again Baiyapa-Nâyaka's son Kṛishṇappa-Nâyaka in 1558. From these instances it seems as of the father must have been known by several different names.

Hk 21 of 1559 presents the king's Haḍapa, Eṛa-Kṛishṇappa-Nâyaka's son Veṅkaṭâdri-Nâyaka, making a grant in 1559, and says that the Bâgûr-śime had been granted to him by Sadâśiva-mahârâya as an amara-mâgaṇi. But in Cl 48, Dg 18, 30, 83 and 165 grants continue to be made in the name of Kṛishṇappa-Nâyaka, son of Baiyappa-Nâyaka, down to 1562, which accords with the table of these chiefs given in Vol. V.

Chitaldroog.

The Chitaldroog chieftains received their kingdom in Holalkere, Hiriyûr and Chitaldroog, after the fall of Vijayanagar in 1565, from the representatives of that empire, and continued in power until they were finally absorbed into the conquests of Haidar Ali in 1779 and their territories annexed to Mysore. They were Bêḍas by caste, of the Kâmagêti-vaṁśa, and claim to be of the Vâlmîki-gôtra. They were styled mahâ-nâyakâcharyya, and had the distinctive prefix of Kâmagêti Kastûri. So many of them bore the same name Medakeri, that there is great difficulty in determining their separate periods. I have made up the following table of the genealogy as well as I can from the inscriptions in this volume, but cannot vouch for its accuracy in every particular.[1]

We are informed in Hl 6 and 7 that in the reign of Sadâśiva-mahârâya of Vijayanagar, on the sudden death of Aḷiya[3] Râmarâjaiya-Dêva-mahâ-arasu through the action of the Turuka kings (see above, p. 27), the city, throne and countries of the kingdom being destroyed and in ruins, Tirumala-râjaiya-Dêva-mahâ-arasu (who was Râmarâja's brother) granted the Holalakere-śîme to Kâmagêti-Medakeri-Nâyaka as an amara-mâgaṇi, and that he made it over to his brother-in-law Gulliyappa-Nâyaka as an umbaḷi. Among the ruins of Holalakere was the temple of Gôpâla Krishṇa, which was now restored. The image of the god was one originally set up, it is said, in former times by Janamêjaya, buried in the earth by Vishṇuvardha-Râya, recovered by Krishṇa-Râya and Râma-Râjaiya, and well endowed by Kâmagêti-Kastûri-Medakeri-Nâyaka.[4] The god's priest was of the Pancharâtra sect.

Hr 7 relates how a calamity impending over Tirumala-Nâyaka was averted by a curious ceremony performed on the advice of the brothers of a deaf man who seems to be credited with supernatural power. All the officials and chief persons, making up bundles of straw, marched in procession carrying them on their heads, at the same time shouting Victory! Victory!

Dg 164 records the restoration in 1698 by Baramaṇṇa-Nâyaka of the Ahôbala-Nârasimha temple at Niratadi, which, together with the god, had been destroyed by the Dilli Pâtasâha's army in the year Dhâtu, no doubt 1696, the reference being to Aurangzeb. Dg 147 is a grant in 1716 by the same to Raghunâtha-tîrtha-śrîpâda, consecrated by Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa-tîrtha-śrîpâda, and occupant of the throne of Vyâsarâya, the establisher of the Vaishṇava-siddhânta. A full account of Vyâsarâya, a famous guru of the Mâdhva sect, has been given in Vol. VII (Intro. p. 41). The Vyâsarâya maṭha is at Sôsile in the Tirumakûḍal-Narasipur taluq of the Mysore District.

[1] Compare with account in my Gazetteer of Mysore, revised edition, Vol. II, p. 501 ff.

[2] Kâmagêti Kastûri to be prefixed to each name. Nª stands for Nâyaka.

[3] Son-in-law,—so called on account of his marriage with Krishṇa-Râya's daughter.

[4] This as been noticed in Vol. VII in connection with Janamêjaya.

Sante-Bennûr.

Of these chiefs, noticed in previous volumes, we have here in Hk 115 Hanuma-Nâyaka's son Râjappa-Nâyaka in power in 1571. Dg 158 gives us Immadi-Hanumappa-Nâyaka in 1576, and it is no doubt the same who appears in Dg 144 in 1581. Hk 92 introduces Hanumi-Nâyaka's grandson Daḷa-Nâyaka in probably 1605.

Hatti.

The chiefs of this place, now called Nâyakanhaṭṭi, are met with in Mk 37 and 38, dating in probably 1620, and in Cl 2 of 1625. Haṭṭi Mallappa-Nâyaka's son Kastûri-Mallappa-Nâyaka is mentioned, whose mother was Lakshmamma-Nâgati, perhaps of the Chitaldroog family, as her son adopts the prefix Kastûri.

This seems the most suitable place in which to notice the curious yamaka verse (Mk 39), which is engraved across the legs of an elephant (kanjaram—the first word), drawn on the rock at the tank north of Molakâlmuru mentioned in Mk 37. Its date is uncertain, and the reason for its being inscribed here is not apparent.[1] The verse is in praise of the poet Kâlidàsa and reads the same forwards or backwards. At p. 95 of the Translations is given the separation into words and the interpretation supplied by the late Pandit Râjagôpâlâchârya. He states that it can be arranged in four kinds of bandha, and in various other skilful modes. The one given is the most obvious and straightforward. He also says that the following were the circumstances under which it was originally composed, as related in the Bhôja-prabandha.—Bhôja's queen was one day closeted with her guru, who was telling her fortune from her hand, when the king unexpectedly came in, on which she called out, mûrkhô'si gachchha Bhôja tvam (you are a fool, go away Bhôja). Annoyed at this rebuff, he went into his court and in vexation repeated to every one who came near him mûrkhô'si (you are a fool). Among those to whom he said this was the poet Kâlidâsa, who replied,— > khâdan na yâsyâmi hasan na bhâshê gatam na śôchâmi kṛitam smarâmi |

> dvayôs tritiyô na bhavâmi râjan katha nv aham Bhôja bhavâmi mûrkhaḥ ||

(I do not go along eating, I do not speak laughing, I do not lament what is gone, I remember what is done, among two I do not become a third,—say then, king Bhôja, how am I a fool ?). Recognizing from these descriptions that his entry into the queen's apartment was under the circumstances foolish, the king uttered the yamaka verse kanjaram &c. of the inscription. To which Kâlidâsa replied with another complimentary yamaka, as follows,—

> Bhôja-Râja-mahâdêva Kâlidâsa-manôhara |
> raha nô masadâlîkâ vadêhâm Aja-râja bhô ||

the syllables reading the same forwards or backwards.

Mattinadu.

This was another line of chieftains, identified with Mattêḍu, now called Mattôḍu. Hk 96 describes the founder of the family as a râjâdhirâja named Hâlappa, handsome[2] and high-born, who was of the Manumula-kula, and versed in the S'aiva śâstras. He is said to have lived in the time of Harihara, and his palace at Mattêḍu had walls the colour of gold, adorned with all manner of paintings. His son was Doḍḍaṇṇa (1672), whose son was Saṅgappa, whose son was Hâla-Râja (1707-1736), whose sons were Siddharâma (1747) and Doḍḍaṇṇa.

[1] In my original Report on the Asôka edicts, I remarked that it might perhaps have been suggested by the interpretation mûrkha given by Kâtyâyana for Dêvânâmpriya, which was a title of Asôka: (see above, p. 4).

[2] According to tradition these chiefs were renowned for their stature and good looks.

The first Doddanna founded the agrahâra of Ganjagêra (Hk 96), and in 1672, on the occasion of the marriage festival of the crown prince Chinnada-Giriyappa, remitted the tax payable by barbers (Hk 98). Hâlapa built and endowed a matha for the Murige-svâmi at Mattinadu in 1707 (Hk 101). In 1736 he was out hunting in the forest, when he saw the Ganjegere agrahâra in ruins, and the fine tank breached. On returning home he informed his wife and two sons, and they all agreed that being founded by their ancestor, it was their duty to restore them, which was done, and the name of the village changed to Narasâpura (Hk 96). Siddarâmappa in 1747 made a grant of a piece of land south of the palace garden, originally assigned for providing milk and butter for ? his infant son (Hk 99).

Mughals.

Under this head have been placed four inscriptions. Hl 126 records a grant of land made in 1692, in the government of the Mogal Pâchchâ Sâhêb, on behalf of Abdul Sâhêb, jâgîradâr of Ballâla-samudra, for rebuilding the breached weir of the tank. Dg 62 records a grant made in the same year on behalf of Râvaji-Rangapparasa-Jayadêva-mahâ-arasu, as a sati-âya on account of the tala-vâri Hali-Nâyaki. This watchman's wife must have become a sati by burning with the dead body of her husband. Hk 63 states that the Basavapattana Havâlladâr Bâba-Sâhêb, freed certain residents of Kelasêru-gada from the payment of taxes, having received evidence from the officer Annâji-pant and the village officials that formerly, in the time of the kings, they were exempt. Hk 19 is a grant from the Basavapattana Dêsapândya, but all the particulars are effaced.

Mysore.

Cd 19 and 20 record the erection of a tomb in 1784 by order of Tipu Sultân for a holy man named Shâh-Ahmad. Cd 61 gives the measurement of a Krishna-Râja haridâri as 5280 yards. In Cd 52 a grant was made in about 1820 by Krishna-Râja-Vadeyar to Channa-Basava-śâstri.

But during the Mysore period are some other miscellaneous inscriptions. Cd 21 records a grant by merchants, to traders and citizens of Chitrakallu-durgga (Chitaldroog) in 1781 for certain temples. Hr 62 states that the Rangasvâmi temple at Yeradakatte was built in 1801. Cd 17 states that a sepoy of the Sappers built a temple in 1815. Dg 58 says that a Jamedâr of the 6th Regiment of Native Infantry erected the temple of Pillaiyâr in 1824. Dg 60 states that Lakshmana won a bet in 1841 by being sprinkled on the bed of the rock. Perhaps there was a swimming competition in the river. In Dg 63 and 64 a tailor makes a grant in 1885. And in Dg 65 a sepoy of the 13th Regiment built a matha.[1]

Architecture

The extensive fortifications of the upper fort of Chitaldroog are good specimens of the military buildings of the latter part of the last century, erected in the time of Haidar Ali and Tipu Sultân, with the assistance probably of French engineers. They contain immense granaries and pits for storing oil and ghee. Also a number of temples, of much older date. The mahal or palace erected by Tipu Sultân in the inner fort below is used as a cutcherry. Recently has been excavated a quadruple mill in the arsenal, which was probably intended for preparing gunpowder.

The curious long series of subterranean chambers to the west of Chitaldroog, now forming part of the Ankli matha, are deserving of notice. They are approached by a good stone staircase, which leads down to rooms of various sizes at different levels. In these are shrines, lingas, baths, and pedestals, the latter apparently for yôgâsana. The style of their present architecture may be from 300 to 500 years old, but the caverns no doubt existed long before. When and for what purpose they were originally formed or occupied is unknown. They are now merely used for storing things in. At the Pancha-Linga cave, near the entrance, is the inscription Cd 32 of 1286. This says that the tîrtha of the Five Lingas was established by the Pâṇḍavas.

[1] These benefactions by regimental sepoys are due to the cantonment which existed at Harihar till 1865.

But the most important building in the District architecturally is the temple of Harihar-êśvara at Harihar. It is of the Châlukyan style and was built in 1224 by Pôlâḷva, minister and general of the Hoysaḷa king Nârasimha II, as described in Dg 25. Sôma, the minister and general who built the beautiful Sômanâthapura temple on the Kâvêri in the Mysore District, under Nârasimha III, (see Vol. III), erected the gôpura of five storeys over the eastern gateway of the Harihara temple in 1268, as described in Dg 36. In 1280 Sâluva-Tikkama, the general of the Sêvuṇa (or Yâdava) king Mahadêva, completed a temple of Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa within the precincts, in the name of his king and in commemoration of his successful expedition into the Hoysala territories, as described in Dg 59.

Although shorn of many of its ornamental features, the Harihara temple was fortunately not destroyed by the Muhammadan invaders of the 17th century. On the contrary, they seem to have respected it as a work of art, and used the roof as a mosque, making a small Saracenic doorway into the dome over the image of the god. In Dg 25 will be found an account of the decorative embellishments of the original building.

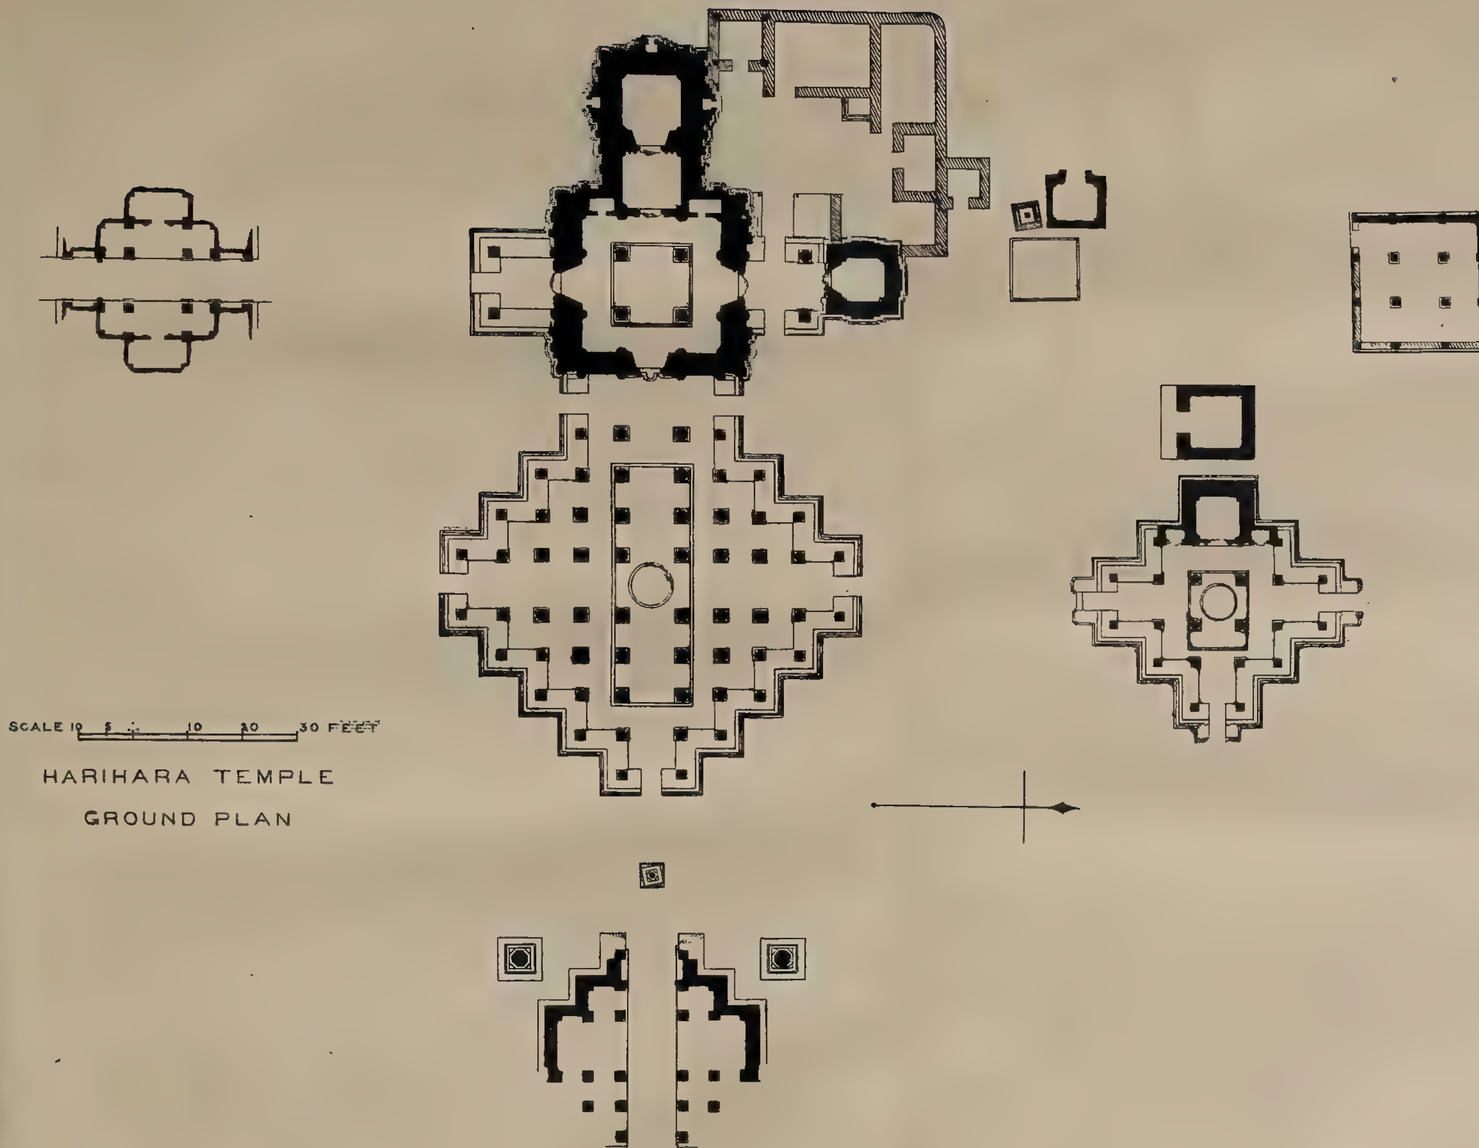

At Ânekoṇḍa, north east of Dâvaṇgere, is a ruined Îśvara temple, the ceilings and pillars of which were finely carved and of special design. It must be one of those mentioned in Dg 3, 4 and 5, of the 12th century. On the right bank of the Tuṅgabhadrâ, to the north-west of Male Bennûr, is Nandiguḍi, where there is a very ornamental Îśvara temple, near to which is the vîrakal Dg 119 of 930. A little north of this is Vâsana, the Ôsana-tîrtha of Dg 113 and 114. To the north-east of Male Bennûr, at Nanditâvare, is a ruined temple of the Hoysala period, which was richly carved. It was of the 13th century (see Dg 69).

More modern buildings are the Raṅganâtha temple at Niratadi, which, according to Dg 164, was destroyed by the army of Aurangzeb, and rebuilt by the Chitaldroog chief. The design is good, though the execution is inferior. At Yalahole on the Tuṅgabhadrâ is a fine and well built Śivâchâra maṭha, with simple but good ornamentation.

Of the primitive stone structures known as kistvaens, generally called Pâṇḍu kuli by the natives of the South, it is of interest to note that in Molakâlmuru, where the Aśôka edicts were found, they are known as Môryara mane, houses of the Môryas or Mauryas. And it is curious that they are also so called by the Badagas on the Nilagiri hills, who are Kannaḍa colonists from the north (baḍaga).[1] There are moreover certain groups of stone circles in some parts of the District, as at Hâyakal and Chikka-Madhure, which are kalled Môrya dinne or mounds of the Môryas. They seem to be the sites of Bêḍa encampments. Nothing has been found in them on excavation.

S'rî Sômanâtha. Obeisance to S'ambhu, beauteous with the châmara-like crescent moon kissing his lofty head, the original foundation-pillar of the city of the three worlds.

When the tiger rose up in the forest and sprang forth, on the muni saying hoy Sala (strike, Sala), that instant he fell upon and killed it with the stick (s'ele), and held it up; whence the tiger waving about in a wonderful manner on the end of the stick became his flag, and Sala becoming famous acquired the name Hoysaṇa, which was published in all the world. The Hoysaṇa emperor Vinayâditya was the favourite of fame. (Then) Eṛeyanga, from whom was Vishṇu. (Then) Narasimha, the mighty Ballâḷa, the victorious Nârasimha-Râya, from him vîra-Sômêsvara. To Sômêsvara and to Bijjalâ-Râṇi was born Nârasimha, omniscient in literature. To Nârasimha and his crowned queen was born Ballâla-Dêva Hoysaṇa-Râya, (his praises). His brother-in-law was Soyya, (his praises).

Be it well. When the refuge of all the world, favourite of earth and fortune, the mahârâjâdhirâja paramêsvara parama-bhaṭṭâraka, sun in the Yâdava sky, head-jewel of omniscience, Râja of the Male-râjas, champion over the Malepas (or hill chiefs), a male bhêruṇḍa, unassisted hero, fierce in war, self-contained hero, having gained complete success on a Saturday (S'anivâra-siddhi),[1] wrestler of the hill fort (giri-durgga-malla),[2] a Râma in active warfare, a lion to the elephant his enemies, establisher of Chôḷa-Râya, setter up of Pâṇḍya-Râya, uprooter of the Magara kingdom,—the Hoysaṇa strong-armed (bhujabala) Ballâla-Dêvarasa, the great minister Medagi-Dêva-daṇṇâyaka, and the great minister Aḷiya-Mâchaya-daṇṇâyaka, were in Dôrasamudra, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—

(On the date spceified), the great .... daṇṇâyaka and Aḷiya-Singeya-daṇṇâyaka made a grant to provide for the offerings to the god Sômanâtha, set up in .... of Bemmattanakallu (rest gone)

Aḷiya-Sâyi-Nâyaka's son Mallinâtha-Voḍeyar made a grant as follows.

Obeisance to the guru. Siddhanâtha is our refuge. Praise of S'ambhu.

What need of more words ?—When Bukka-Râya, a thunderbolt to the mountain chains hostile kings, brandished his sword, the points of the compass shook, kings stealing away with terror hid themselves, or trembling bowed down and gave up their pride,—what king then could withstand him ? A lion to the lusty elephants hostile kings, an ornament to the heads of wise kings, brave as Surâdri, destroyer of hostile kings, a treasury of happy kings, who in the earth is equal to you among other kings, Bukka-Râya ? Be it well. When the mahâ-maṇḍalêsvara, to maṇḍalikas Khaṇḍeya-Râya, destroyer of hostile kings, champion over kings who break their word, master of the eastern and western oceans, vîra-Bukka-Râya-Voḍeyar was in Hosapaṭṭaṇa in the Hoysaṇa country,— the royal city of, possessed of all titles, Nijagali Kaṭaka-Râya,—ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—

[1] Explained in Bêlûr 137 as a title taken from his completing the acquisition of Pâṇdya's kingdom on a Saturday.

[2] Explained in the same inscription as a title taken from the conquest of Uchchangi-durga.

The maṇḍalêśvara who had acquired greatness on the Turaka army, the Sêvuna army, the Telunga army, the Pâṇḍya immense army, and the Hoysaṇa army,—Naḍegôṇṭe Sâyya's son, was the great Mallinâtha, whom the Suratâla king (the Bâhmani Sultân) honoured as the brave of a foreign army. With moats, ramparts, flag-staff, parapet, bastions, and breast-works like a fort (kôṇṭe), how shall I describe this fort, which, if considered, presented the appearance of a fort of adamant to the enemies' forces and to his own army,—the might of the arms of Naḍegôṇṭe-Malla[1].

Be it well. When the mahâ-maṇḍalêsvara, to maṇḍalikas Khaṇḍeya-Râya, worshipper of the divine lotus-feet of the god Amaraguṇḍa,—Aḷiya Sâyi-Nâyaka's son Mallinâtha-Voḍeyar was in Bemmattanakallu, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—(on the date specified) he raised an upper storey of stone for the god Siddhanâtha of that Bemmattanakallu, fixed on it that god's pinnacle, and set up a stone swing. And in order that this work of merit might continue as long as sun and moon endure, and to provide for the decorations, illuminations and offerings of that god Siddhanâtha, he repaired Chikkapura in Bemmattanakallu formerly given to that god, and, together with the present and future profit, hidden treasure, springs, rocks, completed and prospective works, the fixed rent, roofs, foundations, tribute, exaction, forced labour, husking, loss, injustice, excise, tax on folds, fines, decrease, former dues, recent dues, and all the eight rights of full possession,—that Mallinâtha-Voḍeyar presented it with pouring of water, freed from all imposts, to Sôvaṇṇa, son of Hiriya-Siddaṇṇa, the worshipper of the divine lotus-feet of that god Siddhanâtha.

The approval (or signature) of Mallinâtha-Voḍeyar's own hand,—śrî-Amaraguṇḍa (in Nâgarî characters). Usual imprecations.

Written by karaṇika-Dêvaṇṇa and Rêvappa. The workman who made the upper storey, the pinnacle and the swing, and engraved this śâsana, was the stone-mason Jaḍeya Râmôja. Notwithstanding any letter in defect or any letter in excess, this is entirely genuine. Great fortune. śrî śrî śrî.

Corresponds with No 2 above, but refers to another village, named Musuvaḍi. At the beginning is an extra verse invoking the Liṅga : and among the praises of Naḍegoṇte-Malla, an extra verse-saying—In Amarâvati at the summit of Mêru dwells Âkhaṇḍala (Indra), in Dvârakâ is seated Madhu, sûdana (Krishṇa), Rudra roams on Raupyâchala (Kailâsa), but the highly extolled king S'âveya Mallinâtha, the self-contained hero having the world-famed title of Naḍegôṇṭe-Malla, lives without any fortress (i. e. dispenses with fortifications)

Among the imprecations and benedictions at the end are the following :—Be it the thief or plunderer prowling by night or day, be it the honourable mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, the emperor who rules the world, or the king of kings, who thinks to himself I will seize the villages, lands or grants bestowed in this place,—at the mere word, thrust him, with his father and mother and all into the hell filled with worms, for seventy seven crores of years, and continue to visit him with all manner of torments, do you see, O sin ! Whoso says I am afraid of the land endowments of this god, and trembling in mind like a coward attacked by a serpent, joins his hands in reverence and goes away, let Baira bring him quickly to Kailâsa, do you see, O merit ! That such merit and sin will be contracted is verily verily true, do you see, all people ! If you doubt this you will go to hell.

[1] Naḍegôṇṭe means the middle (naḍe) fort (kôṇṭe), or citadel, which furnishes the motive of the description.

Written by karaṇika-Dêvaṇṇa, and Sôvarasa's (son) Vîrappa. In the gaudu land in this village five days ? sowing is due to the god.

The works were done and the śâsana engraved by the stone-mason Jaḍeya-Râmôja.

The opening portion is the same as in No. 1 above, down to Ballâla-Dêva.

When (with titles as there given) the Hoysaṇa strong-armed vîra-Ballâḷa-Dêva, together with the champion at his side, the strong-armed Bhîma-Râya, the prince Kaṭhôra-Hara, the prince Simha-Raghunâtha, the prince Kâḷamêgha, the prince Vîra-S'ânta, Baicheya-daṇṇâyaka-chamûpa, who was the punisher of the famous Mâdhava-Râya of Udevâra,[1] the great minister Ballappa-daṇṇâyaka and the great minister Singeya-daṇṇâyaka, were in the residence of the city of Uṇṇâmale, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—

(On the date specified) Ballappa-daṇṇâyaka and Singeya-daṇṇâyaka set up a linga in Bemmatûrakallu in the name of their father Bêba-daṇṇâyaka ; and to provide for the offerings and decorations of that god, obtained from the hands of Hoysaṇa vîra-Ballâḷa-Dêva, freed from all imposts, Beṇṇedoṇe in Bemmatûrakallu-vṛitti, and gave it with all rights and boundaries (specified) for that god Bêbaṇâtha. (The grant is repeated). And they made over the management to Hiriyaṇṇa-daṇṇâyaka. Written by Chauḍappa. Usual final phrases.

They further granted to Gôbûr Narahari-Dêva, the temple priest of that god, 4 ? of land, and to the purâṇika, 1.

The âchâri who made the śâsana was Sîmôja, son of Babôja.

Obeisance to Gaṇâdhipati and to Narasimha. Praise of S'ambhu.

Descent of the Hoysalas as in No 1 above, down to Nârasimha. When the great minister of that Nârasimha's son, (with titles as there given, to which are added) an unusual terrifier of Chôḷa Mâḷava Gavuḷa and Gurjjara, splitter of the skull of the Magadha king, sun of the South, emperor of the South, a royal tiger to kings,—the pratâpa-chakravartti Hoysaṇa vîra-Ballâḷa-Dêvarasa's house, Râmeya-daṇṇâyaka's son, Hiriya-Ballappa-daṇṇâyaka, was ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom:—(on the date specified) he made a grant of Nagarêṛu in Bemmattûr-nâḍ for the offerings decorations vessels and dresses and all the ceremonies of the god Gopâla.

1 Several of these names are very doubtful owing to the inscription being indistinct.

And the nâḍ and city (notables, many named), with the city sênabôva Vîrappa, uniting, of their own accord, made over that Nagarêṛu, except local benefactions previously granted, to Ballapa-daṇṇâyaka for the god Gopâla, giving it the name of Gôpâlapura, undertaking to themselves defray all the taxes (named).

To the sênabôva Vîrappa 100 poles of rice land, according to the pole of 36 footsteps. The temple priest Gaḍabaḍi assisted in the work of merit.

Written, with the approval of Khaḍeya-Allappa and of the Brahmans of Singapura Gorûr and Perumâlesamudra, by sênabôva Vîrappa. Here follow numerous signatures. Usual final verses.

Obeisance to Gaṇâdhipati, and to the lord Râma-Kṛishṇa. Praise of S'ambhu.

Descent of the Hoysalas as in No 6 above. That king Nârasimha's minister was Perumâle-mantri (his praises), whose father was Vishṇu-Dêva of the Âtrêya-gôtra, his mother Mañchale, and his guru Râma-Kṛishṇa. When the javanike was running away, he, while both armies were looking on, offered up with his sword the lotus of the brave Ratnapâḷa's head to the Lakshmî of victory, and captured his javanike (curtain or tent), whence he acquired the title of Javanike-Nârâyaṇa.

When, with all titles, the pratâpa-chakravartti Hoysaḷa vîra-Nârasimha-Dêvarasa was in the royal city Dôrasamudra, ruling a kingdom of the earth in peace and wisdom :—

A dweller at his lotus-feet, the punisher of traitors to his lord, (with other titles), the great minister Perumâle-Dêva-daṇṇâyaka, (on the date specified) paid into the hands of Benaka-Gauḍa, son of Kâma-Gauḍa of Nagarêru in the Bemmattanûr-vṛitti,—by means of the great master of the robes Vissaṇṇa's son the official Vîrappa, and of the townspeople of Bemmattanûr city, and of the nâḍ-prabhus, the holders of local benefactions and all the subjects of Bemmattanûr-vṛitti,—the proper price at the time for the Kuruba-Kâleya tank and the lands under it (specified), and marking out the boundaries with stones, formed the whole into twice twelve named shares, and gave them to the Brahmans of the Brahmapuri of Perumâḷepura which he had established at the Hûli well of the hill-fort of Bemmattanûr.

And in that tract he granted 10 koḷaga of rice-land for the offerings of the god Hiḍimbêśvara ; 1 salage for the god Chôḷêśvara ; 1 salage rice-land and 100 poles field for Benaka-Gauḍa's koḍigi ; 10 koḷaga for the nâḍ-sênabôva Bâchayya ; 10 koḷaga for the heggaḍe-Châmayya's koḍigi. All the rest belongs to those Brahmans.

And the nâḍ freed this agrahâra from all imposts, undertaking to defray all the taxes (specified).

And Perumâle-mantri building anew that Kuruba-Kâleya tank, and naming it anew Perumâle-samudra after himself, granted it for the Aindra-parvva ceremonies of the god Pañchakêśvara performed in that Perumâlepura, the cultivators of the tract and the Brahmans of Perumâlepura themselves agreeing to defray all the taxes (specified).

When the refuge of all the world, favourite of earth and fortune, the mahârâjâdhirâja paramêśvara parama-bhaṭṭâraka, glory of the Satyâśraya-kula, ornament of the Châḷukyas, Jagadêka-Malla-Dêva's victorious kingdom was extending on all sides, to continue as long as sun moon and stars :—

And when, a dweller at his lotus feet, entitled to the five big drums, the mahâ-maṇḍaḷêśvara, boon lord of Kânchî-pura, sun in the sky of the Yadu-vamśa, head-jewel of good warriors, sun to the lotus his own family, a champion in cutting on both sides, defeater of the designs of Râjiga-Chôḷa, a bee at the lotus feet of Jagadêka-Malla-Dêva, with these and other titles,—the mahâ-maṇḍaḷêśvara Vijaya-Pâṇḍya-Dêva, was governing the Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand, putting down the evil and upholding the good, and was in the residence of Uchchangi, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—

A dweller at his lotus feet, a bee at the lotus feet of Kâmarasa-Dêva, with these and other titles, the great feudatory, favourite of the Lakshmî of victory, Yama to enemies, a burning sun to the waterlilies the faces of the wives of kings, a known ornament to the lady fame, Gângêya in purity, subduer of foreign armies, holding Mahêśvara supreme, worshipper of the feet of the god Hiḍumbêśvara, [was] Irugaiya-Nâyaka [and] Udayâditya-Nâyaka ;—whose bravery was as follows :—When, in order to attack a foreign army, Era-Gauḍa with great fury sets forth, like a pestilence breaking out, like the cry of death, shouting like Bhairava, roaring like a lion, springing like a royal tiger, a very Râhu, who does not faint ? whose mind is not confused ? who does not violently tremble ? who are brave ? When, without mercy, tributary chiefs distinguished for their skill in war, boasting, form themselves into bands and come against him, as Suyôdhana and the others of old fled at the sight of Bhîma, so who of them can stand before the master of feudatory chiefs, Oddiga the warlike ?

When these two, governing the Haduvagere Five Hundred and the ? Sagaḷunka Seventy, putting down the evil and upholding the good, were in the residence of Bemmattanûr, ruling the kingdom :— Their good son Mâcha-Dêva, with others (named) being present, discoursing on the fruits of merit, explained the great virtue of the Nâga-tîrtha on the southern mountain of the Hiḍumbâ-vana ; on which, to provide for the perpetual light and offerings of the god Hiḍumbêśvara, (on the date specified) they made a grant of land (specified). Usual final verse.

Be it well with the subjects : may kings protect the earth in the ways of justice. May fortune ever be to cows and Brahmans : may all in the world be happy. May you have long life, strength, health, and peace ; may destruction be to your enemies. May fame be propitious, and enemies promote your prosperity : may you have faith in Purushôttama, the first in merit. May it be well. May all good fortune be obtained.

(On the date specified) the mahârâjâdhirâja râja-paramêśvara, subduer of hostile kings, master of the eastern western northern and southern oceans, continually pouring forth gold and camphor, a serpent to royal harlots, terrifier of the minds of kings at the eight points of the compass, vîra-Pratâpa-Dêva-Râya's son,—the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, promoter to the full of merit, gifts, mercy and wisdom, bowing in spirit at the remembrance of the feet of Triyambaka,—vîra-Mallaṇṇa-Voḍeyar, made a grant as follows :—

In the middle of the globe of the earth 50 crores in extent, is the great Mêru ; to the south of that mount Mêru, in Jambû-dvîpa, in the great city Bemmattanakalla-paṭṭaṇa, the manifest Paramêśvara who destroyed Hiḍimbakâsura the disturber of Vṛikôdara the son of Pâṇḍu, in the form of Sadâśiva, is the god Hiḍimbanâtha,—for whom, (on the date specified), performing great worship with offerings and illuminations of his pinnacle, the mahâ-maṇḍaḷêśvara vîra-Mallaṇṇa-Voḍeyar, that merit might accrue to his mother Mallayave, made a grant of Kanchiganahaḷḷi, one of the villages east of Bemmattanakallu, free of all imposts, giving it the name of Mallapura,—to provide for the decorations and festivals of the god, and for building a stone tower over the southern entrance of the temple. (The grant is repeated three times). And at the time of worshipping the god at the three seasons, the ascetics of the place, Iḍaba-Jîya and Sirigiri-Jîya, will pronounce a blessing that Mallayave may attain to the world of merit. Obeisance to Kallinâtha. Praise of S'ambhu.

(Omitting laudations) In the earth surrounded by the ocean, in Jâmbava-dvîpa, to the south of the cloud-touching mountain of the gods, is Bhârata-khaṇḍa. In it is the beautiful Kuntala country, celebrated by the learned, in which is the populous royal city whose name is Vijaya. In it is the king of kings, Vijaya-nripa's son, Dêva-Râya. His elder sister Harima's husband was Sâluva-Tippa-Râja, an ornament to the Lunar race, a royal swan at the feet of Kamsâri (Krishna). To that râya-beühatta-malla (? chief of the royal spies) the head accountant was Singana, great-grandson of the energetic Bhânu, grandson of the jewel of councillors Nârasimha, and son of the Brahman (prithvî-dêva) minister Virûpâksha, of the Jâmadagnya-Vatsya pravara and gôtra. He was versed in all parts of the vêdas, all śâstras and smriti, with the various purânas and âgamas; devoted to the study of the Rig-vêda, and the performance of sacrificial rites. Residing in Gondamapalli, belonging to Bannûr, he erected a temple of Kallinâtha, the lord of Gauri, worshipped by all the gods and demi-gods; and for the decorations of that Kallinâtha made a grant of land, yielding 39 gâdyâna. And in Pundarîkapalli he made a grant of land to the man named Nârâyana, for the Rudrâbhishêka, the Sômavârôpahâra, and for well seasoned daily offerings. These grants were made (on the date specified) in the presence of the S'iva established at Simhâdri.

Ôm. Obeisance to S'iva. Praise of S'ambhu and of the Boar form of Vishnu. May he grant you prosperity, the lord of S'rî, who in the form of the Boar carried the Earth resting on the tip of his strong white tusk, like the bulb in front of a slender waterlily, with its stem exposed, which has been torn up by the ruthless tush.

May king Tribhuvanamalla, by the ocean of whose spotless fame the world is encircled, make subject to him the lady Earth whose girdle is the ocean, marked with elephantine sea-monsters.

Be it well. Of the Mânavya-gôtra praised in all the world; sons of Hâritî; having a white umbrella and other royal emblems obtained from the favour of Kauśika; preserved by the Seven Mothers; having obtained as flags the peacock's tail and lance through the favour of Kârttikêya; having the territories of hostile kings brought into subjection in a moment at sight of the Boar crest obtained through the favour of the holy Nârâyaṇa; having ' 'refuge of all the world' ' 'refuge of all people', Vishṇuvarddhana, Vijayâditya, and other distinctive names; the birth-place of jewel kings;—devouring the wealth of the Nalas; seizing the power of (the Durjjayas or) those difficult to conquer; destroying the pride of the great Kadambas; subduing the Mauryyas; with their own strong arms uprooting the Râshṭrakûṭas; swallowing up the wealth of the Kaḷachuris;—is the Châḷukya-vamśa. Born in it, governing the kingdom from the city of Ayôdhyâ, one less than sixty kings having passed away; sixteen kings born in that line ruled the land that includes the region of the South.

The fortunes of the Châḷukya-kula having been obstructed by wicked people and suppressed by certain other men,—there was again a king of the Châḷukya-vamśa,—a bulbous root of the sprout of the creeper of fame, a lotus which was the sporting place of the goddess of fortune, a thunderbolt to hostile kings, an image of the god who destroyed the Daityas,—renowned under the name of Jayasimha-Vallabha, who shone for a long time, by his deeds captivating the subjects that were sorrowing for the achievements of the early kings. Having conquered the famous Indra of the Râshṭrakûṭa-kula, the son of Krishna, who had an army of eight hundred elephants,—and having consumed five hundred kings,—he again raised up the royal fortune of the favourites of the Châḷukya-kula.

With a desire for war produced by the fine horses of the enemy, their skilful warriors and troops of elephants, delighting in placing himself at the feet of Hara, was his son Raṇarâga.

His son was the king Puḷakêśi; equal to the destroyer of Kêśi; boon lord of Vâtâpi-puri; not possessed by the blemishes and deceit of the wicked Kali age; we, in describing the king Pulakêśi, even now feel the hair on our bodies stand erect through pleasure, for he bestowed horses, elephants, and villages valued at two thousand, on the priests when he performed the horse-sacrifice.

His son,—destroyer of the dwellings of the Nalas; cause of the exile of the Mauryyas; the axe that cut down the pillar the famous great Kadambas; whose white fame was occupied with the burden of filling up all parts of the palace of the world;—was the king Kîrttivarmmâ.

After him, his younger brother,—mighty to invade all the islands; whose army, crossing the sea by bridges of boats, effected the plunder of the Rêvatî island, and made him the husband by force to the assembly of the queens of the Kalachchuris ;—Mangalîśa, governed the earth with all good fortune.

As Mangalîśa had taken upon himself the burden of the earth while his elder brother's son was unable on account of his childhood, so he then restored the earth to him, Satyâśraya, on his becoming a young man ;—for who of the Châḷukyas would deviate from the path of righteousness ?—to him who conquered the regions, subdued the great king Harsha, gave more than a hundred-fold of their desires to supplicants, and who being a mine of the jewels of truth (satya) and all good qualities, his character of Satyâśraya became his designation.

Rendering the circle of the regions undisturbed, troubling his enemies, his great fame sung by the heavenly nymphs, bearing the auspicious Mṛiḍa in his heart,—was born his son, king Tiḍamari.

His son, garlanded with the jewels of good qualities, born a favourite of the earth, possessor of the banner of courage, was Âdityavarmmâ, performer of deeds of high merit, in glory equal to the sun (âditya).

His son was Vikramâditya, who covered the earth with his valour ; and from him the king named Yuddhamalla, equal to Yama in war. From him was born Vijayâditya, who like Vijaya in single combat defeated the heroes of four countries. From him was born Vikramâditya. His son was Kîrttivarmmâ, by whom the fortune of the Châḷukya kingdom became impeded in the earth. The king Vikramâditya's brother (? was) the valiant Bhîma (or ? valiant as Bhîma). His son was Kîrttivarmmâ, who thrust out the wicked people. The king Taila was born from him. His son was the king Vikramâditya. From him the king Bhîma, a terror to his enemies.

From him was born the noble Ayyaṇa, the special fortune of whose line, as great as that of her own line, was entrusted (or enshrined) in the daughter of Krishṇa.[1]

Their son, brilliant in power, the destroyer of his enemies, his glory outvying the sun, abounding in truth, was Vikramâditya. The glory of the line of Chêdi kings, the daughter of king Lakshmaṇa, praised for her good disposition, Bonthâ-Dêvî,—Vikramâditya married, according to the established rules.

Then, as Dêvakî bore a son Vâsudêva from Vasudêva, and the Mountain-daughter the god Guha from the Crescent-crested, so Bonthâ-Dêvî bore the king Taila, who surpassed [S'akra] in power, from Vikramâditya. Splitting the skulls of his enemies' elephants, breaking through the doors of his enemies' forts, and such like,—having by nature the strength of Hari,—were the sports of his childhood. By whom the two war-pillars (raṇa-stambhau) of Karkara, which belonged to the hostile Râshṭrakûṭa-kula,—from their great strength like the evident two striding feet of Kali, cruel and of firm construction, two sprouts of mischief to gurus, two shoots of the creeper of the fortunes of the Râshṭrakûṭa-kula unbroken by ? trouble,—were easily cut down in the field of battle. Who, as formerly the Earth which had been submerged by the sons of Diti, Mâdhava in the form of the original Boar lifted up, so raised up the royal fortunes of the favourites of the Châḷukya-kula, which had been sunk down by the frauds of the Râshṭrakûṭas.

From the king, the . . . . . Raṭṭa, the glory of the Râshṭrakûṭa-kula, was born, as Lakshmî from the ocean, a virgin named śrî-Jâkabbâ. The sun to the sky of the Châlukya-vamśa, the king Taila, married her, and their union was for the prosperity of the world, like that of moonlight and the moon. For from the king Taila, Jâkabbâ gave birth to śrîmat Satyâśraya, as Ambikâ Skanda from Tryambaka. His younger brother was named Daśavarmmâ, whose wife was the queen Bhâgyavatî.

Their son, possessed of a character for valour (vikrama), was the king Vikramâditya. On the death of his most noble father (or ? uncle, jyêshṭha-pituḥ) he bore up the ocean-girdled earth with his arm on high, as if the thread of an armlet, having dispersed the host of his enemies (or ? the hostile Kadambas).

After him was his younger brother, whose all-pervading white fame makes the lovely beauties of the gods fear a sudden rise of the full ocean,—the king Jagadêkamalla. Ever continuing in protection, abounding in skilful valour, tearing open the frontal globes of the lusty elephants those blinded with passion, possessed of great glory which shines over the world,—was that king Jayasimha. Through whom the whole world has become possessed of a good king; in whose white umbrella dwells kingly fortune; his feet bright with the lustre of the jewels in the crowns of hostile kings forced to bow down to him; a champion king over champions. From the sincerity in Taila's affection for the famous river Krishṇa (otherwise the black, krishṇa, viscidity, snêha, of oil, taila), the Kuntala-vishaya ever shines, fragrant with jasmin.[1]

Then, the radical destroyer of the family of his enemies by the power of the flames of his valour, was his son, the protector of the earth, Âhavamalla-Dêva. The Mâḷava king ever desires a maṇḍapa for his own abode; Chôḷa goes off to the shores of the ocean, swinging himself up in the groves of palm-trees; the great Kanyâkubja king hastily takes possession of a cave in the Hima mountain;—their minds being agitated on account of the cold heavy sky, while his splendour is unrestrained. Having completely destroyed the darkness his enemies by the expanded brightness of the collection of the unfaded qualities of Taila, he was clearly proclaimed by chief poets as by tradition the lamp of the Châḷukya-kula. Whose great might in uprooting the power of the .... son of Antaka, having conquered the Fish-bannered (Pâṇḍya), manifests his Châḷukya majesty.

From him was born, a cause of happiness to the world, devoted to love and valour, dear to the world of poets, a beautiful moon to the waterlilies the tremulous eyes of women,—a glory of the Châḷukya-vamśa, Bhuvanaikamalla. Who with the device of his sword inscribed (as it were) a plate with letters like the blown lotus, conferring on the great assured servitude from birth, granted by the goddess of victory. As if the capture of all regions was accomplished, his fame began to rest in the forenoon in a golden river raised above envy.

After that there was his younger brother, holding the fortune of kings and heroes to the utmost by contact with his feet glorious as with the beauty of the lotus; he brings the terror of pretended darkness into their eyes and again takes it away from the laughing eyes of hostile heroes;—Vikramâditya-Dêva. A king bearing on his shoulders the burden of the earth driven off by the noise of his drums from the bending lord of the serpents; who also enjoys to the highest sports stolen from various gods;—known as the famous and generous Tribhuvanamalla. [2] Setting forth in search of great wealth, this favourite of the earth, together with his brother, a fine army and the son of his friend, arrived through manifold dangers at the shore of the ocean, where the glory of his terrible fortune shone forth,—this Châḷukya Râma. Whose fame, preceding him to announce in every direction his march for the conquest of all regions, causes (the planet) Saturn, the preceptor of the three worlds, to say 'my glory is driven from me,' and thus to sink into the ocean.

[1] The allusion may perhaps be to the black soil of the country, with puns on the words krishṇa, taila and snêha.

[2] The two verses following contain many gaps and their meaning is not clear.

He, then, the favourite of earth and fortune, mahârâjâdhirâja paramêśvara parama-bhaṭṭâraka, glory of the Satyâśraya-kula, ornament of the Châḷukyas,—śrîmat Tribhuvanamalla-narêndra-Dêva, being in good health, it is commanded to all who are concerned,—you, the râshṭra-pati, vishaya-pati, grâma-kûṭaka, âyuktaka, niyuktaka, adhikârika, mahattara and all others,—that the royal genealogy (râjâvaḷi) being completed (samâpta) by us :—In the forty-eighth year, in figures 48, the year S'ôbhakrit being current, on the full moon day of Kârttika included therein, ... day,—the bestowal of many gifts by us having been finished,—at the time of dakshiṇâ (or donation to the Brahmans),—informing also the guru of Dravidâditya-daṇḍanâyaka, resident of Jayantî-pura, to the control of which he had appointed himself by his own victory,—for the god Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍyêśvara, set up by Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍya, and for the repairs of the temple, the tank named Châḷukya-samudra within the limits of Beḷtûr, in the Beḷtûr Twelve, belonging to the Kadamba Ten Thousand, occupied by S'iva Brahmans versed in the purâṇa-sâstras and vêda-sâstras,—and the Muggudde tank, within the limits of Aygûr, Belvanûr and Beḷtûr,—these two tanks, with their tolls, free from all imposts, together with all revenue, free from inspection for royalties, together with the hidden treasures and underground stores, with all rites, confirmed for three generations, for the enjoyment of the god, washing the feet of the Râmaṇḍa-dêva, named Saivâchârya-Vidyâśiva-paṇḍita, and with pouring of water into his hand, have been given. The boundaries of those two tanks (here follow the boundaries at great length).

Usual final verses, said to be uttered by the holy Vêdabyâsa and by Râmabhadra.

Great good fortune. S'rî.

Ôm. Obeisance to S'iva. Praise of S'ambhu. To the form of pure wisdom, beautiful with the three vêdas for his eyes, the means of acquiring happiness,—obeisance to the bearer of the half-moon. To the refuge of things visible, benefactor of the world, cause of preservation destruction and creation to all existence, soul of all things, victor over wrath and desire,—to thee obeisance, lord of the three worlds, S'iva.

Favourite of fortune, entire favourite of the goddess of Victory, entire favourite of the ocean-girdled Earth goddess, more than a favourite to the goddess of Victory,—was the emperor Vikrama-bhûpa. Those who claim to be rulers (âḷvar) he reduces to servants (âḷ); other kings who attack him with the sword (bâḷ) he seizes alive (bâḷ); those who still oppose him, causing delay, he surrounds with the flames of his valour;—his enemies being thus disposed of, what others will be hostile to the lord of Kuntala ? The Maru, Vaṅga, Aṅga, Kaḷiṅga, Gauḍa, Magadha, Pânchâḷa, Nêpâḷa, Barbbara, Saurâshṭra, Varâṭa, Lâṭa, Karahâṭa, Chchêdi, Kâśmîra, Gurjjara, Sindhu, Draviḷa, Ândhra, Mâḷava, Turushka, and other famous kings did he subdue with the might of the sword in his arm, the Châḷukya-chakrêśvara.

Be it well. When, (with usual Châḷukya titles), Tribhuvanamalla-Dêva's victorious kingdom was extending on all sides, to continue as long as sun moon and stars:—A dweller at his lotus feet,—shining with fortune, with the fortune of victory in great slaughter, and with the fortune of highest fame,—holding great pomp with the might of his arm, by royal fortune he made the whole weight of the earth encompassed by the shining fourth (!) ocean without division [subject] to king Vikrama by his prowess,—Pâṇḍya-bhûpa. To break the pride of Chôḷa, to harrass Ândhra, to cause Kaḷiṅga to fall, to frighten and attack the Aṅga, Vaṅga, and Magadha kings, to conquer Mâḷava in battle, to trample on the famous Gurjjara,—Pâṇḍya-bhûpâla is alone sufficient,—such was the confidence in him of the emperor Vikrama. A gale to the clouds mighty hostile chiefs, a thunderbolt to the mountains hostile chiefs, a Garuḍa to the serpent foreign chiefs, a Mukunda among chieftains, an ornament of chieftains, beautiful among chieftains, a frontlet of chieftains, – thus does the world ever praise Vîra-Pâṇḍya.

When (with epithets as in No. 2 above) the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍya-Dêva, putting down the evil and upholding all in the Noṇambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand, was in the residence of Beḷturu, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom:—If looked at, the most to be desired in the great Thousand nâḍ in Noḷambavâḍi was Beḷturu, shining with excellence, a birth-place for fortune, agreeable as the land of praiseworthy enjoyments, giving pleasure to all people, ... chief in beauty. The rulers of that village, foremost in all good qualities, earnest in the full performance of works of merit, in power of control jewels of all lords, were three lords (prabhugaḷ):—skilled in all arts, the famous Barmma-Gâvuṇḍa ; highly praised for his world-wide fame, Sankara-Gâvuṇḍa ; and Udeyam-arasa. Be it well. With all titles, possessed of all good qualities, chief of the Kannaḍa four thousand mummuri-daṇḍas, was S'aivara-Dêvi-Seṭṭi. (His praise)

In the 46th Châḷukya-Vikrama year, the year Plava &c,—the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Tribhuvana-malla-Pâṇḍya-Dêva having obtained it at the hands of the three prabhu-gâvuṇḍas of Beḷturu, S'aivara-

Dêvi-Seṭṭi, having paid local worship to those three prabhus, made, for the temple repairs of the god Dharmmêśvara, for the daily offerings, perpetual lamp, incense and oblations, and for the food of the temple priest, a grant (as specified). Thus much did S'aivara-Dêvi-Seṭṭi, washing the feet of the god Tribhuvanamalla-Pâṇḍyêśvara's temple priest Brahmaśiva-dêva, Mallikârjuna-guru and Rudraśakti-dêva, make over, with pouring of water ; those prabhus also joining in the grant.

Ôm. Obeisance to S'iva. Praise of S'ambhu. His form of pure wisdom, the three vêdas his eyes, the cause of the attainment of happiness,—obeisance to the bearer of the half-moon. Victorious are the valiant doings of Hari in the form of the great Fish, whose tail lashed the ocean into commotion.

Genealogy (râjâvaḷi).—From the lotus of Vishṇu's navel was born Brahma ; his son was Atri ; from his eye was born the Moon, an ornament to Îśvara's mighty crown, destroyer of heat to all people in the world. From that celebrated Sôma were born many kings in the world, the chief of whom was Yadu ; and the Yâdava-kuḷa was renowned throughout the world. In that line Chadi-Râja was celebrated as the head of all good qualities. That Chadi-Râja's famous son was ...... ; whose son, a king of great fame, was Râya .. Pâṇḍya. Râya-Pâṇḍya mahâ-maṇḍaḷêśvara's crowned queen was Sôvala-Dêvi, and their sons were Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya, Vîra-Pâṇḍya and Vijaya-Pâṇḍya ; after obtaining whom, she stood in the earth, having herself assumed it, in the office of mantri (or minister). Praise of her eldest son Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya, a Vidyâdhara among kings. Praise of his younger brother Vîra Pâṇḍya. Younger than those two, sole hero in the world, was Vijaya-Pâṇḍya ; (his praise).

Be it well. When, entitled to the five big drums, the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, boon lord of Kânchî-pura, sun in the sky of the Yadu-vamśa, head-jewel of good warriors, the points of his crown formed of separate large sapphires and his victorious arms adorned with golden bracelets, having in mere sport subdued the seven Koṅkaṇas, having set up in the Kaṇaka mountain a pillar of victory with the fish crest, having driven away the confidence of his enemies in their valour, having a treasury filled with many jewels set with pearls purified by the Tâmbraparṇṇî, having a pleasure-house in the sandal trees on the slopes of the Malaya mountain as if placed in the middle of Nandana, having enslaved the world of goblins and demons, having taken possession of the territories of many kings, having with ease captured many water and hill forts, having subjected the brave chiefs of his enemies, his mind fixed in thought on the feet of the god S'ankara-Nârâyaṇa, an ornament of the Yâdavas, sun to the lotus the Pâṇḍya-kula, champion in cutting on both sides, defeater of the designs of Râjiga-Chôḷa, mighty in energy,—adorned with these and all titles, the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Vijaya-Pâṇḍya-Dêva was in the residence of Uchchaṅgi, putting down the evil and upholding the good in the Noḷamba-vâḍi Thirty-two Thousand, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—

Praise of S'ambhu.

When, (with usual Châḷukya titles), Tribhuvanamalla-Dêva's victorious kingdom was extending on all sides, to continue as long as sun moon and stars :—

And,—by order of the dweller at his lotus feet, entitled to the five big drums, mahâ-sâmantâdhipati, mahâ-prachaṇḍa-daṇḍanâyaka, granter of boons to supplicants, gracious to the good, who having spoken says no more, purifier of his gôtra, a son to the wives of others, to [horses] a Rêvanta, death to the enemy, of mighty energy, his father's lion (ayyana singam),—with these and all other titles, the great minister, the bâṇasa-verggaḍe-daṇḍanâyaka (or, great chief of the kitchen), Anantapâlayya,—adorned with the rank of great minister commanding the burden of the whole kingdom, of exalted honour, having acquired the three powers of government, who having spoken says no more, purifier of his gôtra, son to the wives of others, his father's lion,—with these and all other titles, the manager of the fixed pannâya (a branch of the customs), Bammarasa, was ruling the pannâya of the Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand in peace, putting down the evil and upholding all :—

Praise of Bammarasa. In Koṅgaḷi-nâḍ, among the dwellings of the excellent Kadambaḷi Thousand, he had given, for a temple, a Jinâlaya, a grove, a tank, a well and a satra, ? a tenth from his pannâya customs-dues. And (now) for the decoration and service of the god Sarppêśvara, the lord of the Mountain king's daughter, he granted a dharaṇa, or five paṇa, a month from the same.

In the 33rd year of the Châḷukya-Vikrama-kâla, the year Sarvvadhâri &c,—he made the gransts (repeated), washing the feet of Nîlakaṇtha-paṇḍita. Usual final verses.

Praise of the Jina śâsana. Praise of Jambû-dvîpa, the Bharata-land, and the Karṇṇâṭaka-vishaya.

The master of many nations, in great valour the lord of Lanka, a sun in the sky the Yâdava line, a jewel casket of all liberal qualities, ... was the king Râmachandra. His descent. Mentions Jayasimha, and in connection with him the Mâḷava . .. Magadha Vaṅga Kaliṅga Chêra Nêpâla and other kings. Then [? Kandara-Râya] and his brother Mahadêva. Kandara-Râya's son was Râma-Dêva.

A dweller at his lotus feet, was Kûchi-Râja, and the râja-guru was Jina-bhaṭṭâraka-dêva. Their descent. In the line of Vîrasêna and Jinasênâchâryya ? were Guṇabhadra-yôgi ? and Jinasêna-yogi. Then follows praise of the muni Padmasêna-yatipa, son of Mahaśêna.

Faithful to the two lotus feet of that munîśvara, was Kûchi-Râja. His descent. He was the son of S'im[ha]-Dêva and Mallâmbikâ, his younger brother was Chaṭṭa, his wife Lakshmâ, and he was a worshipper of the lotus feet of the yogîśvara Padmasêna. Chaṭṭa-nṛipa and Kûcha-daṇḍêśa were like Râma and Lakshmana, or like Bharata and Bâhubali. Praise of his wife Lakshmî-Dêvi. His son was Voṇa-Dêva, faithful to the two feet of Padmasêna.

Praise of Bêtûr, situated in the middle of the Pâṇḍya-dêśa. Praise of its mannegar, śeṭṭi-guttar, gauḍas, and ûr-oḍeyar. Mention is made of Mâchi's son Haripa-Gauḍa, Mâka's son Yôga-Gauḍa, and Sôma's son Râma-Gauḍa.

And when that Kûchi-Râja, having received the circle of Bêtur and other villages, was at peace,—his wife having attained to the happiness in paradise of freedom from transmigration (svarggâ-pavargga-saukhyam),—on the advice of Padmasêna-bhaṭṭâraka, he erected a Lakshmî-Jinâlaya. And Kûcha assigned this Jina-mandira to the Pogale-gachchha of the S'êna-gaṇa of the śrî-Mûla-saṅgha.

And Kûchi-Râja (on the date specified) having obtained Huṇiseyahaḷḷi as an agrahâra, from the auspicious hands of vîra-Mahadêva-Râya, for the Lakshmî-Jinâlaya, with a permanent śrôtriya of 12 honnu, he came and by means of a śâsana granted it for the god Pârśvanâtha of that Jinâlaya, washing the feet of Padmasêna-bhaṭṭâraka-dêva. And, accompanied by the Gauḍas, he also gave a shop and an areca garden. Boundaries.

Obeisance to Gaṇâdhipati. May it be fortunate. Praise of S'ambhu.

There being some who say that beside Hari there is no god in the world, and some who say that beside Hara there is no god in the world,—to remove those doubts of mankind, they assumed with affection in Kûḍalûr the glorious double form of Harihara : may he protect us.

Be it well. To the chief lord of all worlds, the chief god and supreme lord of the gods, destroyer of the contradictory statements of S'aivas, Vaishnavas and others, the bestower of a boon on Mârkkandêya, the single incarnation of Hari and Hara, tearer asunder of the pride of Guhâsura, his two lotus feet placed on the chest of Guhâsura, worshipped by the three worlds of heaven earth and hell, bestower of their desires on the faithful, granting the gift of being without fear to the dwellers in the auspicious forest Guhâraṇya, residing on the eastern bank of the Tungabhadrâ, boon lord of Kûḍa-lûr-pura, the god Harihara,—the betel-bearer of Sadâsiva-Râya seated on the throne in Vidyânagara,—the Sindhu Gôvinda, champion over adulterers, terrible with his white ensign, boon lord of Maṇi-nâgapura, Baippa-Nâyaka's son Krishnappa-Nâyaka, (on the date specified), in order that merit might accrue to both his father Baippa-Nâyaka and his mother Koṇḍamma, made a grant of the Kâḍaji village in the Bilichôḍu-sîme for ghî, for the chatra and necessary offerings of the god Harihara, with freedom from customs dues, watch, maniha and payika ; and felt his desires to be accomplished.

Obeisance to Harihara. Praise of S'ambhu.

His form entwined with the vines the shining arms of S'rî and Gaurî, the mighty tree of plenty Harihara do I adore. A pearl ornament for the beautiful (hair)-parting of the fair ones S'rî and Gaurî, a brilliant wishing stone in granting the desires of the needy, a head-jewel of the upanishads, the sole ornament-jewel of the immortal gods,—may he ever grant protection, Harihara, the preserver of the three worlds. May the sportive Boar form of Hari, on whose big tusk, resembling a jasmin bud, the earth shone like a bee, grant protection. May the Earth, rightly called the firm, the jewel-wombed, the mine of hidden wealth, the fertile with crops, the sustainer of all,—ever be for your prosperity. Ever adorning the crest of S'ambhu with only one digit, may he grant protection, Chandra (the moon), with full digits, the own brother of Lakshmî.

Seeing that the time was filled with kali (or sin), Vishṇu formed the intention of being born in the Lunar line under the name of Saṅgama; the lady of whose brilliant fame was like an ornament of musk adorning the brow of a sky as dark as the honge tree. In whose line was born, marked with the signs of a destined protector of the world, like Râma from Daśaratha, the king Bukka. When he with his mighty arms supported the burden of the world, a dispute arose between the lords of S'rî and Gaurî as to (Âdisêsha) the bed of one and the ornament of the other.[1] His son was the king named Harihara, in the milk sea of whose fame the Brahmâṇḍa (or mundane egg) floated as a bubble. The fire of his valour is increased by the rain of the tears of hostile kings' wives, as a flame when fed with ghî. With the prescribed ceremonies had he made the sixteen great gifts, the not a little wealthy king Hariharêśvara.

From him sprang the king named Dêva-Râja, a punisher of the evil, as Sênâni from Dhûrjjaṭi. When he went forth to war, the dust raised by the hard hoofs of his troops of horse produced, like the great serpent, an eclipse of the sun, while his enemies bathed in the river of blood drawn forth by the clouds of his arrows and went to mukti—thus did the king Dêva-Râya shine in the earth. When the king Dêva-Râja was ruling the earth, thieving was only heard of, the springing forth of buds (otherwise, of evil) was only in the groups of vines in the forest, fear only among enemies, waves (otherwise, ruin) only in the rivers, cold (otherwise, old age) only in the water, division (otherwise, cutting off of feet) was only in verses, extracting many meanings (otherwise, all kinds of property) only in collections of poems,—these (evils) did not exist among mortals. By his fame the three worlds were so whitened that the milk ocean gave up the fear of Agastya, Âdiśêsha lost interest in his thousand heads and various forms, and S'iva gave up the thought that he had a moon of only one digit on his head,—thus does the king named Dêva-Râja shine. Conqueror of the hosts of his enemies, to all branches of learning Bhôja, in bounty the tree of plenty, in wealth Kubêra, to young women Manôja, a supporter of all the arts, a devoted worshipper of S'iva,—thus shines Dêva-Râja.

(On the date specified, given in two ways), the râjâdhirâja râja-paramêsvara vîra-pratâpa Dêva-Râya-mahârâya made a settled agreement for the god Harihara and for the Brahmans living in the Harihara-kshêtra.

[1] That is, their occupation was gone, and neither required him.

On the Brahmans at their own expense building a dam to the river Haridrâ within the boundary of the god Harihara, and leading a channal through the god's land to Harihara; of all the lands irrigated by the so led channel, as far as it may go, two parts (thirds) shall be for the god Harihara, and one part (third) to the Brahmans who at their own expense constructed the channel. That enjoyment (of the land) may be held in peace according to this rule, free of all imposts, as long as sun and moon endure, was a copper śâsana given.

In order that there may be known with certainty what Brahmans have a right to the shares under this agreement, their names, sûtras and gôtras are here written; those who after two-thirds of the land have been assigned to the god Harihara have shares in the remaining one-third: (here follow details relating to 108 Brahmans). Also for offerings to Harihara one share was given; and for feeding 5 Brahmans, two shares:—altogether 111 shares.

And for carrying out the work of the dam to the Haridrâ and the channel, the Brahman shareholders being pleased, gave to Buḷḷapa, son of Jagannâtha of the Gautama-gôtra, from their own share, 2 khaṇḍugas of rice-land in one place.

Here follow details of the villages on the irrigation channel and repetition of the agreement in Kannaḍa. Also directions that the annual repairs, and other expenses arising from the act of God or of Government, should be borne in the same proportion of two-thirds by the god and one third by the Brahmans Also that the water of the channel should be distributed in those same proportions; and the expense of wells and tanks formed under the channel, or expense connected with the river, should be borne in the same way. Copied on this stone śâsana from the rules given in the copper śâsana.

May the śâsana of this agreement (particulars repeated) of the king Dêva-Râja prevail.

Praise of Dêva-Râja and of his minister Nâgapa. To these two the minister Jagannâtha, son of Manga-Râja, made application, and obtaining the order, gave directions to his son the minister Buḷḷapa to carry out the work. Verses in praise of Jagannâtha and Buḷḷapa: and the god Harihara.

At the time of consecrating the Haridrâ dam, the Brahmans who were shareholders under the god Harihara's channel, gave to Bharatârâdhya, son of Kṛishṇamallâchâryya, of the Gautama-gôtra and Ruk-śâkha, 10 maṇuvina koḷaga of rice-land, 5 from the god and 5 from the Brahmans.

To the composer of this śâsana, the Brahmans who were shareholders under the god Harihara's channel, bowing down, granted 8 maṇuvina koḷaga of rice-land, 4 from the god and 4 from the Brahmans,—to Bâyaṇâchâryya, son of Mallikârjjunâchâryya, of the Kâśyapa-gôtra, Yajuś-śâkha and Chala-sampradâya.

To S'ankara-bhaṭṭa, who performed the aṅga-pradakshiṇa at the time of the consecration of the dam, they gave 4 maṇuvina koḷaga of riceland, 2 from the god and 2 from the Brahmans.

Imprecations. May the god Harihara (his praises) protect this. Benedictions.

Bearing the srîvatsa and the s'as'ivatsa, [progenitor and destroyer] of Manmatha, clad in saffron garments and unclad,[1] —the glorious form of Harihara do I adore.

Concerning the glory of the great Ânanda-nidhi (fund or bank of happiness) founded by the mahârâjâdhirâja râja-paramêśvara vîra-pratâpa vîra-Achyuta-Dêva-mahârâya, two verses are (here) written:—

[1] The epithets combine the characteristics of both Hari or Vishṇu, and Hara or S'iva

(On the date specified), did the king Achyuta form the Ânanda-nidhi, making the Brahmans like Dhanada (Kubêra), and giving pleasure to Mâdhava (Vishṇu). Nourished by all manner of merit, guarded by surrounding demons (bhûta), in the possession of the assembly of the good, ever safe against loss,—celebrated as a new thing, devoted to great and important works, was the great Ânanda-nidhi,—what funds can bear comparison with this?

Obeisance to Harihara. Obeisance to S'ambhu, beauteous with the châmara-like crescent moon kissing his lofty head, the original foundation-pillar of the city of the three worlds.

The abode of the greatness of S'rî (otherwise poison) and of mahimâ,[1] bearer in his arm of the discus (otherwise the serpent race), adorned with the king of birds (Garuḍa) or the king of the stars (the moon), the granter of desires (or the destroyer of Kâma), filled with affection for Arjjuna (or brilliant with white lustre), of a form beloved by the cowherds (or by the bull), of lustrous pure lotus eyes (or with the sun and moon as his pure eyes),[2] the original male, the supreme lord, the crowning ornament of the gods, Harihara,—may he with affection ever protect the earth. Some saying that beside Hari there is no god in the earth, and some saying that beside Hara there is no god in the earth, in order to remove the doubts of mankind, was assumed with glory in Kûḍalûr the one form of Harihara,—may he with affection preserve us. The celebrated S'iva acquired the form of Vishṇu, Vishṇu acquired the great and famous form of S'iva :—in order that this saying of the Vêda might be fully established, in Kûḍaḷ there stood forth in a single form, praised by the world, Harihara,—may he protect the earth. Irreproachable, without change, of unsurpassed peace and joy, without beginning or end, the perfect, the form of wisdom, without speech or organ of sense,—that god without form who stood forth in this world with a form in the famous Guhâraṇya,—may he protect the earth,—Harihara, receiver of the praises of the chief gods.

The goddess of fortune dancing on the stage of his breast, the goddess of valour being in his victorious arms, the goddess of speech being established in his lotus mouth, his commands being borne on the crowns of hostile kings, his pure fame spreading abroad,—he ruled the whole earth as far as the shore of the ocean, the mighty among kings, Nârasiṃha.

To describe the descent of that pratâpa-chakravartti :—The śruti (or vêda) being his throne, the lightning glances of Lakshmî being like flashing châmaras, the clustres of bright jewels of the myriad gods bowing before him being like the ârati (or waving of lamps), Nârada reciting in the assembly the praises of the excellence of his glory,—Padmanâbha shone forth, the sole tree of plenty in the world. In the lotus navel of that god's belly was born Padmagarbbha, with the four vêdas as his four mouths, the destined male for the creation of the world. To the lotus heart of Kamalâsana was born, as if a most fragrant perfume, Atri of unspotted virtue. His rays filled with nectar, Sôma was born to him. To Sôma, the delight of all the world, who by the play of his rays increases the love of the ocean, was born Saumya, named Budha, who eloquently described the training of elephants. From the famous Budha sprang Purûrava ; from him Âyu. From Nahusha and from Yayâti was the distinguished Indu-kula (or Lunar race), and the famous Yadu-kula from Yadu. In it was born Saḷa.

He, along with the muni, was with devotion worshipping the celebrated Vâsantike of S'aśaka-pura, free from fear, in order to obtain all royal power ; when, lashing the ground with the end of its tail, emitting lines of sparks from its eyes bursting with rage, its tongue hanging out like a river of flame, its teeth gleaming like flashes of lightning,—a tiger suddenly sprang forth, unfettered, of astonishing aspect, roaring with terrific noise. On the muni saying hoy Saḷa (strike, Sala!) that tiger, he hit it with the seḷe (or cane), killed it and became Hoysaḷa. Vinayâditya was a shining glory in the sky of the line of Hoysaḷa kings. His son was Eṟeyaṅga, who on those who submitted to him showered gold like rain, but to the stubborn who would not submit was like a thunderbolt.[1] Eṟeyaṅga's sons were Ballâḷa, Biṭṭi-Dêva and Udayâditya.

1 One of the ashṭa-bhûti or eight attributes of S'iva.

2 All the epithets are intended to include the joint attributes of Hari and Hara, or Vishṇu and S'iva.

Among them the king Vishṇu shone forth as the favourite of the earth. The sound of his ḍhakka drum gave a shock (ḍhakka) to the breasts of the undisturbed gods at the points of the compass; the sea was covered up with the dust raised by his armies; and on his expeditions of victory in the world he summoned the hostile kings by proclamation to come and perform the three kinds of forced labour (biṭṭi) for him,—Biṭṭiga. When like a jaṭṭiga (or wrestler) Biṭṭiga marched forth to war, Kañchi turned its back towards him, Koṅgu immediately gave up its place, the great Virâṭa-kôṭe cried out, Koyatûr was tossed about and ruined, the famous Chakragoṭṭa pledged its word, the Seven Koṅkaṇas, casting away their weapons, plunged into the sea.

To that Vishṇuvarddhana and to the Lakshmî of his kingdom, Lakumâ-Dêvi, was born the king Nârasiṃha, a lion in war. Stronger than Bhîma, more resolute than the son of Bhṛigu, more generous than Bali, purer than Gaṅge, firmer than the mountain-chains, profounder than the ocean, more glorious than the sun,—eager to secure victory in war was Nṛisiṃha. As if to the keen edge of the emperor Narasiṃha's sharp sword love had wrought a miracle, so was born the valiant Ballâḷa. All the land is turned to clay with rivers of blood, when will it dry up? every way is blocked up with dead bodies, when will a road be cleared? when will Mâri again feel hunger (after consuming so many corpses)?—thus did king Ballâḷa cause it to be said in his slaughter of the Sêvuṇa army in battle. Though he came with as many as 200,000 infantry[2] armed with thunderbolts, and 12,000 cavalry, conspicuous with high saddles and jewelled breast-plates, vîra-Ballâḷa-Râya on his one elephant charged the Sêvuṇa king's army, put them to flight and slaughtered them from Soraṭûr to the bank of the Kṛishṇavêṇî river. When a host of hostile kings with great pride formed ? a league against him with fixed determination, how can I describe the might with which Giridurgga-malla suddenly besieged and took the forts within Erambarage, the honoured Virâṭa's fort, Gutti, Beḷḷiṭṭage, Râṭṭapaḷḷi, Soraṭûr, and Kurugôḍ?

To the brave king Ballâḷa and to Padmala-mâdêvi was born king Nṛisiṃha, with the form of love, a favourite of fame, an ocean of learning, a death noose to powerful hostile kings, the only tree of plenty in the world. Can his victories in war be counted as one, two, three? I will only describe how the Sêvuṇas coming against him, in vexation died. As there was no part of the Kuru land on which Bhîma had not put down his club, so there was no battle field on which the brave king Nṛisiṃha's state elephant had not trod; amama! bâppu! victory was to him his only roll (or pay list). The lotus heads of Vikramapâla and Pâvusa swung about among the poles of the flags of the golden ? howdah (dencheya) of his elephant as if nodding in approval of his valour, and saying—"Swift art thou, sole hero in the world; ride on, my king and father, the Yâdava-Nârâyaṇa Nârasiṅga; bravo!"[3] When churning the ocean with the Amara mountain, the gods and asuras obtained for that one elephant; the ornament of the Yadu-kula, king Narasiṃha, when, surrounding the great ocean of the Pâṇḍya, Makara, and haughty Kâḍava army, he churned it with the Mandara of his arm, obtained many proud elephants. First he slew Vikramapâla and Pâvusa in one direction;

[1] Mostly puns on the word eṟagu.

[2] Sutthaneyar—the exact meaning of this word is not known; the description seems to imply that they had fire-arms.

[3] The expressions used are all in Mahratti.

then in another direction he made that Kâḍava-Râya, Magara and the Pâṇḍya king roll on the ground, and captured their proud rutting elephants; being pleased (with him), he placed Chôḷa before him and bound the crown upon him; and in Sêtu did Narasiṃha by his valour set up a pillar of victory.

Be it well. When, the refuge of all the world, favourite of earth and fortune, the mahârâjâdhirâja paramêśvara, boon lord of Dvârâvatî-pura, sun in the sky of the Yâdava-kula, crest-jewel of omniscience, râja of the Male râjas, champion over the hill chiefs, gaṇḍa-bhêruṇḍa, unassisted brave, solitary hero, S'anivâra-siddhi, Giridurgga-malla, in energy in war Râma, a lion to the rutting elephant Adiyama, a thunderbolt to the great rock Pâṇḍya, Janârddana to the Kaiṭabha Kâḍava-Râya, uprooter of Makara-Râya's kingdom, setter up of Chôḷa-Râya's kingdom;—Hoysaḷa vîra-Nârasiṃha-Dêva, surrounded with a host of great chieftains, generals, feudatories and women, was in his own royal city Dôrasamudra, ruling the kingdom of the earth in peace and wisdom :—

Like heat to that pratâpa-chakravartti's glory, like sharpness to his weapon, like the hidden force (śakti) to his counsel (mantra), like impenetrable armour to his kingdom, devoting his mind with undivided purpose and possessing the rank of great minister, holding fast the pride of his flag and his title of tolagada-kamba (unshaken pillar), the theme of song, supporter of the good, author of poems, promoter of fame, an ornament of poets, a moon to the vêdas, rejoicing in liberality, the abode of fortune, Vaishṇava chakravartti, of a form beloved by the world, true by nature,—was Pôlâḷva-Dêva: to describe whose greatness;—

With the tinkle of the shining golden bracelets of courtesans, with the sound of the bells of rutting elephants, with the united strains of the songs full of sentiment of the band of singers,—giving joy to the people of the world, a continual source of pleasure, was Nâraṇapura in the Andhradêśa. In that royal city, a favourite of fortune, of wide-spread fame, in form Manôja, rejoicing in heroism, was the noble Atti-Râja, of exalted renown. A vine of plenty to her attendants, fortune to supplicants, was Navilâḍeyakka. To whom and to Attyarasa was born the Murântaka to titled generals, Pôlâḷva. In war, a weapon; in giving, a hand; in donations and council, a trustworthy minister with large eye; in the conquest of foreign forts and tribes, and in the court circle, a jewelled ornament;—he became the chief minister to the famous Ballâḷa and to king Nârasiṃha,—Pôlâḷva-daṇḍâdhipa. In war he was a shield against the four-fold armies of the southern king; in the assembly, all the councillors being like statues, he was the tongue in consultation;—you councillors and generals know how many others there are who can compare for ability as to business and the sword, with Pôlâḷva. That there are no other kings or ministers do I raise my finger;—among kings that Nârasiṃha, among councillors the renowned Pôlâḷva, these two are alone in valour and business in a crooked time;—who was it that with bravery defeated Bâṇôdara there, and who like you guarded the whole of Hoysaḷa's empire here. As if Barmma (Brahma) had moulded him with truth, opened his eyes with unequalled learning, painted him with fortune, and conferred upon him long life with doing good to others,—so in truth, intelligence, fortune and benefaction, he alone became the priest of the world in king Narasiṃha's camp (or capital),—the minister Pôlâḷva-Dêva. In his thought there was no division, in his word no double, in liberality no delay, in love of virtue no partiality, in the business of his ruler no greed of gain, in prosperity no pride,—Pôlâlva being thus praised, can any other be praised? say, brother :—after taking milk can anything else be taken?[1] This learning and fortune without envy, this impossible youthfulness and beauty, this conduct pure as the Ganges, this valour and loftiness, would never have found a place in you, Pôlâḷva-daṇḍâdhipa, if Padmagarbbha had not granted some vow formerly performed by some one; else how could one like you be obtained? Fame which leaped over the world, greatness which touched the clouds, profundity which rivalled the ocean, council which added to the wealth of his master's kingdom, fortune which delighted the world, faith in Achyuta which derided the glory of sâyujya,—such were in him—Pôlâlva-daṇḍâdhipa.

Be it well. (On the date specified), the great minister of the setter up of Chôḷa, vîra-Nârasiṃha-Dêva,—Pôlâḷva-daṇḍanâtha caused to be made a temple for the god Harihara, shining with 115 golden kalaśas. To describe the beauty of that dwelling of the gods :—

Of the kings of old famous for wealth, who in all the ages were able to make the temple of Harihara ? But he made it so as to stand firm, and gained renown,—the ornament of the world, king Narasiṃha's minister Pôlâḷva-daṇḍâdhipa. Brightly adorned with statues as if the women the points of the compass were standing there, with groups of lofty pinnacles like mountain-chains, with shining disks of the sun and moon, and with golden kalaśas, did this son of a righteous Dharmma-râja, Pôlâḷva-daṇḍâdhipa, have the temple of Harihara made. Is it a hill or the tower, is it the sun or a kalaśa, is it the horizon or a wall, is it the famous women at the points of the compass or groups of beautiful statues,—one cannot look long at it,—thus causing the people to exclaim, did Pôlâḷva-daṇḍâdhipa wonderfully make the temple of Harihara. This is like the sun an abode of lotuses, like gifts to the worthy in lofty fame, like lakes in waterlilies of virtue, like the regent elephants in being hung with bells,—causing one thus to say, did he make the temple of Harihara,—the Yadu king's daṇḍanâtha, Pôlâḷva-daṇḍâdhipa. With ?smiling faces, with waterlilies, with smooth columns, with jewelled cornices, with groups of tracery, with bells, and with varied captivating statuettes, the pillars of the raṅga-sthaḷa were on all sides an ornament to the temple of Harihara. The renowned Vaishṇava chakravartti, this celebrated Pôlâḷva-daṇḍêśa is the only one who obtained success with the collyrium of merit,[1] if not how could he suddenly acquire the treasure to create the lofty mansion of Harihara, shining with a hundred golden kalaśas ? Formerly Hermmâḍi-Râya wanted to make a temple for Harihara, but stopping him in a dreeam, saying " A faithful one will be born hereafter, who will make my abode ; you stop,"— and Harihara having with affection said, "You only make my temple in a suitable manner, Pôlâḷva," he made it. The temple of Harihara which Purupuchchha, Sagara, Bhagîratha, Kârttivîryârjjuna, Bharata, Purûrava, Prithu, Dilîpa, and other chief early kings were unable before to make, Pôlâḷva-daṇḍâdhipa made, like a hill adorned with golden kalaśas. The Harihara-kshêtra being of greater efficacy then the celebrated Sêtu, Vâraṇâsi or Kurukshêtra, he there made the temple of Harihara, rivalling Mêru, touching the sky with golden kalaśas,—Pôlâḷva-daṇḍâdhipa.

To s'ruti the meaning, to smriti the life, of mantra the power, of tantra the support, were one hundred and four Brahmans, the guardians like adamantine armour of the dharmma of that kshêtra, in which Pôlâḷva of great merit made the temple of Harihara. And at the four gates of Harihara-kshêtra which is called Guhâraṇya and celebrated as Dvârâvati, are Bânavaḷḷi named Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa, Elevaḷḷi, Jigaḷe and Hâlehâḷu. Pôlâḷva granted Bânavaḷḷi to the 104, free of all imposts. And what can I say, in Bânavaḷḷi did Pôlâḷva make a temple of Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa, and granted for it 4 shares.

In the two forms of dharmma you Pôlâḷva are certainly the chief. Listen, among those who were formerly, those who shall come in future, and those who now are, who has obtained such merit ? Who like you has related the Hari-charita in shaṭpadi (verses) ? Who like you has made such a marvellous temple of Harihara. Usual final verses. Great good fortune.

Obeisance to Harihara. Praise of S'ambhu.

May it be for the prosperity of the three worlds, the form of Harihara, fortunate in the side-long glances of both Indirâ and the Mountain-daughter. The god who was the destroyer of the Daitya race, the supreme S'iva, destroyer of the pride (darppa) of Kandarppa, the terrifier of Lankâ, who cut short the purpose of the Kuru king, the only one in the world, the destroyer of Tripura, a Kâlântaka to the fears (âtanka) of the three worlds, destroyer of Guha who had subjected all,—Harihara, may he protect the whole world. He who in the time of friendly quarrel, the lord of the Mountain-virgin and of Ramâ, does obeisance for the favour of Bhavânî, and lest it should cause her lotus feet to close up, quickly assumes the line of a waning moon,—is resplendent. May he grant prosperity, whose moonlight rays overspread as with a veil the swelling breasts of Ramâ, attracting the notice of Harihara's lotus face, causing Girijâ to cast reproachful glances in her anger.

Ever victorious is Achyuta-Dêva-Râya, whose fame completely filling the three worlds burst the mundane egg into two parts, which shone miraculously in both halves like the rising sun and the full moon. Who else is there like the king Achyuta in quickly granting relief, for by nature he gives mukti to those who are not his friends (that is, he slays his enemies), whereas Hari who is also Achyuta gives mukti even to Vyâsa and others his friends only after service and desire for a long time.

When the râjâdhirâja râja-paramêśvara, champion over three kings, terror to foreign kings, the Suratrâṇa of Hindû kings,—with these and other titles, that king Achyuta was ruling the whole world :—

There was, employed in all the king Achyuta-Dêva-Râya's affairs, the king Achyuta-Mallapaṇṇa, an ocean of mercy, whose mind was fixed like a bee on the lotus feet of him whose crest is the young moon, the possessor of fortune from good deeds in the worship of Girîśa. This king Achyuta-Mallapaṇṇa having with fear made application to his own lord the king at a suitable time,—with a view to his merit and fame,—he said "I give it,"—and granted in permanence the fertile village named Kundavâḍa, for Harihara united with S'rî and Girijâ. (On the date specified), at the time of the moon's eclipse, (with praises), the king Achyuta-mahârâya-Mallapaṇṇa,—giving directions to (with praises) Akkapa, who had obtained the authority of the king in the agrahâras and all the temples of the Brahmans that were residents of the Harihara village,—granted for (the god) Harihara on the bank of the Tungabhadrâ river, the village of Kundavâḍa in the Uchchaṅgi-vênṭhe of the Pâṇḍya-nâḍ, with all usual details, giving it the second name of Achyutarâyêndra-Mallâpuram, to be used for the midday established offering and for the food of the Brahmans in the satra.

The Vâdhula and Yâjusha learned man, born in the Kôṭiśanvaya, Timmaṇârâdhya's son named Mallaṇârâdhya made the verses in this sâsana by order of the lord.

Obeisance to Harihara. Praise of S'ambhu.

The father of Smara and the Elephant-faced, the destroyer of Mura and Pura, wearer of the serpent and the moon, freeing from fear by his splendid boons,—Harihara do I adore,—a pure ocean of mercy.

Be it well. By order of, the rod of the arm which is an ornament to all the world, the râja-paramêśvara of the present time, the sole master of the eastern western southern and northern oceans, a serpent to kings who break their word, the Hindû-râya Suratrâṇa, a cage of adamant to refugees, vîra-pratâpa Harihara-mahârâya's son vîra-pratâpa-Dêva-Râya-mahârâya's great minister Nâgaṇṇa-daṇṇâyaka.

At first, by order of king Dêva-Râya, Buḷḷa-Râja built a strong dam on the river Haridrâ, and so as to gain the applause of the world provided at his favourite dwelling place the means of living together, for the god, the Brahmans and all the people: and living by that property the company of Brahmans were in great comfort. But some time after, the dam was breached, and the Brahmans were in great distress at the loss of their several means of livelihood.

Then Buḷḷa-Râja made inquiry as to what man of merit there was who would restore the Haridrâ dam which he had made by order of vîra-pratâpa-Dêva-Râya-mahârâya's great minister Nâgaṇṇa-daṇṇâyaka, and which was breached,—and having seen and ascertained, looking upon the commander of the whole of the râjâdhirâja râja-paramêśvara vîra-pratâpa râya-Bukka-Râja's son vîra-pratâpa-Dêva-Râya-mahârâya's army, a devoted worshipper of the lotus feet of the Sômêśvara-liṅga, of fortunate qualities, Boppa-Dêva's son, a tree of paradise to eulogists, the flower-arrowed (god of love) to young women, fierce in war, skilled in negotiation separation and others the four modes of policy, protector of right dharmma, fond of singing,—Châma-Nṛipâla, said,—"As the Haridrâ dam which I made by order of Dêva-Râya-mahârâya has breached, the competence for the decorations and illuminations of the god Harihara, with that of the dwellers in that region and the Brahmans, has ceased. Helpers of dharmma by reconstructing it, except you there is no one else at this time. You are well acquainted with what the s'âstras say as to the unlimited reward of such a great work of merit. You must restore this dharmma."

Listening to his words, and bowing (compliance), he undertook it, and (on the date specified) gave into the hands of the Brahmans of the god Harihara and the hands of Buḷḷarasa the money which that dam would cost, saying "You have the dam built in my stead," and sent them away with his advice (in the matter).

To describe the great glory of Châma-nṛipâla who thus made the restoration:—Verses in his praise (containing nothing of importance), giving him the title of gaṇḍara-gûḷi.

To describe the greatness of him who expounded all the dharmma to Châma-nṛipa entitled to such praise; who took the management of the construction of the great dam and made it; of the Kamme-kula and Gautama-gôtra; the son of Jagannâtha and Chennâmbikâ; (with other praises),—Buḷḷa-Râja:—As granting with pleasure the desires of the learned, our Buḷḷa-chamûpa is famed in the world, his gently smiling mouth filled with soft words, the abode of good fortune, to women Madana (the god of love). The heroic Bhagîratha brought the Ganges of the sky to the earth it is said,—what power was there in that? Listen; the Haridre, which was lower than the sky and unable to flow anywhere, he bound, seized, stopped and brought to Harîśa-pura, gaining fame in the world,—Buḷḷa-chamûpa;—what fortune was his! The Haridrâ river, which by mingling with the waters of the Tuṅgabhadrâ lost its glory, he with great ease made to approach the feet of Harîśa, together with areca-nuts, tamâla plants, mango trees laden with fruit, arbours of vines, and lotuses covered with bees, bestowing happiness and winning fame,—the best of ministers, Buḷḷapa. The channel flowing along by itself, filled with red water, was as if Buḷḷa-nṛipa had adorned the earth with the red lead of the forehead in a broad hair-parting. When you said Stop!—at your command she stood still. When you called, she at once came on, flowing through the channel, the Haridre;—how can I breathe your virtue, Buḷḷa-Râja. Seeing the energy with which you built that dam and led from it the shining channel, those Brahman families look upon you with exultation, as the favoured lover of the earth. Then follows a verse partly effaced, which seems to say that Buḷḷa made a grant of the unirrigated fields to which the channel from the Haridra had now been led, together with the increased revenue now to be derived from them.

The dam which he formerly made having breached, he himself obtained the means and carried out its restoration,—Buḷḷa-nṛipa. May it be prosperous. May it be fortunate.

By the favour of the god Harihara, he wrote (i. e. engraved, baredam) the choice sentences and verses of this śâsana,—the moon to the ocean the Manu-kula, Mâchi-Dêva's son Dharaṇôja.

Obeisance to Gaṇêśa, on the drops of rut from whose temples the bees swarming make them appear double. Victorious is the original Boar, by whom was lifted up the earth, its standing crops appearing as if contact with his body caused its hair to stand erect with ecstasy. Skilled in securing as joint consorts both the daughter of the ocean (Lakshmî) and the daughter of the mountain (Pârvvatî), uniting in himself the colours of both the rain cloud and the autumn cloud, the great sole original cause of both the creation and the destruction of the universe,—may he ever grant prosperity, the form Harihara, the originator of the world.

Praise of the Yadu-vaṁśa, in which was born Saṅgama, like a flower in the spring. The streams of rut from the temples of whose elephants coloured the waters of the other rivers so that they looked like the Yamunâ. His two celebrated sons were Harihara and Bukka, like Rauhiṇeya and Kṛishṇa born again for the protection of the earth. Verses in praise of Harihara. His younger brother Bukka-Râja dwelt at ease in the city named Vijaya, like Mukunda in Dvârâvatî, and protected the earth ; his praise... His son was Harihara, who dwelt in the same city that his father had maintained, like Râghava in Ayôdhyâ. Its fortress Hêmakûṭa, its moat the most auspicious Tuṅga-bhadrâ, the god Virûpâksha himself, the lord of the world, its protector, the king of kings, Harihara, its ruler, Kânchî, the zone of the earth, its suburb,—can its fortune be described by the mouth ?

By king Harihara, on his succeeding king Bukka, was obtained the wealth of the kingdom and the illustrious councillor Mudda-daṇḍâdhipa, who daily by his policy bound down the hostile kings, and was as famous as Sumantra the minister obtained by Râma from Daśaratha. The king Harihara, committing all the burden of the kingdom to him, was at ease, like Hari who places the burden of the earth on the heads of the king of serpents. Praise of his valour and generosity. He established the famous agrahâra named Muddadaṇḍanâyakapura, otherwise called Chikka-Hadaka, belonging to Uchchaṅgi-durgga in the Kûḍlûr country, a large tract with a fine tank, and (on the date specified), the auspicious time of Hari's awaking, gave it to Brahmans, having formed 36 shares. Of these, 12 were for the god Harihara, and the remaining 24 for the same number of Brahmans.

I do obeisance to that eternal single form of Harihara, the root from which springs the plantain tree the joy of all his faithful people.

Beloved of S'rî and Girijâ, of dark and light hues, adorned with the kaustubha and with serpents, seated on the king of birds and the bull, shining in one united form,—the lords Hari and Hara, may they have favour on king Sôma, and grant him unshaken good fortune and confirmed long life.

In his bed-chamber the milk ocean, on the waves his couch, on his cushion the serpent, the lord of Kamalâ was in the sleep of yôga, when, addressing himself to the creation of the universe, as if his satva itself had assumed a shape, the form of wisdom Aja was born in his lotus navel. Being thus born, that Padmaja made all the circle of worlds in order, among which the middle world was beautiful, and in that world the most charming was Jambu-dvîpa, in that dvîpa celebrated was the Bharata land, and in that region how lovely was the Kuntala country.

Among the rulers of that Kuntala country, after a succession of many Châḷukya emperors had passed away ;—calling to mind Mukunda's former courage and valour in causing his destruction when a son of Danu carried off the earth to the infernal regions,—the terrible warrior Taila took away the earth which the Râshṭrakûṭa kings were ruling, and raised up to power his own superior Chaḷukya-vamśa. Afterwards his son with increasing honour obtained the government of the earth. After that, his younger brother's son Vikramâṅka obtained it, proud of his might. After him, his younger brother Ayyanayya obtained it, his fame bright as the moon filling the earth encircled by the seven oceans. His younger brother Jayasimha (then) ruled the earth, whose breasts are the mountains, the beautiful tamâla trees her curls, the ocean her girdle. Putting down his enemies, that king's son, a head-jewel of kings, Âhavamalla ruled without anxiety in sole enjoyment the earth, with the ocean like its moat, and the regents at the points of the compass like guards stationed around. His son Sôyi-Dêva was celebrated as a trouble to the minds of his enemies, his fame like the moon, jasmin or the Hima mountain, beloved by the learned. His younger brother, breaking his sharp sword on the Magadha king's head, forcibly threading Chôḷa's two sides on his spear, firmly fixing his blade across the inside of Nêpâla's mouth, and thus trebling the pride of his arm, Vikrama obtained the whole circle of the earth. His son, praised as learned in all arts, victor in battle, the god of love to the hearts of fair women, was Bhûlôkamalla. His son, whose mighty valour the earth thus describes, the seizer of every king great and small belonging to Mâlava, causing the territory of the Pallava king to hold the sprout, making the Lâṭa king fold his two hands together on his forehead, and Kaḷiṅga to be marked with tears an account of unmitigated calamities,—was Jagadêkamalla. His younger brother, able with his sword in smiting down the circle of his enemies, his fame like a brilliant moon, was the ever valiant Nûrmmaḍi-Taila.

At that time, his powerful arm a resting place for the globe of the earth, the serpent his sword nourished by the breath of his enemies, his wealth giving satisfaction to the learned by its distribution, his fame pervading the ears of the elephants at the points of the compass,—was the king Bijjala. Praise of his valour. That the saying " the earth is for the enjoyment of the brave " should not prove false, he subdued the earth from the southern ocean to the northern limit of the Châḷukya capital,—the king Bijja.

A servant of his feet, an ocean of the gems of all good qualities, having rid himself of the troubles of his enemies, Kasapayya-Nâyaka gained a name. When the treasury of good qualities, Kasapayya-Nâyaka, putting down the evil and upholding the good, was protecting the Banavâsi Twelve Thousand ;—at that time. Description of the attractions of the Banavâsi-maṇḍala and of Nâgarakhaṇḍa which was like its face.

The master of the manneya of this beautiful Nâgarakhaṇḍa Seventy, a moon to the waterlilies the hearts of women, (with praises) was Sôma-nṛipâḷa. The pure descent of that jewel ornament of maṇḍalêśas was as follows :—To Rudra and to the Earth was born, under the auspicious kadamba tree, the king Mayûravarmmâ, the driver off of his enemies, surrounded with kings doing homage. As he was born with an eye in his forehead, the crown was not bound there as it would cover it up, but it was bound on him near his knee where it would show well,—what more can I say in his praise ? As he grew up in the thick shade of a great kadamba tree, his family became the Kâdamba family. After the celebrated Mukkaṇṇa-Kadamba-Mayûravarmmâ, many kings succeeded in that line. After whom, (with praises) was Barmma-Dêva, whose fame was such that no kings born in the Kâdamba-vamśa had equalled him. His wife was Kâḷala-Dêvi and their son was Boppa-Dêva ; his praises His wife was Siri-Dêvî. To them was born Sôyi-Dêva. Verses in his praise, much effaced.

The nâḷ-prabhu Sanka-Gavuṇḍa and other Gâvuṇḍas made a grant for the daily service of the god Harihara of 5 paṇa in .. vûr of the [Nâgarakhaṇ]ḍa Seventy.

Those who with dharmma maintain this work of merit will gain the reward of those who a crore of times, in Vâraṇâsi and other crores of bathing places, make gifts to a crore of Brahmans, versed in the vêda and vêdânta, of a crore of cows, lands, virgins and other donations, together with ornaments. Imprecation.

Obeisance to Harihara. Praise of S'ambhu.

Triumphant is the lord of Srî, the sportive Boar form, a Kumbhajanma (Agastya) to the wide ocean which troubled the earth, on the tip of whose tusk, which is like an opening kêtaka blossom, the fortunate earth shines like a bee. May the Elephant-faced protect you, whose fame is firmly spread over the universe, who resembles his father in the neck from its being black with bees swarming to the streams of rut. May she be the embodiment of good fortune, the beloved of Kamalâvâsa, shining with the white lustre of water, her face like a moon of full rays, who grants great and unbounded enjoyment to the adherents of her lotus feet, and whose charming speech puts to shame in purity the rays of the moon. May the god preserve you from calamity, the lord of S'rî, whose .. .. is like a beauty spot of musk on the forehead of the woman the three worlds, is it not ? Making the brilliance of the bracelet on his hand lifted above his head double that of the moon eye of the lord of S'rî reposing on his conch the serpent, its speed scattering the drops of the river of the gods afar like stars, its splendour like the water of the milk ocean,—may the tâṇḍava (dance of S'iva) protect you

A glorious being there is named S'rikânta, without beginning or ending, omniscient, perfect in knowledge of the creation destruction and preservation of the world. On his lotus navel, like a bee manifest to all, Dhâtâ practices proficiency in the art of creating a new universe.

The race born from his feet is victorious in the world, whose glorious history resembling the brightness of the single orb of the moon is spread as far as the points of the compass. In which line, of astonishing fame in the world, the sword of his valour forming a sea from the tears of the wives of his enemies, was Rudra. Who to the wild-fire to the forest the ornaments of hostile kings' wives, the moon to the great ocean the Yâdava line, master of Kalyâṇa, the king Hêmâdṛi, was an ornament of ministers, his right arm extending up as a pillar for the destruction of hostile Kshatriyas. He does not carry poison in his throat, nor seek communion with serpents, nor support a stream of water, nor obtain fame as Ugra,—yet he does not renounce the designation of Rudra. From him was born, his fame in warlike expeditions as bright as the light of the moon, the Nâyaka named Mailaya, preventing the wives of hostile kings from painting their eyes, causing them to flow with tears for all their sorrows. There sprang from him, of a glory like the sun, his victorious arm of great valour, having made the host of his enemies his servants, Heggaḍa, a hero with the sword, Maila, an embodiment of the moon the glory of the king who was lord of Kalyâṇa, a tree of paradise sprung from the earth, whose gentle words eclipse the sweetness of nectar. His wife, her eyes from the womb of the colour of the blue waterlily, exalted in good qualities, was by name Rêvala, her lustre like that of gold, wreathed in smiles that put to shame the pure rays of the moon. From her was born, by the abode of unchanging and undiminishing fortune, the Nâyaka who was a string of the pearls of good qualities, Heggaḍa-Nâyaka,—of brilliant fame, his policy as agreeable as sandal water, Sôma, not only so by name but from withering up the lotus faces of his enemies' wives.

Famous as the moon to the ocean the Hoysaḷa-kula, filled with wisdom, rejoicing in fortune, the lord who established Chôḷa Pâṇḍya and other kings, was king vîra Sôma's great son the king Nârasiṃha,—of which lord the general named Sôma is victorious in the world. Truly Sôma-chamû-nâtha was of the herd of sea-elephants, otherwise how were such streams of gifts (otherwise, rut, dâna) produced? By whom was established through devotion to dharmma, on the bank of the propitious Kâvêrî, an agrahâra which is praised by poets. Even the parrots there being in some places filled with nyâya and nourished upon mîmâmsa, in some places assembled together arguing in the severest terms of logic, in some places discussing grammar, sacrifice and poetry,—the mine of learning Sômanâtha-nagari shone as an ornament in the world. On the bank of the Kâvêrî he set up in Sômapura the gods Purahara, Nârasiṃhêśvara, Lakshmî-Nṛihari, with Murahara and Yôga-Nârâyaṇa; on the south-east, Bijjalêśa and others the five Pañchavadana, with Gôpâla and Janârddana, and Kêśava in the middle; the Matsya and other the ten incarnations, with Murahara and Nârâyaṇa (making) twelve; and on this side, in the precincts, Kêśava and others, Saṅkarshaṇa and others, with Viśvaksêna and others, Padmasêna, Indra and others, and also Girâ. His elder brother, named Mêlaya was a general of increasing fortune. His sister's son, a spear to the bodies of enemies, was Malli-Dêva, a wild-fire to the forest his foes. His gifts the cause of joy, all praise with heaps of blessings this ocean of good qualities. Sôma-daṇḍanâyaka, an eastern mountain over which rises the sun his arm of valour, promoter of the bands of chieftains, a cause of prosperity to all, seizer of the wealth of enemies, Gâyi-gôvaḷa, Gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra, may Chaṇḍîśa grant you happiness and glory in the world, as long as sun and moon endure.

Thus, by words of praise on those born in that line having obtained great wealth, a sun to the darkness the prevailing Chârvvâka and Bauddha doctrines, in logic an independent authority, an embodiment of Agastya in ablity to swallow up the shining Jaina ocean,—the learned Gângâ-dharâryya adorns the council, an abode of splendour.

Incarnate in the face of the world in order to establish the non-duality of Vaikuṇṭha and Nîla-kaṇṭha as stated in the vêdas, burdened with the creation destruction and preservation of the world, at sight of whom the unfading Lakshmî of môksha is placed in the hands of men,—is the god Harihara in the world, whose servant was Sôma. The life to S'rî and Gaurî, adorned with serpents and the moon, undivided, thus proclaim him, O man, who is the essence of greatness, both white and black. Hari-hara, take away my sins, who am a bee at thy lotus feet. Harihara, do thou grant shares in un-limited and unending pleasures.

(On the date specified), Sôma-nâtha had a tower with golden kalaśas made at the gate of the temple of Harihara, the form of the crowning ornament of gods. May the dharmma, a source of pleasure, of gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra-Sôma, the crest-jewel of daṇḍanâthas, live as long as moon and stars.

In the beautiful neighbourhood of the Kâvêrî river, with firm lofty and handsome walls, and a deep moat, having streets of the sun and moon, with many houses, filled with all the citizens, the appearance of that city called Sômanâthapura was ever delightful to the eye. With chief Brahmans exalted by study of the vêdas, śâstras, all the âgamas, their verses, mantra, tantra and tarkka, by the merit of the due performance of their daily rites, purified by devotion to sacrifice, good people,—to describe the greatness of the splendid Sômanâthapura is too great a task. Description of its trees and vegetation. In the highly celebrated Sômanâthapura he made a great temple, setting up therein according to all the directions of the âgama the various incarnations of Vishṇu,—and shone with the fame he had acquired, Sôma-chamûpati, the Gâyi-gôvaḷa. Under the profound name of Prasanna-Chenna he set Kêśava on the right hand side, and the source of the worlds' pleasure, his form Gôpâla, the lord who fills the mind with joy, Janârdda,—these three forms, united among themselves, were the chief in the Vishṇu temple in that pura. A cause of all manner of festivity were all the various forms around the enclosure, as they were all exhibited in different ways: the Matsya and others all the ten incarnations, Kêśava and others, Saṅkarshaṇa and others twelve in name, Nârâyaṇa and others to the number of thirty four, including eighteen Kṛishṇa and others; Gaṇapa, Bhairava, Bhâskara, Viśvaksêna, Durggi, and such gods numbering seventy three adorned the Vishṇu temple in the middle of the pura. And in the south-east of the pura Sôma-daṇḍâdhipa set up Bijjalêśvara, Perggaḍêśvara, Rêvalêśvara, and Bayiralêśvara, with Sômanâtha Sivaliṅga in the middle, and gained fame. And he set up Bhava named Nrisiṃhêśvara, Yôga-Nârâyaṇa and Lakshmi-Nṛisiṃha in the middle of the Kâvêrî at Sômanâthapura, so as to add to its fame, the mighty Sôma-daṇḍâdhinâtha. And its renown as a mine of learning being spread abroad, Sôma-daṇḍâdhipa with rejoicing gave that celebrated Sômanâthapura to chief Brahmans distinguished for good character, knowledge of the vêdas and śâstras, devoted to all rites and sacrifices.

To describe the descent of his family:—Among rising men of the charming line sprung from the lotus feet of him born from the lotus navel of the lord of Lakshmî, famed in the world, friendly to strangers, devoted to guarding his lord, distinguished for virtuous character, was the favourite of the goddess of valour, Duddeya-Nâyaka, of great power, a gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra hero. To him and to Nan-nave-Nâyaki was born Maileya-Nâyaka. An approved servant of the lord of the famous city of Kal-yâṇa, the glory of the Chaḷukyânvaya, his lord king Jagadêkamalla,—Maileya-Nâyaka among his titles worthily sustained that of gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra, and held with glory that of gâyi-gôvaḷa. His wife, the equal of the Mountain-daughter, was Rebbalâ-Nâyaki. To them was born, as exalted as Hêmâ-dri, ..., famed without limit in the three worlds, Perggaḍe-Nâyaka, a gâyi-gôvaḷa in power. His wife, the equal of the wife of Trinayana, was Rêkave-Nâyaki. To them was born, devoted to the service of the feet of his lord, gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra, the faithful servant of the Hoysaṇa king vîra-Nara-siṃha, a champion over traitors to his lord, a scarecrow to chieftains, Sôma-daṇḍâdhipa.

In front of the temple of Harihara-nâtha, he made a wide and beautiful gateway of five storeys, adorned with golden kalas'as, that the increase of merit and promotion of dharmma might be permanent,—the famous Sôma-chamûpa, the gâyi-gôvala. The united glory of Nala, Nahusha and Hariśchandra was attained by dandanâtha Sôma in the dharmma of the beautiful building he created.

Be it well. When, (with usual titles, including) uprooter of the Magara kingdom, establisher of the Chôla kingdom, lifter up of the Pândya kingdom,—the niśśanka-pratâpa-chakravartti vîra-Nârasimha-Dêvarasa was in the residence of the new southern Dvârâvatî, his own royal city Dôrasamudra, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—

A dweller at his lotus feet, the great minister, jewel of ministers, a Chânakya in policy, a Yôgandhara in business, burdened with his master's affairs, a rêkha-Rêvanta in riding the most vicious horses, Kritânta to foreign armies, mounting up with self-acquired gain, delighting in gifts of food gold virgins lands cows and all other gifts, purifier of his gôtra, a scarecrow to chieftains, gâyi-gôvala, ganda-pendâra, champion over deceivers of his lord,—Sôma-dandanâtha, (on the date specified), having made the mine of learning, the agrahâra named Prasanna-Sômanâthapura, and made there S'aiva and Vaishnava temples, and set up the respective gods,—after that, he made a tower at the eastern gateway of Harihara-nâtha's holy temple in Harihara, with five kalas'as and five storeys,—and felt himself filled with all worldly satisfaction.

This fame of Sôma-Dêva, may it be spread as long as the earth, mount Mêru, the ocean, the elephants at the points of the compass, the sky sun and moon endure.

Great good fortune.

Victorious are the two, Sthânu and Dhara, whose hands bearing the rosary and trident, the discus and conch, proclaim their undivided glory. Victorious is the dharmma-śâsana, adored by all gods demons men and serpents, which directs into the path for svargga and for release from transmigration. Praise of S'ambhu.

Be it well. Fortune and victory and prosperity.

Victorious are the varied movements of the great fish form of Hari, which not in vain agitated the water of the ocean with the tip of its tail. Victorious are the dance signals of the vine-like brows of the dancer Nîlalôhita, indications of permanent and passing emotions.

Sprung from the pond the navel of the beloved of S'rî was a lotus, which was as a canopy for the kaustubha jewel resting on his chest; from it was born, devoted by nature to the work of creating the universe, Dhâtri, from whom emanated the great muni Atri, bearer of the burden of creation. From Atri's eye was born the lord of the night, named Râja (the moon), whom other world-preservers honour as a pure garland (by wearing it), and whose crescent line is worn on his head by the god who was victor over Tripura, his feet worshipped by the jewelled crowns of all the deities. From him arose the race of Yâdava kings, like his own glory purifying the three worlds, allaying the distress (otherwise heat) of mankind, bringing joy to the waterlilies (otherwise the world), filling all points of the compass (otherwise desires), ornamenting the heads of all mountains (otherwise kings). How many emperors, Haihaya and others, were there not born in it to establish the empire of Indra which the proud Dânavas had seized, while the god who was the husband of Lakshmî, implored in all the vêdas, was himself incarnate in it for the sport of destroying Kamsa.

In that family for a long time shone Chêdi-Râja, who although a king over the whole circle of the world, was permanently partial to the Pâṇḍya country, and so acquired settled fame in the earth by the name Pâṇḍya. The blow of whose bracelets resounded on the conch-shell on the top of Paurandara's head, whose fish crest also was set up on great rocks on the chief mountains, and who made fruitless the efforts of Ocean to display his power in preventing their progress,—behold how the glory of the Pâṇḍyas eclipsed that of all others. His son, whose frown alone made the groups of his enemies powerless, was Paḷanta, whose bravery in war was conspicuous in giving the dominion of their own kingdoms to both the Châḷukya and Chôḷa kings. The perspiration caused by the heat of his exertion in war being subdued by the breath of the wives of all the hostile kings reduced to do homage, there was born from him Irukkavêḷa, whose pure fame pervaded and supported the mountains that surround the earth. His son, the self-chosen husband of the goddess of heroism in having defeated mighty foes by his valour, was the king Râya-Pâṇḍya, by the temples of his enemies' elephants split open with blows from the wielding of whose mighty club was called to mind the great Bhârati battle field of old. The circle of the toe nails of her feet upheld by the jewelled crowns of all the co-wives doing obeisance, Râya-Pâṇḍya's queen, her character of perfect purity praised by distinguished learned men, the acme of the most fortunate qualities, was Sôma-Dêvi. By nature the field of union of conjugal devotion and beauty, which are inimical one to the other, she bore Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya-Dêva, who quickly reconciled in one abode the goddess of eloquence and the goddess of fortune, dispelling their great antipathy. Whose fame was like moonlight to the white waterlilies the fame of hostile kings, whose terrible sword gave gratification to the beauty of the celestial nymphs, a great pearl ornament in the lineage of the destroyer of Kamsa, how many great poets are there not who adorn their sayings with his illustrious deeds. Placing the world on the heads of the serpents (bhujaṅga) his arms (bhuja) which are nourished on the life-breath of mighty hostile kings sounding the trumpet of their own pride, the circle of the world filled with the moonlight of his pure fame, a mine of glory, she bore another son, his younger brother, the king Vîra-Pâṇḍya. Supplication was only on the tips of the tongues of the wives of his enemies trembling lest the lives of their husbands should be swallowed up by the black serpent his sword, the valour in war of king Vîra-Pâṇḍya, the cultivator of the three ? vêdas (or branches of learning—traividya), who are able fully to describe? That Râya-mahîśvara's queen, who put to shame the ocean shore which gave birth to the tree of plenty, the base of Mêru which gives birth to lions, and the quarter of Surapati (the east) which gives birth to the sun,—bore the king Nigaḷankamalla Vijaya-ś'rî-Pâṇḍya, with the celebrated name of Kâma. How many Brahmas did not Paramêshṭhi produce to aid him in the work of creation; but not one of them was equal to Atri-muni, in whose line Lakshmîpati was of old in the form of Sudhâmśu, afterwards as Kṛishṇa, and now as king Kâma. Was it from a desire to be sent to see other islands, or from a desire to enjoy the pleasures of paradise, or from weariness in bearing the burden of the world, that kings, despising the nectar of service under the heroic king Nigalankamalla, determined on entering into war with him ? From not observing that his fame has whitened the three worlds like sandal, it must be, that king Vijaya-Pâṇḍya's valour gratifies itself with bringing palor to the cheeks of his enemies' wives for the loss of their husbands. What wonder is it that Vijaya-Pâṇḍya's glory fires all the points of the compass (otherwise, all the fuel) the hearts of the wives of hostile kings though they are damp through being bathed with their ever falling tears. Only one so peerless in virtues and valour has been created by Vêdasa, for no other can be seen anywhere to compare with him, on account of the trouble from whose courage hostile kings take refuge in mountains, or cross over the sea, or burst through the sun. Our praise can find nothing with which to compare his fame which fills the whole world, for moonlight is confined to the night, the river of the gods divides into three separate streams in the three worlds, and the milk ocean is limited within shores. May it be well with the glorious king Kâma, whose two lotus feet are illumined with the jewels in the crowns of all the lines of kings prostrate before him, the point of the sword in his powerful right hand glittering like a drop of water with which to erase the writing on the foreheads of hostile kings.

His chief minister,—Long may he be victorious,—who, playing upon the enemies' warriors the tricks of Mâruti, sending some across the great ocean, leaving some with nothing but the broech-cloth, causing others to live upon fruits in the forest, and yet others to set their faces towards the orb of the sun,—was the Hanuman beloved by the Pâṇḍya race,—Hermmâḍi-daṇḍâdhipa.

Be it well. When, entitled to the five big drums, the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, boon lord of Kâñchîpura, sun in the sky of the Yadu-vaṃśa, crest-jewel of good warriors, making the myriad blows of his own victorious bracelets ring on the jewelled crown of Mahêndra, having captured merely as if in sport the Seven Koṅkaṇas, having set up a pillar of victory with the fish crest on the rocky height of the Kanaka mountain, having removed afar the heroic attacks of enemies, his treasury filled with pearls purified by the Tâmraparṇṇî and many other gems of purest water, having a pleasure palace built in the middle of the beautiful sandal woods of the Malaya mountains, having reduced bhûtas and bêtâlas to be his servants, having taken possession of the territories of many hostile kings, having subdued by assault many unfriendly water and hill forts, having forced to do homage the bands of hostile chieftains, his mind bowed in meditation on the feet of S'aṅkara-Nârâyaṇa, ornament of the Yâdavas, sun to the lotus the Pâṇḍya-kula, champion in cutting on both sides, defeater of the designs of Râjiga-Chôḷa, lofty in energy,—the mahâ-maṇḍaḷêśvara Vijaya-Pâṇḍya-Dêva, putting down the evil and upholding the good in Noḷambavâḍi and all the other provinces of the earth, exalted as the elephants at the points of the compass, exceeding in pleasures the king of the serpents, his powerful right arm as firm as the back of the tortoise king, able to protect the dwelling of the earth, bearing up the globe as if a sport, gratifying the chakravâla all the people in the world with the united streams of light the soft rays from the toe-nails of his feet illumined by the jewels set in the crowns of all the kings prostrate before him, established in the royal city named Uchchaṅgi, was ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—(on the date specified) on the application of the great minister, the śrîkaraṇa, general superintendent, great master of robes, Kumâra-Vijaya-Permmâḍi-daṇḍanâtha,—for the decorations and illuminations of the holy god Harihara, the offerings at the three watches, the food of the Brahmans, for instruction in letters, discipline, grammar, mîmâmsa, vêdânta, commentaries, and recitation of both the Rig and Yajur vêdas,—made a grant of the Kûḍalûr village to the hundred and four Brahmans versed in the vêda and vêdâṅga, devoted to the proper rites, skilled in all sciences,—fixing the rent at only three hundred nishkas, freed from all imposts, and not subject to any trouble from kings or others, together with the piṇḍâdâna. Victorious are the two, Sthâṇu and Hara, whose hands bearing the rosary and trident, the discus and conch, proclaim their undivided glory. Victorious are the dance signals of the vine-like brows of the dancer Nîlalôhita, indications of permanent and passing emotions. Victorious is the dharmma-śâsana, adored by all gods demons men and serpents, which directs into the path for svargga and for release from transmigration. Obeisance to Hari and Hara.

Be it well. Extolled by all the powers of being, his lotus feet reverenced by the crowns of worshiping gods, the creator of the three worlds, Bhava, formed in the mundane egg the wide-spreading world, surrounded by the ocean with its lofty waves. From the collision of great sharks, the tortoises being driven to the surface, and the rush of disturbed fish, being filled with eddies, the spray from which like clustres of pearls was beautiful to the eye; its mighty waves higher than palmyra palms roaring with the sound of the thunder-cloud;—was the ocean. By the movements of all manner of crocodiles, the plunging of whales and sharks, and the flapping of the tails of fish, the mountains therein being set in motion,—the sea was like a mass of clouds, which the waves lighted up like flashes of lightning, and tinted it with hues which seemed to the eye like coral. Surrounded by this as a girdle, shone Jambu-dvîpa; in the middle of which was mount Mêru, the king of mountains. Adorned with the shining stream of the Ganges, its sides clothed with forests like a cloud, by nature of a glory supernatural, it shone to all points of the compass, higher than Chitrakûṭa, its peaks piercing the sky. To the south of that mountain of the gods was Bharata-varsha, within which, like curls (kuntala) to the lady earth, was the Kuntala country.

Having subdued all kings, the favourites of the earth, the abodes of brilliant qualities, the mighty Châḷukyas ruled the Kuntaḷa country. The descent of their line was as follows :—In the lake the deep and wide navel of the lord of S'rî arose a white lotus of sweetest perfume. From the heart (or mind) of Jalajajâta (Brahma), who sprang from the lotus in the navel of Jaḷaruhajaṭhara (Padmanâbha or Vishṇu), arose the famous Harîta, the progenitor of their family. His son was Hârîta, in the water of whose chuḷuka (water-pot, or hand hollowed to hold water) was born like a miracle the glorious Sattima-Dêva with a drawn sword. From that Satyâśraya-Dêva did this Châḷukya royal line rule with true glory; and in it many kings with the renown of having subdued their enemies, of unequalled valour, beloved by the lady the Kuntaḷa country, ruled it, enforcing their commands. A Châḷukya ornament, his chest embraced by the goddess of fortune, of matchless bravery, swallowing up his enemies like water, Tailapa ruled the earth. Unnumbered kings and wandering mendicants, those without respect, these respecting him, he directed his arrows towards or directed on their way; and energetic in war, he conquered the earth,—Taila.[1] The valiant Tailapa's son was Sattima; that king's son was the lord Vikrama; his younger brother was the famous Ayyaṇa; and that king's younger brother was Jayasiṃha; his son was the king Trailôkyamalla, called Âhavamalla; his son was the king Sômêśvara. His younger brother, an arrow in splitting open the temples of the rutting elephants hostile kings, caused the earth to be râjanvati (or possessed of a good king) as of old, the king who pursued after both kings [1] Nourishing the black serpent the sharp sword in his powerful, arm, which bore up the burden of the earth surrounded with the four oceans, on the breath of his enemies; delighting in the sport of confounding powerful hostile kings in great and glorious battles; without effort he protected the whole circle of the world,—Vikramânka. His son, having gained a knowledge of all the arts and hence receiving the name Sarvvajña (omniscient), his fame as spotless as the light of the autumn moon, was Sôma. This king Bhûlôkamalla from ruling this world acquired the name Sarvvajña, while other kings though ruling the three worlds cannot obtain the name. His son, of brilliant valour, his arm being like a thunderbolt to the mountains powerful enemies, ruled the earth as a good protector, the king Permma. In the earth, from his exalted qualities of generosity and the rest, Jagadêkamalla can be compared only with Sagara, Bhagîratha and such; other emperors, how can they be compared with him, say: thus of unequalled glory, of unmeasured courage, without an enemy, he protects the earth.

Like the sword sheathed in confidence of the renowned Châḷukya king, Vira-Pâṇḍya-Dêva shone in fame, power, glory, magnanimity and favour. That Vira-Pâṇḍya-Dêva's descent will I extol so far as my ability can be displayed (or will allow).

From its being on the head of Mriḍa (S'iva) the crest-jewel of all the gods, the brillant line of Sôma (or the Lunar race) acquired greatness, and was reverenced by all as without spot. In the lotus the navel of the lotus-navelled (Vishṇu) was born the lotus-born (Brahma), in the lotus of whose mind was born, the chief of the god-like rishis, the unwearied Atri-munîndra. From the abode of nectar the eye of that munipa was born like nectar, his body filled with spotless rays, a forehead-ornament to the lady the race of kings, Sôma. In truth it is said that he had three forms of birth, the Atri born, (namely) born from a lotus, born from the ocean, and born from the muni's eye, and therefore is Sôma called tri-jâta (born in three ways) and yet he is Atri-jâta (born from Atri, or not born in three ways),—this is marvellous. In the Lunar race was born Yadu-Râja, from whom the fortune of the Yadu-vamśa shone in the world, and the name of the Yâdava line of kings became widely famed. In that line, which was considered auspicious from the Vaishṇava incarnations of Bala(râma) and Krishṇa, with the same qualities, of royal family, was Mangaya called Aditya-Dêva, an ornament of the Yâdava-kula. From him sprang Pâṇḍya, and to that king Pâṇḍya was Chêdi-Râja the son. Having subdued the Chêdi kings he became Chedi-Râja, and his son, reckoned a Yâdava ornament, was the king Paḷamâṇḍa-Dêva-Pâṇḍya. To the crest-ornament of the Yâdava-vamśa, the king Paḷamâṇḍa-Pâṇḍya, the son, husband of fortune, ruler of the wide world, was the king Irukavêḷa. Born to that lord, and reputed as having a fortune four inches higher[2], the chosen of all the earth, a king who had subdued all hostile kings, was the king Râja-Pâṇḍya, whose valour was unbounded. Thinking and thinking on the dazzling thunderbolt king Râja's heavy club, the bands of hostile kings surrounded by the ocean perished,—how great was his valour. Having subdued mighty kings, and defeated powerful heroes, he acquired a name for surpassing courage, the destruction of his enemies in the earth, the king Râya. To the famous king Râya-Pâṇḍya the wife was Bôvala-Dêvi, in all virtues and dignity reckoned the only jewel among women in all the earth. Being king Râya's wife, Billava-Râya's daughter, and king Vikramâditya being her elder brother, there was no flaw in that young woman's pure descent in the world.

The eldest son of those two, of world-wide fame for the wealth of perpetual learning, his fame pure as the water of the Ganges, sandal or the white lotus, was Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya. Srîharsha, Utpaḷa, Bhôja, Vatsa and Vikramâditya were kings who protected the earth between Himâchala and Sêtu, and were noted for both valour and learning As if all the collection of their virtues had combined in this king such was the fame of king Pâṇḍya, When it is said that he acquired all learning from Madhusûdana-dêva, how can (other) deaf (badhira) kings come into comparison with the king Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya. In character the muni Manu, a friend of the learned, of generous disposition, Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya was famed throughout all the world :—thus far is the praise of this king. That lord's younger brother, acquainted with all arts, reverenced by powerful enemies, understanding the worship of the feet of gods Brahmans and gurus, was the king Vîra-Pâṇḍya-Dêva. His younger brother, of generous character, victor over proud hostile kings, was the king Paḷamâṇḍa. His younger brother, skilled in smiting down powerful enemies, was the king Kâma-Dêva.

Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya's son, a sun to the lotus-garden the world of the learned, a thunderbolt to the mountain great chieftains, was king Tailapa, of matchless virtue. The emperor having granted him the position of head of great ministers, Âditya-daṇḍanâtha was famed throughout the world. That lord's daughter Gaṅgâ-Dêvi, distinguished for her descent, beauty, virtue and dignity, became Vîra-Pâṇḍya-Dêva's mahâdêvi. Of his great mercy may S'ankara grant to the pîriy-arasi the fulfilment of her desires. May Trinêtra, his feet tinted by the jewels in the crowns of Indra Upêndra Chandra and others of the host of gods prostrate before him, which resemble the ârati performed by Sati, his head adorned by the Ganges, the theme of praise to the learned, (fulfil her desires) to the lady Gangâ. Vijayâ-Dêvi, with eyes like the unclosed lotus, king Vikramâditya's younger sister, was Vîra-Pâṇḍya's wife, a vine of plenty to the learned. Of his great mercy may the great S'ankara grant to Vijayâ-Dêvi her wishes, he whose form is composed of water earth sky sun fire moon wind and spirit, whose three eyes are like fire sun and moon, wearing on his crest the moon, which the stream of the Ganges with its waves seems as if fanning with châmaras. And Vîra-Pâṇḍya-Dêva, the favourite of the world, thence received the name of king Jagadêkamalla from breaking down the pride of the courage of mighty enemies. A valiant one who had made the mighty Gaṅga Kaḷiṅga Vaṅga Maru Gûrjjara Kêraḷa Chêra Chôḷa Gauḍa Aṅga Varâṭa Lâṭa Khasa Barbara Kôsaḷa Puṇḍra Pârasi Koṅgaṇa Koṅga Koṅkaṇa Kuru Prathara Ândhra Turushka and Mâgadha kings to tremble, was the king Pâṇḍya. With the dancing about of the hands of his enemies and the tusks of their elephants cut off by his sword, with the rays from the jewelled ornaments they wore, the colours of their banners weapons shields and accoutrements, and the streams of flowing blood, Vîra-Pâṇḍya's battle-field was streaked with white brown variegated and red tints. In the countries of the hostile kings terrified by the power of the arm of king Pâṇḍya, the husband of the goddess of victory, only trees of the woods represented their royal insignia, such as—the tilaka, the royal spot on the forehead ; the punnâga, the state elephant ; the anjana, collyrium for the eyes ; the syandana, the chariot ; the dhvaja, the banner ; the bâṇa, his bow ; the âsana, arrows ; the sâla, his fort ; the kânchana, his treasure ; the sita-chchhatra, his white parasol.[1] Putting down the arrogant who were struggling for precedence before him, and chasing them away terrified, the fame of king Pâṇḍya was spread to all the points of the compass. Of his great mercy may be grant to you, Pâṇḍyarasa, long life and fortune,—S'ankara, reverenced by Indra and Upêndra, the spray from the waves of the celestial Ganges on whose head surrounds the crescent moon which is his crest as with constellations of stars, Vyômakêśa, the lord of life to the Mountain-daughter, Mahêśa. May it be well with Pâṇḍya the sun, the praise of whom is the simple truth, who is ever risen over the world, who has driven away the darkness his enemies, whose glory is ever in the ascendant, who is stationary on the summit of the eastern mountain the Yâdava family, and whose brilliance illuminates all the points of the compass.

Be it well. (With an immense number of laudatory epithets, some in Sanskrit and some in Prâkrit)—Vîra-Pâṇḍya-Dêva, long may he live. Further benedictions invoked from Îśvara and from Hari and Hara.

[1] Each word has a double meaning, one being the name of a tree, the other, one of the royal emblems.

The chief worshipper of the feet of the great king Vîra-Pâṇḍya, great in fortune, Madhusûdana-Dêva composed the poetry of the śâsana so as to make it brilliant. S'aṅkara-dêva wrote the śâsana, minister for peace and war of king Vîra-Pâṇḍya's palace. The engraver was Sôma.

Be it well. When, (with titles as in No. 39 above) the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Jagadêkamalla Vîra-Pâṇḍya-Dêva was ruling the Nolambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand and many other countries—? as a minor, or from boyhood (kumâra-vṛittiyinda)—and was governing the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—(on the date specified), at the time of the sun's eclipse, being in the great tîrtha at the confluence of the main streams of the Tuṅgabhadrâ and Haridrâ, having made all the great gifts, he granted Guttivûru in the . . . . Thirty for the god S'aṅkara-Nârâyaṇa, to provide sandal, saffron, camphor, unguents and other things, and for the decorations and offerings, and for the god's satra,—having gained favour with the emperor. The ever one form Harihara (do I reverence), nourisher of the plantain-stem the joy of those who draw near to him. May . . . and Bhava, who, to assure the people in the world that without doubt we are one, assumed one form, the glorious and most worshipful Harihara, may he ever grant the fulfilment of his desires to the daṇḍâdhipa Barmmarasa.

A certain Brahmani girl adoring with devotion Hara, the chosen of Girijâ, in order to bestow on her the desire of her heart, he appeared to her in love in a dream, and from that union she miraculously conceived a portion of Îśvara in her womb. When she had thus completed nine months, there was born Kṛishṇa, beautiful in form, matchless in valour, distinguished by all auspicious marks, acquainted with all learning, a burning heat to hostile kings. Being born, he slew in Kâlañjara an evil minded king who was a cannibal and followed the calling of a barber, thus gaining in advance the applause of the world, did he not ? Forcing him between the teeth of Yama, he seized by might of arm the wealth of his empire, and making the Nine-lakh Dahaḷa country subject to his commands, the glory of the Kalachuri-kula, the king Kṛishṇa, ruled in peace. Among those born in his line, after many kings had passed away,—There was renowned in the earth the king Kannama-Dêva, skilled in the art of captivating the coyest women by his beauty, the cause of destruction to the proud, his fame a spotless moon. To that celebrated one, like two extra arms, were two dear sons named Râja and Bijjala, of good learning, beloved of the goddess of victory. The elder of those, Bijjala-Dêva, was celebrated as a mine of untiring energy, with the edge of his sword subduing the bands of hostile chiefs and bringing them into submission as servants, so that he was regarded in his great kingdom as conqueror of the earth, the foremost in the world. Like the four arms of Hari or the four tusks of the celestial elephant, to the king his younger brother were four sons,—Ammugi, S'aṅkhavarmmâ, Kannara and Jôgama. The eldest of these, Ammugi, ruled the world. After that, his younger brother, thrusting those who attacked him into the face of Yama, driving those who escaped into the farthest points of the forests, restoring to their original stations those who fell with submission at his feet,—the king Taḷikâḍa Jôgama gained the applause of the world by his royal policy. His son, whose fame played round the hostile kings so as to singe their mustaches, whose gifts raised up the needy in the earth who were plunged in the ocean of trouble, whose character eclipsed the pure character of Manu,—how great was he, the king Permmâḍi. To that king was born, the repository of valour, the king Bijjala-Dêva, whose birth plunged the wives of the mighty Yavanas into a world of distress, filled evil minded hostile kings with excessive fear, but the kings who were friendly to him with joy. Verses in his praise, saying that he poured hot water on the roots of hostile chiefs, and acquired by capture and purchase elephants and horses so that no one anywhere had such,—how can I with one tongue praise his greatness, this Giridurgga-malla. As Agastya born from the pitcher swallowed up the ocean, so did king Bijja, born as the master of the kingdom of chieftains, take possession of the whole earth.

Be it well. When, entitled to the five big drums, the mahârâjâdhirâja, boon lord of Kâḷan-jara-pura, having the flag of a golden bull, and the sounds of the ḍamaraka and târyya, sun to the lotus the Kaḷachuri-kula, fierce in war, in dignity the golden mountain, a sun to good warriors, an elephant-goad to the brave, master of elephants, a cage of adamant to refugees, in valour the lord of Lanka, a brother to the wives of others, Sanivâra-siddhi, Giridurgga-malla, in energy in war Râma, a lion to the elephant his enemies, Niśśankamalla,—with these and other titles, the bhujabala-chakravartti Tribhuvanamalla Bijjaṇa-Dêva's victorious kingdom was extending on all sides, to continue as long as moon and stars:—

A dweller at his lotus feet,—Skill in the four modes of policy, beauty like that of the god of love, greatness like that of the mountain of the gods, liberality in gifts to Brahmans, success in plans for averting the evil designs of his enemies, being manifest in Kasapayya-Nâyaka, he won the praise of the world. His mind to faith in the two lotus feet of his master the great king Bijjala, his wealth to numberless gifts, his words to perfect truth, his body to many holy rites, his fame to the points of the compass, did Kasapayya-Nâyaka devote. In the purity of his character that he was the ancient Rukmâṅgada, another Yudhishṭhira,' a new Prahlâda, thus did all people extol Kasapayya-Nâyaka.

His brother-in-law, praised for all good qualities, of wide-spread fame, of great courage, was Barmmarasa-daṇḍanâtha: whose father was the famous Munjala-Dêva of the Sagarânvaya, his mother the beautiful Bîyala-Dêvi, his father-in-law the brave hero, known for his gifts of horses, Dôcha-chamûpati. The beauty of Kâma, the bounty of Khacharêndra, the might of Bhîma, such were the qualities of this general, the subduer of his enemies.

The army of Poysaḷa, the destroyer of hostile kings, he on his single horse put to flight and drove into the river, so that the water of the Tuṅgabhadrâ was dyed with a new saffron colour from the streams of their blood,—who is able to praise the exploits of Barmma? Farther verses praising his bravery and liberality.

His minister (with praises) was Ravicharasa; his accountants, Âcharasa, Raṭṭi-Râja, S'rîdhara-Nâyaka, .. ṇa-Nâyaka, and Tikkarasa.

When, along with all these karaṇams, Barmmarasa-daṇḍanâyaka was protecting the Banavâsi Twelve Thousand,—one day, at a time when a discourse took place on stories of dharmma and the glory of donations,— Purer than Gayâ, holier than Vâraṇâsi, more sinless than Prayâga, freer from blemish than the banks of the Ganges, of clearer water than the banks of the Pampâ, greater than the ... mountain,—such is the fame that the Harihara-sthâna has acquired, the most auspicious in the world. Praise of its Brahmans. (Rest illegible).

Be it well. Increase of fortune and victory.

Obeisance to the lotus-navelled Vishṇu, the almighty, the friend of the blue lotus the world an ocean of valour. May the tusk of the great Boar protect you, a swing for the earth, brilliant as the young moon, a lamp to the house of the lower regions.

Surrounded by the roaring ocean, roused by the plunging about of shoals of crocodiles into great waves which reach the sky, the drops of whose spray shine like a shower of precious stones, is the beautiful Jambu-dvîpa. In the middle of it, the abode of the gods, its lofty summit encircled by the constellations, shines the Mandara mountain. To the south of which, a region of all manner of delights, wealthy with fine cities and woods, like the curls (kuntala) of the lady earth, appears the Kuntala country.

In the succession of the many Châḷukya emperors who held the government of that Kuntala country,—destroyer of the .... of Mâlava, forcer of the Pallava kings to hold the sprout (pallava), making the Lâṭa king fold his hands together on his forehead (lalâṭa), changing the appearance of the multitude of Kaḷinga, of matchless valour,—Jagadêkamalla obtained the earth.

At that time, his mighty arms a refuge for the circle of the earth, the black serpent his sword nourished on the breath of hostile kings, his wealth satisfying the desires of the learned, his fame adorning the ears of the elephants at the points of the compass,—was the king Bijjaḷa.

Devoted to the service of that king's feet, an ocean of the gems of all pure good qualities, generous in removing the troubles of the learned,—was the king Vîra-Pâṇḍya. His younger brother, learned in all arts, reverenced by hostile kings, serving his guru the Brahman Harihara,—was Nigaḷaṅkamalla, the king Kâma. His eldest son was Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya; whose son, a sun to the lotus-garden the learned, a thunderbolt to the mountain great chieftains, skilled in war, was Vijaya-Pâṇḍya.

When that Pâṇḍya king was protecting the Noṇambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand in his own right (sva-dharmmadim):—

The descent of the Sindânvaya, considered to be their attendants, was as follows;—From the union of Siva and Sindhu was born a son, to whom Bhava with affection gave the name Saindhava, with the king of the serpents as his guardian. Saying that unless his son drank tigress' milk he would not become brave, the husband of Gaurî of his goodness created a tigress, and drinking her milk that child grew in the world. Moreover, Paramêśvara directed the goddess Mâlatî to aid his son in war, and gave him a second name of Niḍudôḷa-Sinda. Being told that Karahâṭa the yôga-pîṭha was his abode, that king took possession of it, driving out the groups of kings there by the might of his arm. Thus he became powerful among the kings of the earth, and being constantly praised in the world as brave generous and of famous origin, he made illustrious the descent of the Sinda-vaṁśa throughout the world.

Be it well. Entitled to the five big drums, the mahâ-maṇḍaḷêśvara, boon lord of Karahâṭa-pura, obtainer of a boon from the goddess Mâlatî, having subdued all the world, an earring for the goddess of victory, distinguished by the blue flag (nîla-dhvaja), Karṇa in gifts, having the sounds of the mallaḷi and tûryya, adorned with the gems of good qualities, the Sinda sun, a rod in the arm of victory, of the Phaṇirâja-vaṁśa, crest-jewel of the good, having the tiger and deer crest, like gold in usefulness, perfect in courage, to enemies Nârâyaṇa, a saw in war with kings, an elephant-goad to the titled, a wild-fire to the forest his enemies, the Dêva of the Sindas, Niḍudôḷ-Sinda, ruled many countries included in the Karahaḍa Four Thousand.

In his line many ruled the kingdom. Among them (with praises) Piriya-Chaṭṭarasa was celebrated, whose wife was Dôrabarasi. Their son was Jôgarasa. His son Chaṭṭarasa ruled the earth. After him, in that line was Mâcharasa or Mâchi-Dêva, whose senior queen was Chaṭṭala-Dêvî. His younger brother was Malli-Dêva, whose younger brother was Ayharasa, whose son was Râyarasa. Râya's wife was Bâchala-Dêvî, and their son was Îśvara-Dêva.

At his coronation the sound of the drums and conchs roused up Uragêndra (the king of the serpents), who, saying, "This is an exaltation of my line: ho! I must see this,"—at once came there with haste, the jewels in his head appearing like a great illumination. And with full affection, Suranadi (Gaṅgâ), Rudrâṇi (Pârvvati), S'ambhu (S'iva), Hêramba (Gaṇêśa), united, came and blessed Îśvara-Dêva to have long life and good fortune. He who rejoices in the kaustubha, who is like a cloudy sky in the hot season, and warmth to the body in the cold season, who reposing in the ocean is ever carrying on the work of the three seasons,—that Hari, may he grant to king Îśvara the attainment of his desires. Farther verses in his praise, saying that with a signet ring of the serpent-jewel on his hand, with his powerful arms, body, sword and beard, king Îśvara of the Sinda-kula appeared to his enemies like a terrible dragon ready to swallow them.

(Here is introduced a king Allahuli, but the inscription is too much defaced to make out who he was).

Praise of S'ambhu. May he protect you, the original Boar, on the tip of whose tusk the earth shone in beauty like a ball of saffron.

The two lords of Ramâ and Girijâ, their feet reverenced by the chief gods, bearers of the conch and discus, the .... and trident, adorned with gold and with serpents, riders on Garuḍa and the Bull,—Hari and Hara, fulfillers of the desires of the faithful, may they ever protect Kâvaṇa-daṇḍanâtha, the tree of plenty to the world.

Description of the ocean-girt globe of the earth, Jambu-dvîpa, the Mandara mountain, Bharata and Kuntala (as in No. 43 above).

That region many Châlukya emperors held with their powerful victorious arms. After whom,—the powerful emperor king Bijjaṇa obtained the earth, with the ocean as her girdle, the crimson buds of creepers for her lips, the swelling mountains for her breasts, the beautiful gardens of areca palms for her neck. To describe his glory:—A thunderbolt to the Chôḷa king, a submarine fire to the ocean Simhaḷa, a wild-fire to the forest Mâḷava, a gale to the cloud Gurjjara, a lion to the rutting elephant Nêpâḷa, a sword in cutting off the badge of honour on the forehead (lalâṭa) of Lâṭa,—thus does the world praise the king Bijjaṇa. His younger brother, acquainted with all arts, an abode of all good qualities, Mailugi-Dêva shone with the lady earth in his arms: his praise. His grandson Kali-Dêva was celebrated in the world. Lord of the goddess of fortune, master of all the earth, with eyes like the lotus, and adorned with all fortunate signs, skilled in policy, praised by the learned, a tree of paradise to his dependents, Sôvi-Dêva, praised as Râya-Murâri, obtained this earth. Devoted to the game

[1] The inscription is too much defaced to be certain about this portion.

[2] The year is said to be the 8th of the Kaḷachuryya-chakravartti bhujabala-Malla-Dêva, the year Subhânu. It is evident that Bijjala-Dêva is meant, as this corresponds with his 8th year.

of war, Indra in all wealth, of mighty arms, of pure good qualities, his younger brother Mallugi-Dêva was famed in the world. Saying I will relieve the tortoise, the serpent and the regent elephants from the burden of bearing up the earth, the foremost of emperors, adorned with victory, Sankama-Dêva bore up the globe of the earth in his powerful arms; his praise.

When, (with usual Kaḷachuryya titles), the Kaḷachuryya-bhujabala-chakravartti Nissankamalla Sankama-Dêva was in the residence of Kalyâṇa, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—

A dweller at his lotus feet, causer of fear to his enemies, was Kâvaṇa-daṇḍanâyaka, whose descent was as follows ;—In Nandavâḍige in Karaḍikalu-nâḍ was Dêvala-Sôma. In his line, of the Agastya-gôtra, was Permma-Dêva, whose wife was Jakkaṇavve. Their son was Kâvanayya-daṇḍâdhîśa, the elder brother of Têja-chamûpa. Kâvana had the titles gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra and gaṇḍara-gôva. He made Gûrjjara roll on the ground, drove Hoysaḷa to the points of the compass, terrified Velunâḍ-Chôḷeya, .. of Gôva. With the blows of his sword he smote the foot-soldiers, with them he crushed the army of horsemen, with the horses he crushed the rutting elephants, and with the elephants broke to pieces the chariots, rivalling Bhîma,—this daṇḍâdhipa Kâvaṇa. His wives were Kâḷala-Dêvi and Mâḷala-Dêvi. His younger brother Têja-chamûpa's son was Barmma-Dêva, whose younger brothers were the Nâyakas Kêśava, Nârasimha and Mahâliṅga.

Be it well. When the great minister and general, master over seventy two officials, râya-daṇḍanâtha, gaṇḍa-peṇḍâra, complete despoiler of all the proud chieftains, splitter of the skulls of hostile titled chieftains, uprooter of Velunâḍ-Chôḷeya, displacer of Hoysaṇa, terrifier of Koṅkaṇa, supporter of the Kaḷachuryya kingdom,—adorned with these and other names, Kâvaṇayya-daṇḍanâyaka, having made a victorious expedition to the South, came to the Banavâsi country, and surrounded with all the feudatories, had pitched his camp in peace and wisdom :—

To the Lakshmî the famous Banavâsi-dêśa like a storeyed abode was ? Bettanûr. (The rest of the inscription is greatly defaced). The king Pâṇḍya is praised, under whom Mâdêva-daṇḍanâyaka made a grant for the god Harihara, and set up this śâsana to the east of the temple. Date 1280 A.D.

Obeisance to Harihara, and to Râya-Mahadêva and Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa. Praise of S'ambhu.

May the four arms of Hari protect you, dark as a cloud, hard with the rubbing of the bow śârṅga, the pillars of the maṇḍapa of the three worlds. May the Boar form of Hari ever protect you, on the tip of whose tusk—like the stem of a white lotus—the lady earth is poised like a dancer. May that form (repeating the above description) with great favour protect this work of merit. May that Harihara who in the form of the original Boar lifted up the earth, which was like a blue lotus, his tusk its stalk, the horizon its corolla, the constellations its petals, the clouds the bees on it, the golden mountain its pistil, the tortoise its ovary,—ever protect this good work of merit. Elephant-faced, the son of Îśa, with eyes like the lotus, the son of Ambikâ, free from age and death, giving light in the night with the jewels from the heads of serpants bound round his waist, his feet like a blown lotus, of matchless valour, master of the three worlds,—Gaṇâdhipa, may he grant us our hearts' desire. May that only Bhâratî, who holding in her hand a rosary formed of the mundane eggs created by Brahma, is day and night repeating prayers for the good of those who claim her protection, ever without ceasing remain on our tongue.

From the love of Lakshmî was Chandra born from the ocean, the foremost in the three worlds, the progeniter of the Sôma-vamśa. From the birth of the great Kshatriya Yadu, the Yâdava kings gained their name in the world. From the time when Râma and Kṛishṇa were born in that line to remove the troubles of the world, it obtained the highest fame.

In it, Bhillama ruled as lord of all the earth; and from that first king came Jaitugi-Dêva; whose son, in power and fame the foremost of all, was Siṅghaṇa. When he went out for pleasure to exercise the horses, the hostile kings seeing the dust they raised, trembled, and saying there will be no place on the earth where we can put our feet, brought all their accumulated wealth to the lord of the ocean saying, hide these in the waters with your guards,—whence is the ocean called the master of jewels. Like a sun, Singhana, with his rays dried up the water of the ponds his enemies' hearts, closing the waterlilies the eyes of their wives, and caused the lotuses the faces of the Brahmans to expand. His grandson, lord of all the earth, was Kandhara-Dêva, at whose birth the hostile kings, seized with fear, gave up their authority. Verse comparing him with the first of the Pâṇḍavas.

As a moon to unfold the lotus the fame of the Yadu-kula, or Vishṇu to enjoy the Indirâ its wealth, or Hara as the king of old to subdue his enemy Darpparka,—was born Kandhara's younger brother, the great king Mahadêva. You give up, Kêraḷa, the pride of your kingdom ; Hammîra, do not you ruin yourself with your courage ; come at once, have audience and present tribute, you Koṅkaṇa ; Chôḷa, what more can your power do ?—thus do the heralds continually make proclamation, Mahadêva being the sole king in the world. The Gauḷas embraced ant-hills ; the Utkalas, losing shame, fled ; casting away their clothes, the Mâḷavas ran and entered the water in terror ; the Lâḷas gave tribute and had audience ; the remaining kings from time to time became his servants ;—how can I extol the greatness of his power ? Unless his might was thus invincible, could he have subdued those Teluṅga kingdoms, seizing their three cities, and overcome the elephants of his enemies ;—who else was he but truly Girijêśa in the world under the name of Mahadêva-Râya ?

That Kandhâra's son, who seized the wealth of all his enemies, became a king to the goddess of fortune, and the beloved of the goddess earth, was the king Râmachandra or Râma-Râya, who was like another Râma ; his praises.

Be it well. In the victorious kingdom of the favourite of earth and fortune, the mahârâjâdhirâja paramêśvara parama-bhaṭṭâraka, boon lord of Dvârâvatî-pura, a sun in causing the lotus bud the Yâdava-kula to unfold, Trinêtra to Madana the Mâḷava-Râya, an elephant-goad to Gûrjjara-Râya, establisher of the Teluṅga-Râya, a powerful arm in seizing the wealth of the Hoysaṇa-Râya's empire, to hostile kings a jagajh-jhampa, head of all the paṇas (or castes), Râya-Nârâyaṇa, the prauḍha-pratâpa-chakravartti Râmachandra-Râya,—

The general of all the army of his house was Sâḷuva-Tikkama-Dêva : to describe whose descent and glory ;—Like the general of the gods was he born, from Kâyi-Dêva and Hîrâya, the master of the world-ruler Râmachandra's army, Tikkama. Born from the mind of Mahadêva, he was to the moon Râmachandra like its moonlight. When he went forth to war, the mountains were trodden to dust, which formed as it were land in the clouds and turned the ocean to clay, while he played at ball with the heads of the enemies and brought their wealth and presented it at the feet of Râmachandra.

Be it well. When the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, (with other epithets), his right arm a tree of paradise for the protection of the kingdom, obtained from the favour of the lotus feet of Triyambaka the lord Harihara ; establisher of the Kadamba-Râya, displacer of the Hoysaḷa-Râya, the generalissimo nissaṅka-pratâpa Sâḷeya-Tikkama-Dêva-Râṇe having in a victorious expedition to the South invaded (âkramaṇa-krita) Dôrasamudra, and brought a tribute of all kinds of wealth, especially elephants and horses ;—

The generous and mighty one saw Harihara-pura, in which Adhôkshaja (Hari) and Îśa (Hara) manifested themselves, not separately but in one form, for the destruction of Guha. Truly united in one place were the several glories of Kuru, Kâśi, Vâraṇâsi, Himagiri, Gaye, Gôdâvari and S'rînaga (S'rîparvvata), with Vârâhi, a hundred and four chief Brahmans, and the abode of Saurîśa (Harihara), all these. Is this Dêvêndra's abode or a town ? is it the ocean from which S'rî was born ? is it the Raupya-giri where Gaurîśvara is ?—this wonder of the world is beautiful to behold,—thus thinking, Mahadêva with desire made it free of taxes (mânya) in his name.

The manner in which this Harihara agrahâra became sarbba-mânya (or free of all imposts) was as follows ;—On account of his victorious expedition to the South, he paid a visit to (the god) Hariśaṅkara (Harihara), and pouring water from a conch-shell, remitted the customs dues and fixed rent.

And that Sâḷuva-Tikkama-Dêva, begging permission to make a temple in this Harihara-pura in the name of his master Mahadêva-Râya, carried out his intention in the following manner :—As, in order to show to mortals that the god will bestow benefits on his worshippers, he had made the (place) mânya, Îśvara directed Tikkama, saying—That Mahadêva-Râya must ever remain in this my city, having obtained divinity.—(Therefore), near to the god who thus directed his mind, he set up his master Mahadêva-Râya in the image of (the god) Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa.

The date on which he gratified the hundred and four residents of the place by buying the gronnd and made the grant was the S'aka year 1199, the year Îśvara, &c (1277 A.D.). Beginning from then, afterwards in the year Bahudhânya, &c (1279 A.D.), the mahâ-maṇḍaléśa Tikkama-Dêva set up here Lakshmî-vallabha Mahadêva-Râya-Nârâyaṇa, the protector of all. And after that, in the year Pramâthi &c. (1280 A.D.), he set up the golden kalas'a on the temple, and to provide for the worship of the god, bought and granted land in Harihara as follows :—(here come the details).

And the city, the merchants of Pâṇḍya-nâḍ, and the mummuri-daṇḍas of the castes, granted the tolls of the fair for the god. And all the Brahmans of Harihara, and the citizens of Uchchaṅgi, Bêtûru, Lôkeyakeṛe, Banevalli and all the chief cities of the Nonambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand, the merchant guild, and the eighteen castes with both sects of Nânâ-Dêśis at their head, having placed the diamond bayisanige in Harihara and sat down, granted for the god Mahadêva-Râya-Lakshmi-Nârâyaṇa dues and fees as follows :—For trading in the best of the nine kinds of grain (nava-nidhi), for 50 bullock loads, whichever way they may go, whatever has been generally fixed ; for paddy which has been raised in price, one mana for all loads in any direction ; and for the same here, one seer per shop ; for those imported or exported, one sollage per hâḍa. For one head-load of betel leaves, 100 ; of pepper, cardamoms and such, altogether one sollage ; of areca nuts, 50 ; and in case of selling here,—for payment, 50 leaves ; for the sale, 2 areca nuts. Such are the dues assigned for ever on each article for Râya-Nârâyaṇa.[1]

Be it well. Victorious is the manifested Boar form of Vishṇu, which agitated the ocean and bore up the peaceful earth on his strong right tusk.

Of the Mânavya-gôtra praised in all the world, sons of Hâritî, nourished by the Seven Mothers the seven mothers of the world, of continuous good fortune gained from the protection of Kârttikêya, having all kings brought into subjection in a moment at the sight of the Boar ensign obtained from the favour of the adorable Nârâyaṇa, were the Chaḷukyas,—adorning whose family, his body purified by the final ablutions of the horse-sacrifice, was Pulikêśi-vallabha-mahârâja.

Whose son, his pure fame established in Vanavâsi and other territories of foreign kings overcome by his valour, was Kîrttivarmma-pṛithivî-vallabha-mahârâja.

His son, who, by defeating Harshavarddhana the lord of all the North, bent on war, gained another name of Paramêśvara, was Satyâśraya śrî-pṛithivî-vallabha mahârâjâdhirâja paramêśvara.

His dear son, was Vikramâditya-paramêśvara-bhaṭṭâraka, who by his own effort alone, aided by his intelligence, acquired the proper royal glory of his line; who illumined the points of the compass with the banner of his fame, gained by victory over hostile kings that made war upon him with shouts of various kinds (or languages); who after defeating the Pallava king (or king of the Pallavas) that by contempt of a family as pure as the rays of the moon was a cause of destruction, seized Kâñchî-pura; who with the thunderbolt of his prowess split the peaks of the pride of the ? triple mountains Chôḷa Pâṇḍya and Kêraḷa; whose lotus feet were bathed in the waters the rays from the jewelled crown of the Kâñchî king who bowed to no other; supreme lord over the circle of the earth situated in the midst of the three oceans.

His son, by command of his father, even as the general of Bâlênduśêkhara (put a stop to) the power of the Daityas, so put a stop to the overgrown power of Trairâjya Pallava (or Pallava who ruled over three kingdoms); having pleased his mind by bringing all the countries into peace; in his unbounded affection, like Yudhisṭhira; in being loved by S'rî, like Vâsudêva; in being an elephant-goad to kings, like Paraśu-Râma; in being a refuge for kings, like Bharata; by whom the Pallavas

Kalabhras Kêralas Haihayas Viḷas Mâḷavas Chôḷas Pâṇḍyas and others were brought into his service equally with the Âḷuvas Gaṅgas and others of old standing;—Vinayâditya-Satyâśraya śrî-prithivî-vallabha mahârâjâdhirâja paramêśvara bhaṭṭâraka thus commands all people:—

Be it known to you. Six hundred and sixteen S'aka years having passed, and the fourteenth year of our increasing victorious reign being current, our victorious camp being situated at the village of Karanjapatra near to Harishapura,—at the full moon in Kârttika, on the application of śrîmad Âḷuva-Râja, to—of the Vatsya-gôtra, S'riśarmma-sômayâji's grandson, Mâruśarmma's son,—Iśâna-śarmma, fully versed in the vêdas and vêdâṅgas, is given the village of Kiṟu-Kâgâmâsi, in the Ede-voḷal division of the Vanavâsi district, with enjoyment and free from all imposts. Date 1275 A.D.

Praise of S'ambhu. May the Boar form of Hari protect you, on the tip of whose tusk, like the stem of a white lotus, the lady earth rests with rapture like a bee.

In Dêvagiri, Siṅgaṇa-Dêva ruled the kingdom as lord of the world, protecting those who submit and taking away the life of hostile kings who attack him. His son Jaitugi, gives to supplicants as if a new tree of the gods ; what word can be said save that he is Antaka, and excites the angry valour of hostile kings. His son, the great king Kannara was, like Kṛishṇa, a glory of the Yadu-kula, and gave his wealth to the most worthy, acquiring fame which extended on all sides. To Kannara-Dêva was born the king Râmachandra, whom the Kinnara couples praise saying there is none who slays his enemies, makes gifts, and is so beautiful as he. In beauty the famous Kâma, in might of arm Bhîma, in body of nectar Sôma,—Kâma, Bhîma and Sôma was the king Râma reckoned by his qualities.

Be it well. When, with all titles, the Yâdava-Nârâyaṇa, the bhujabala-prauḍha-pratâpa-chakravartti vîra-Râmachandra-Râya's victorious kingdom was extending on all sides, to continue as long as sun moon and stars :—(on the date specified) he gave to all the Brahmans of the immemorial agrahâra Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa-pura, which is Bânavaḷḷi, for the tank of that place, the property of those who die without heirs in the villages of their first settlement. Usual final verses.

Like Anuva to Râma, so was Tippa a minister to the king Râma, great in gold, sole head in the meeting of cultivators. My wealth will not be lost, tribute will come in from the eight quarters, and the kingdom will not grow old,—thus saying, king Râma gave the country to Tipparasa. From the gardens of Râyanakhaṇḍe on the south to the Perddore as the boundary on the north, the king having given him the government, he presented gifts and ruled the world, that Tipparasa. His greatness, equal to that of Guha, only the tongues of the king of serpents can describe,—for others to attempt it is only to be laughed at. Bânavaḷḷi, which was called Lakshmî-Nârâyaṇa-pura, was like an earthly paradise ; and it had three hamlets, Elevaṭṭi, Hêḷehâḷu and Jiguli. The hundred and four Brahmans of Bânavaḷḷi were distinguished for devotion to the six rites, the eight modes of yôga, and their purity. The property of those dying without heirs in those three hamlets Tippa-Râja granted for the tanks.

In a way that even Vâchaspati could not do it, Îśvarâryya compactly composed this śâsana. Usual final verses.

A confounder of the Chôḷa king, destroyer by his arm of Nêpâḷa, an invincible barrier to the serpent Kaḷiṅga, uprooter of the unsubmissive Siṅghaḷa, Chyêndra, Siṅgha and Kauḷûta kings,[1] who oppose him not seeing that their end has come,—was the king Râya-Pâṇḍya, wielder of a heavy club like a thunderbolt. His crowned queen was Sôvala-Dêvi, whose lotus feet were kissed by the clustres of bees the curls on the foreheads of the co-wives. On her becoming the consort of the protector of the ocean-girdled earth, Râya-Pâṇḍya, she obtained hero wifehood ; and on her bearing the pure, kind, generous and brave kings Paṇḍita-Pâṇḍya, Vîra-Pâṇḍya and Vijaya-Pâṇḍya, she obtained hero motherhood.

His white umbrella a shady place for the goddess of kingdom to stand in, a refuge for the goddess of discipline, his arm an abode for the goddess of victory, his feet a refuge for the pure and the beautiful,—thus does all the universe praise the king Vijaya-Pâṇḍya.

Be it well. When, with all titles, the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Vijaya-Pâṇḍya-Dêva was in the residence of Uchchaṅgi, ruling the Noḷambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand :—with the consent of the great minister, of the Vâji-kula and Bhâradvâja-gôtra, the headman of Chikka-Bannikôḍu,—Sôvala-Dêvi (on the date specified) confirmed to the god Kali the former endowments (specified), and made grants (specified) for the god Mallikârjjuna.

Be it well. The great nâd, rising up (eddu), in the presence of the headman, granted for the god Mallikârjjuna one visa per hon on local and imported goods, and made over the temple to Jñânaśakti-paṇḍita. Usual final verses.

[1] Such are the names in the original. Perhaps the second may be a mistake for Chêdyêndra or Chaidy-Ândhra.

Obeisance to Gaṇâdhipati and to Harihara. Praise of S'ambhu.

Be it well. Master of all worlds, great god of gods, supreme lord, destroyer of the differences of S'aiva and Vaishṇava, granter of a boon to Mârkkaṇḍêya, dwelling on the eastern bank of the Tuṅgabhadrâ, adorning Kûḍalûr, having assumed an undual form, is the one avatâra Harihara, subduer of the pride of Guhâsura, his two lotus feet placed on the chest of Guhâsura, fulfilling the desires of the faithful.

(On the date specified), at the time of the eclipse of the moon, when the râjâdhirâja paramêśvara vîra-pratâpa Sadâśiva-mahârâya was in Vidyânagara, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—Mârgasahâya-Nâyaka,—son of Vêlûr Kâlappa-Nâyaka, agent of Kṛishṇappa-Nâyaka, son of the Haḍapa, Sindu-Gôvinda, sitagara-gaṇḍa, dhavalâṅka-Bhîma, boon lord of Maṇinâgapura, Baiyyappa-Nâyaka, agent of Sadâśiva-mahârâya,—made a grant of the village of Ganganarasi for the car festival of the god Harihara, and the goddesses Lakshmî and Pârvatî. Benedictions and imprecations.

Praise of S'ambhu. Be it well. When, (with usual Kaḷachurya titles), the bhujabala-chakravartti Tribhuvanamalla-Bijjaṇa-Dêva's victorious kingdom was extending on all sides, to continue as long as sun moon and stars :—

A dweller at his lotus feet,—When it is said that he was a king of the race of the moon which was born from the milk ocean, who can compare in greatness with this king Pâṇḍya ? Having smitten Surapati's crown with the bracelet on his hand, and adorned mount Mêru with the fish crest,—was the Pâṇḍya lineage an ordinary one ? Of Sênâpati's lineage what can I say ? To the Lakshmî the Pâṇḍya kingdom, and the rank of general for the promotion of peaceful succession, he was the chief. As for his experience, it was he who chose from among the sons of the Pâṇḍya king, from the former Palatta downwards, and held up (or established) the king, and made the kingdom strong ; without him they were ciphers (pûjya).

In the splendid Noḷambavâḍi shines the famous Koṅgaḷi-nâḍ. In it, like the nose to the face of the kampaṇa, the Bikkiga Seventy, the mother-home of fortune, an ornament to the earth-goddess, a source of merit, was Sênâpati—with the good name of Arasiyakere Abba-Gauṇḍa. (Here follows a genealogy of several gauḍas). And there was Vâmaśakti-paṇḍita-dêva, whose son was Kalyâṇaśakti-paṇḍita-dêva, whose brother was Têjônidhi-Amritahasta-paṇḍita-dêva. Also Sênâpati-daṇḍanâyaka's wife was Mahadêvi-daṇḍanâyaki.

In Bijjaṇa-Dêva's reign, (on the date specified), for the god Mâdêśvara of Arasiyakere, the Brahma-tîrtha of the goddess Tuṅgabhadrâ of Kûḍalûr, (the abode) of the god Sânkara-Nârâyaṇa,—washing the feet of Têjônidhi-paṇḍita-dêva, disciple of Vâmaśakti-paṇḍita, disciple of Jnânaśakti-dêva,—Sênâpati-daṇṇâyaka's wife Mahadêvi-dannayakiti made a grant of land (specified). And a site for a house for the Jîya. Usual final verses.

Praise of S'ambhu. When, (with usual Châḷukya titles), Jagadekamalla-Dêva's victorious kingdom was extending on all sides, to continue as long as sun moon and stars, and he was in the residence of Kalyâṇa-pura, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—verses in praise of Jagadêkamalla, calling him the Kuntala-Râya. Frightening and driving away in alarm the Chôḷa king proud of his arm and his power in battle, he made the Chôḷ-nela (or Chôḷa country) to be as if an âḷ-nela (slave or servant country), and attacking Hoysaḷa, increased his fame by capturing his elephant,—who in the world can compare in glory and might with Jagadêkamalla ?

A dweller at his lotus feet was Vîra-Pâṇḍya-Dêva, the glory of whose descent was as follows :—(here come the same verses as in No. 84 above, with one additional, stating that Vîra-Pâṇḍya's father was the king Râya, and his mother Sôvala-Dêvi).

Be it well. When, (with various epithets, including) a human jewel produced from the eastern mountain the body of Sûryyâṇḍa-nâtha, the soul of Vîra-Pâṇḍya's city,—Sênâpati-daṇḍanâtha was in the royal city (râjadhâni) Châge (or? Bâge), in peace and wisdom, an abode of prosperity,—(on the date specified), for the god Kali of Arasiyakere (described as in No. 84), washing the feet of Vâmaśakti-paṇḍita, disciple of Jnânaśakti-dêva, he made a grant of land (specified). Also two house sites for the Jîya and for the servant who supplies leaves for the god. Usual final verses.

Date 1177 A.D.

Be it well. In the increasing reign of the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Vijaya-Pâṇḍya-Dêva,(on the date specified), for the god Kali of Arasiyakere, washing the feet of Têjônidhi-paṇḍita, he made a grant of an oil-mill. Usual final phrases.

To the famous lord Gaṅga-gavuṇḍa and to Lôkavve was born Barmma-gauṇḍa. To S'ânta and S'ântikavve was born Kaleya. In the womb of Kali-Dêva's wife Mâkikavve was born Sûryyâ-ṇḍa. (After verses describing Jnânasakti-muni and his son Vâmaśakti). His brother was Aditya, whom the king made a minister,—who can describe the greatness of Aditya-daṇḍâdhipa ? To Sûryya was born Sênâpati-daṇḍanâtha.

Vâmaśakti-paṇḍita's son was Kalyâṇaśakti-paṇḍita.

The sênabôva Boppeya wrote this śâsana. The stone-mason Maḷôja engraved it.

Praise of the Jina śâsana.

Be it well. When, (with usual Châḷukya titles), Tribhuvanamalla Permmâḍi-Dêva's victorious kingdom was extending on all sides, to contiune as long as sun moon and stars :—

A dweller at his lotus feet,—throughout the ocean-girdled globe what great warrior, with heart of bravery, will oppose with anger the conqueror of Tripura (Siva), S'ûdraka, Suparṇṇi's son (Garuḍa), Phalguna (Arjuna), Daśaratha's son (Râma), Sahasrârjjuna, the destroyer of the Dânavas (Krishṇa), the enemy of the Kaurava king (Bhîma),—or the king Pâṇḍya. The multitudes (of the armies of Aṅga, Kaḷiṅga, Vaṅga, Magadha, Nêpâḷa, Pâñchâḷa, Gûrjjara, Gauḷa, Draviḍa, Andhra, Mâḷava, Turushka, ... , Saurâshṭra, Barbbara,Kâśmîra, ... does he speedly chase away in terror,—the king Pâṇḍya.

Be it well. Entitled to the five big drums, mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, boon lord of Kâñchi-pura, sun in the sky of the Yadu-vaṁśa, crest-jewel of good warriors, a sun to the lotus his own family, champion in cutting on both sides, defeater of the designs of Râjiga-Chôḷa, bee at the lotus feet of Tribhuvanamalla-Dêva,—with these and other titles, the rod in Tribhuvanamalla's right hand ;—

(The inscription is very much defaced after this).

Distinguished as a minister was Sûryya-daṇḍâdhipa, whose wife was Kâḷiyakka. Thinking what permanence is there in the acquisition of wealth, which may be lost through robbers, or claimants, or the covetous, or kings, or fire,—she made a vow, saying, I will at once fix it so as to be secure, and caused to be made in Sembanûr a beautiful temple for Jinapati. Praises of Sûryya-daṇḍanâyaka's senior daṇḍanâyakitti Kâḷiyakka. Her father was Âytavarmmâ, her mother Jakkavve, her . . . . Kali-Dêva.

Sûryya-chamûpa's younger brother was Âditya-daṇḍâdhinâtha. His praises, stating that he was master of all the property of Châḷukya Vikramâditya-Dêva's court, the rod in Tribhuvanamalla-Permmâḍi-Dêva's right hand, the beloved son of the famous Sênavara-daṇḍanâtha, an axe to the forest the race of the irresistible Durvvinîta-daṇḍanâtha, a mirror to the closed (nîrandhra) goblet-breasts of the Ândhris, a golden flower-ornament to the curls of the Kuntalis.

In the Nandi-saṅgha of the Draviḷa-saṅgha shines the Aruṅgalânvaya, having crossed over the ocean of all the śâstras. Even the tongue,—clear, quick and voluble,—of Dhûrjaṭi turns back hastily into its cavity, the speaker Samantabhadra being in thy assembly: what manner of court is this, O king ?[1] In the line of Samantabhadra-svâmi,—Your unique qualities, your oneness in everything, Vâdirâja, your dignity also, and your immeasurable greatness, how can (they be described)? [2] His disciple,—Brighter than the moon, broader than the sky, weightier than the earth, profounder than the ocean, loftier than Mêru,—your fame, Ajitêśa, rutting elephant in the earth, is like an orb among the human stars of the present day. That Ajitasêna-bhaṭṭâraka's elder disciple,—A thunderbolt to the mountain-chain deep settled anger, a lion to the flapping elephant pride, a wild-fire to the forest illusion, a sun to the great darkness swelling covetousness, lover of pleasing poetry, a moon in raising the tide in the ocean the Bhavyas,—was Mallishêna-vratîndra. That celebrated Mallishêna-Maladhâri's disciple,—Do not lament, Nayyâyika ; be not ashamed of your own creed, Sânkhya ; stop, don't begin boasting, Mîmâmsaka ; go, go, Bauddha, without being checked ;—the lion in splitting open the temples of the vicious elephants opponent speakers has come, S'rîpâla-traividya-dêva, a full moon to the ocean of nectar the Jina-samaya.

Be it well. (On the date specified), into the hands of Sântisayana-paṇḍita, temple priest of Sembanûr, the senior daṇḍanâyakiti Kâḷiyakkavve, pouring water, made a grant of land (specified) for the company of Pârśva-dêva, the service of the god and the livelihood of the pûjâri. Benedictions and imprecations.

[1] Kiḷ-guṇṭheyâda—This obscure expression occurs also in the Dodda Huṇdi stone, in connection with the death of the Gaṅga king Nîtimârgga; see T.N. 91. Vol. VI. (also Ep. Ind. VI, 43, where Dr. Fleet's interpretation is very wide of the mark). My Assistant has suggested, and it seems very probable, in view of the many records we have now come across showing the existence of a custom according to which vows were taken by devoted followers not to survive their royal masters, that kuṇthe (by euphony guṇthe) may be connected with kuṇi, a pit or grave. Kiḷ of course means below or under. The votary was therefore either cremated in the fire-pit under the body of his master, or buried below him in the grave, whichever was the mode of disposing of the body.

[2] The original has Kadambaḷige Thirty-two Thousand, which is evidently a mistake, as Kadambaḷige was a Thousand province, and Noḷambavâḍi was the Thirty-two Thousand province. Compare No. 2 of this taluq above.

On the tip of the tusk of the original Boar the earth rested with desire for only a moment, but on the point of Ajjanna's lance the Kariyakal-nâḍ remained permanently. Ajjanna's wife was Tippama, a jewel of Jina worship, who bore the minister Bîcha. To him, knowing his faithfulness, the king Barmma gave ...(rest gone).

On king Bamma giving the order, the minister Bîcha, connecting Niḍugal to Hâniya, in a moment caused a fort to be made, celebrated throughout the nâḍ, on account of enemies who would not submit. And owing to the security which Kammaṭa Bîcha thus created, concern about swords, care about smoke, trouble about drums, ... dependence on hot sand,[1] boxing, fatigue, and the service of war, did not exist even in dreams. When the host of enemies came to fight without considering it true that they were impregnable, the fort of Hâniya and the fort of Niḍugal gave confidence that they would in various ways despatch them to the world of gods. Hearing of the mighty hill-fort which Bîcha-chamûpa had so rapidly constructed, Pallava shook, Ândhra became as if blind, Karṇṇâṭa was scared, the Aṅga and Vaṅga kings ...., Mâḷava turned his back and got into a hole, Yâdava trembled lest he should be made a servant.

So that as long as sun and moon endure they should be a protection for the whole kingdom and for his own wealth, thus did the minister Bîcha cause the forts of Niḍugal and Hâniya to be made in witness of which are these letters engraved on stone.

Date 252 B.C.

(Brahmi characters, except the last word, which is in Kharôshṭhi).

By order of the Prince (Ayaputa) and the mahâmâtas at Suvaṇṇagiri, the mahâmâtas in Isila will be wished good health, and will be addressed as follows :—

The Beloved of the gods (thus) commands :—For more than two years and a half that I was an upâsaka (or lay-disciple) I did not exert myself strenuously. One period of six years, or indeed more than a period of six years since, I entered the saṅgha (or community of the Order), and have strenuously exerted myself ; and in this time the men who were (regarded as) true in Jambu-dvîpa (have been shown to be) false, together with the gods. This indeed is the fruit of exertion. But this can not be attained by the great only ; for, if he desire, even the lowly can by exertion gain much heavenly bliss. For this purpose has this exhortation been delivered :—'Let small and great exert themselves to this end.' My neighbours too should know this ; and this exertion should be of long continuance. And (so) this purpose will grow,—it will grow exceedingly,—it will grow to at least half as much again. And this exhortation was delivered by the Vyûtha (or the Departed)[1] 256 (? years ago).[2]

Thus says the Beloved of the gods :—Obedience should be rendered to mother and father. So also regard for living creatures should be enforced. Truth should be spoken. These virtues of the sacred law should be practised. So also the teacher should be honoured by the pupil, and towards relations due respect indeed should be shown. This is the ancient standard (of piety),—this conduces to long life, and this should thus be done.

Written by Paḍa the scribe.[3]

(On the date specified), in the presence of the mahâ-nâyakâchâryya, (with several epithets), Bôri-Nâyaka of Guḍekôṭe Bâṇarâvi, Bommava-Nâgati and a number of others, priests, farmers and merchants (named),—Phôtadâr Satyappa gave the goldsmith right of this village to Kembâvi Îrappa and Appaṇṇa, and the phôttadârike right of the 33 villages in his Bâṇarâvi country, as follows :—

1 Meaning Buddha. 2 No one has succeeded in discovering exactly what these figures refer to.

3 This last word lipikarêṇa is in Kharôshṭhi characters, written from right to left.

Having collected the king's rastu,[1] when it was not in that Satyappa's house, his house being in Viṭla-pura, and when the rastu money was deposited in the house of residents at Kembâvi, thieves broke into the Kembâvi house and carried off the bags containing the money. On which that Satyappa reported the same to the king, and added that Kembâvi Îrappa and Appaṇṇa would confirm it; whereupon the king ordered an inquiry to be made, along with the court officials and others (described). Îrappa and Appaṇṇa being arrested and examined, confirmed the statement. The king then grew very angry, and imposed a fine of 120 varaha. Then the officials, appealing to the king's mercy, saying we have fined poor men with both our eyes shut,—the king ordered the watchmen to trace out the thieves and gave them six months to do so. To this Satyappa consented, and his son deposited all the jewels belonging to his wife, which the officials urged the king to accept and remit the fine, recovering the money from Satyappa. In reply to a question from the king, Satyappa said he had no means whatever, but offered to pay half the dues received by him in the 33 villages of the Bâṇarâvi country, on which the chief men transferred to Îrappa and Appaṇṇa the landed property (specified), and directed that it should be enjoyed by both as if brothers. Îrappa and Appaṇṇa then paid the money and no others were allowed to share in the property. Witnesses (a great number of names follow).

[1] This verse, which seems to be well known, has only once been met with before, in Channagiri No. 43, dated 1653 A.D. It is said to be taken from the Mâsa-mahâtmya of the Vâyu or other purâṇa, and refers to the merit arising from making a tank. A quail once scraped a hole in the ground ; a boar came and made it larger ; a buffalo and an elephant each in turn enlarged it still more ; a holy man then pointed out that it could be made into a tank or pond, and the king to whom he gave this advice carried out the idea and made a grant of it. For their respective shares in this work of merit all six went to svarga or paradise.

Obeisance to S'ambhu &c. The Châḷukyas ruled the ocean-girdled earth : after them the Kaḷachuryya king Bijjaṇa protected the earth. At whose beginning the king Palatta Pâṇḍya protected with affection the Nonambavâḍi Thirty-two Thousand, which is like a girdle for the young woman the Earth. After him Phoṇḍi-Pâṇḍya was celebrated, and after him .... was born Râya-Pâṇḍya. After him, to king Noḷeya-Pâṇḍya was born .... the king Kâma-Dêva. Kâmarasa's son, devoted to war, ... ruled the earth in succession, an ornament of kings. Thrashing the line of Pâṇḍya kings on the field of battle, terrifying and putting to flight hostile kings, by the might of his arm, the crest-jewel of righteous rulers, the Hoysaḷa king vîra-Ballâḷa ruled the celebrated Noṇambavâḍi. (Here follows the usual account of the rise and succession of the Hoysalas, to Narasimha).

In the Pâṇḍya-nâḍ, which was great in the world in gifts and sacrifices, pre-eminent was the Emmeganûr-vṛitti, brilliant as a mirror set with jewels. Description of its groves and gardens. The place of residence (nelemane) for that vṛitti, an abode of fortune, Emmeganûr shone like Amarâvati, the city of Dêvêndra. The descent of its manneya was as follows :—Reckoned as a wrestler in war was Vaijarasa, whose son was Bammarasa, whose eldest son was Hariparasa. These being the masters of Emmeganûr, those excellent manneyas did service to the former rulers who put down the evil and protected the good.

Be it well. When, (with usual titles), the Hoysaḷa king vîra-Narasimha-Dêva was in the residence of Dôrasamudra, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom :—A dweller at his lotus feet (with praises) was Rebbacha. (Some part effaced here). Apparently praises of certain officers of the palace, two brothers named Râghava and S'ankara, who ?were Noḷambas. His family god Sômanâtha, his mother . . . . . . le, of the Bhâradvâja-gôtra, [ornament of the] twice-born, was Râghava, whose brother was S'ankara;—how fortunate was he. In the Emmeganûr-vṛitti, in the royal city (râjadhâni) Emmeganûr, (with praises), was Jakkarasa, a promoter of the race of the twice-born. To Jakkarasa's mother were born the brothers Holalu-dêva, Dêvapa, and Kali-dêva, how fortunate thus was Rudra, whose chief mita was Harihara. Then follow praises of Biyâḷa Mâḷi-seṭṭi, born to Bammi-seṭṭi and Kâḍave, stating how he acquired the name Biyâḷa. In Emmeganûr, famous in the world, Biyâḷa Gêti-seṭṭi was famous.

Thus the master of Emmeganûr, Jakkarasa, Biyâḷa Gêti-seṭṭi, Kêta-gauḍa and numerous other gauḍas and seṭṭis (named)—all these prabhu-gauḍas, headed by the adhikâri Râghava-dêva and Pampayya, (on the date specified), at the time of the sun's eclipse, for the decorations and illuminations of the god Svayambhu Kali of Hiri-Yemmiganûr, for vessels, cloths, Chaitra, pavitra, and temple repairs, made a grant of Hanliganahaḷḷi, washing the feet of (with the usual ascetic virtues) Amritarâsi's son Bhîmarâsi's son Brahmaśivamâla-guru. Boundaries.

Be it well. Of the Gangânvaya praised in all the world, (with various epithets, including) lord of Nandagiri, nanniya-Ganga, jayaduttaranga, having the crest of a rutting elephant, kaṇṇambi-nâtha,—to Hariyarasa . . . was born Bammarasa-Dêva, who, washing the feet of Bhûnarâsi-guru, formerly made the following grant. (Here come the details).

And the Pâṇḍya-nâḍ hejjunka heggaḍe Ruddaṇya made a grant (specified) for the perpetual light of the same god from the grain duties of the Emmeganûr-vṛitti, and one oil-mill. And the Ojas of 12 villages made a grant (specified) for the same purpose.

Obeisance to Gaṇâdhipati. Praise of S'ambhu, the Boar and Gaṇêśa.

From the churning of the milk ocean by the gods arose a bright one (Chandra), disperser of darkness. His son, distinguished for great penance, was Budha. From him sprang Purûrava; from him, Âyu; from Âyu, Nahusha; from him, Yayâti, great in war; from whom, by Dêvayâni, was born the famous Turvasu, the equal of Vasu.

In that race arose Timma-bhûpati, as renowned among the Tuluva kings as Krishṇa was in the Yadu line, whose wife was Dêvaki. From him sprang Îśvara, whose wife was Bukkamâ. From him was born Narasa, like Kâma, the joy of Dêvaki. Quickly damming the Kâvêrî when in full flood, he crossed over, and seizing the enemy alive, took possession of his kingdom and of the city S'rîranga-paṭṭaṇa, and erected a pillar of victory. Having conquered Chêra, Chôḷa, and Pâṇḍya, together with the lord of Madhurâ, whose honour was his ornament, the fierce Turushka, the Gajapati king and others,—he imposed his commands on the heads of all the famous kings from the banks of the Ganges to Lankâ (Ceylon); and from the rising to the setting sun. (Omitting laudations)—From Tippâjî and Nâgalâ-Dêvî were born to him Nṛisimha and Krishna-Râya.

The heroic Nârasimha, seated on the jewel-throne in Vijayanagara, by his fame and policy putting to shame Nriga, Nala, Nahusha and other kings of the earth, ruled the kingdom from Sêtu to Sumêru and from the eastern to the western mountains, drawing the hearts of all to himself. All manner of gifts did he make in Kanakasadas (Chidambram), in the temple of Virûpâksha (at Hampi), in the town of Kâlahasti (North Arcot District), in Venkaṭâdri (at Tirupati), in Kânchî (Conjeveram), in S'riśaila (Karnul District), in S'ônaśaila (Tiruvannâmalai), in the great Harihara (Chitaldroog District), in Ahôbala (Karnul District), in Sangama (at the junction of the Malâpahâri and Krishnâ), in S'rirañga (near Trichinopoly), in Kumbhaghôṇa (Tanjore District), in the Mahâ-nandi-tîrtha (Karnul District), in Nivritti (at the junction of the Tungabhadrâ and Krishnâ), in Gôkarṇa (North Kanara District), in Râmasêtu (Madura District), and many other sacred places,—namely, every variety of the great gifts, such as the golden egg, the golden wheel, the goldon pot, the goldon cow, the seven golden seas, the wishing tree, the golden cow of plenty, golden earth, gold horse-chariot, a man's weight in gold, a thousand cows, a golden horse, the golden-wombed (Brahma), gold elephant-chariot, and the five ploughs. Having ruled a perfect kingdom unopposed, this king of the earth, famed for his virtues, went to svarga, as if to rule the kingdom of the sky.

Mightier even than him, the king Krishṇa-Râya took the earth upon his shoulders as if a jewelled epaulette. From his wide-spread fame all nature became as if of the same (white) colour, so that Purâri (S'iva) could be distinguished only by the eye in his forehead, Padmâksha (Vishṇu) by his four arms, Padmabhû (Brahma) by his four faces, Kâli by her sword, Ramâ (Lakshmî) by her lotus, Vâṇî (Sarasvatî) by the lute in her hand. Overcome by his glory, the sun sinks into the western ocean as if quite unable to endure the distress of mind. As if fearing that the seven oceans would provide a refuge to his enemies, they were dried up with the clouds of dust raised by the earth trampled to pieces by the troops of his horsemen, but they were formed again by the measureless streams poured out with the brahmâṇḍa, svarṇa-mêru, and other his great gifts. As though, in order that the donations and wealth he had given might be long enjoyed, he would stay the chariot of the sun and provide resting places for the gods, he erected pillars, stretching like mountain peaks into the sky, filled with the accounts of his victorious expeditions to each point of the compass and with the names of his titles. In Kânchî, S'riśaila, S'ôṇâchala, Kanakasabhâ, Veṅkaṭâdri and other places, so as to add greatly to his glory, did he again and again bestow the great gifts described in the śâstras, together with the grants associated with them. Punisher of warlike kings, able in protecting the world which lies in the arms of S'êsha, punisher of kings who break their word, giver of joy to his dependents, fierce in war, styled râjâdhirâja râja-paramêśvara, Suratrâṇa of the Hindu kings, destroyer of the tigers the evil, a gaṇḍa-bhêruṇḍa, distinguished by these and other titles; served by Aṅga, Vaṅga, Kaliṅga, and other kings, with such words as "Look on us, great king! Victory! Long life!"—his generosity praised by the learned, this king of kings Kṛishṇa-Râya, seated on the jewel throne in Vijayanagara, shone with surpassing fame.

(On the date specified), on the bank of the Tuṅgabhadrâ river, in the presence of Virûpâksha, desiring to form an agrahâra, with full affection he gave to Timmâ-bhaṭṭa praised in every way, ever regular in the śrauta and smârtha ceremonies, a chief Brahman worthy of a grant of land, the son of the learned Liṅgâ-bhaṭṭa, descended from Orugaṇṭa Kâkapedda, of the S'aunakânvaya, Âpastamba-sûtra and Yajuś-śâkhâ,—the Bobûr village (boundary villages specified), situated in the Maleyanûr-sthala, in the Hiriyûr-sîma of the Kuntala-dêśa,—together with its hamlets Hatadorai, Ganadahuniśe and Nâmânpalle, (with all the usual rights).

And this proprietor, dividing it into 32 shares, reserved 16 for himself as manager, and the remainder he bestowed on the Brahmans (named). The boundaries of the agrahâra are here written in the language of the country. (Here follow the details).

This copper śâsana of a grant of land by the renowned king Kṛishṇa-Râya, was composed with soft expressions by Sabhâpati at the command of Kṛishṇa-Dêva-mahârâya. And by order of Kṛishṇa-Dêva-mahârâya the copper śâsana was engraved by Mallaṇa's son, the carpenter Vîraṇâchârya.

Obeisance to Gaṇâdhipati. Praise of S'ambhu, the Boar and Gaṇêśa.

There was a râjâdhirâja, of the Manumula-kula, handsome and high-born, the king named Hâlappa, versed in the S'aiva śâstras. Having given gold and clothing in the days of Harihara, his fame was celebrated by the twice-born, in valour the equal of S'akra, his countenance like the moon, the punisher of all enemies. In the city named Mattêdu dwelt the king Hâla, the walls of whose palace were like gold (in colour), adorned with all manner of paintings. His son was the king named Doddana, mighty in valour, who gave to Hiriyanna, the councillor of his family, Ganjagêra. Râma.. having said to him, "Make an agrahâra, with a tank of pure water,"—he accordingly made it an agrahâra, and setting up broad stones bearing the figure of Vâmana at the boundaries, established the Ganjagêra agrahâra, putting up also a stone in the village, to the east, in the presence of the Son of the Wind (Hanuman), containing the account. The income from the village was 20 nishkas. All rights to be enjoyed free of all taxes.

The king Doḍḍaṇa-Nâyaka's son was Saṅgapa, who ruled the earth for a long time in righteousness, and the Brahmans settled in Mattinaḍu strove by good works to increase his fame, and dwelt there in great comfort.

His son Hâla-Râja, when going to the forest to hunt wild beasts, saw the Gañjagêra agrahâra in ruins, and the fine tank breached. Having slain many tigers and fierce wild boars, he freed the forest so that it might be traversed without fear. On returning to the city with his forces, he informed the matter to his wife and his two sons Siddharâma and Doddaṇṇa, saying; "O sons, the agrahâra was formerly made by my father's father. It must be done by us if we wish the work of merit to be maintained." Hearing these words of their beloved father, they said, "Let it be as you say, and let the work of merit be maintained." The king (thereupon) immediately sent for Hiriyaṇṇa and Râmachandra, and gave them orders, saying, "Make the agrahâra and the tank (again)," and informed Râmachandra, that for his own welfare, he would give the land in writing to Brahmans.

Hiriyaṇṇa and Râmachandra, having heard the words of the king, (re)made the large fine tank; and (on the date specified), at S'iva-râtri, in order that he might in the other world gain the lotus feet of the First Being, the king gave a śâsana for Gañjagêra-pura, changing its former name to Narasâpura. (Here follows a list of the Brahmans who received shares)—altogether 16. (List of the boundary stones, in the language of the country),—altogether 10. Usual final verses.

Om. Obeisance to S'ambhu &c. Usual account of the origin and genealogy of the Hoysaḷas, down to Ballâḷa (III).

Be it well. When, (with usual titles, including) Adiyama's Yama, gold (kânchana) to Kânchî (or the zone) .. .., establisher of Chôḷa-Râya, setter up of Pâṇḍya-Râya, uprooter of Magara-Râya, born in the Châḷukya-kula,—Hoysaṇa vîra-Ballâḷa-Dêvarasa and Mâdigi-Dêva-daṇṇâyaka were in the residence of Dôrasamudra, ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom:—

Be it well. When, possessed of the usual ascetic virtues (named); devoted to the worship of aupâsana, agnihôtra, the twice born, gurus and gods; of a fame glorious as the sun; daily performers of the six rites (named); shining lights in the qualities gained by the study of the Rig, Yajus, Sâma and Atharbbaṇa vêdas, and the vêdânta;—the hundred and twenty Brahmans of the all-worshipful great agrahâra Udbhava-Sômanâthapura, which was Nirugunda, were ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom:—

[1] For these places see No. 94 above.

In the Gaṅgavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand, in the Arabala Seventy, the first place was Honneya-kere.—To describe the fame and greatness of its gauḍas ;—Praise of Sôma-gavuḍa, called Abhinô-malla. To him and his wife Lakha-gavuḍi was born Malli-gavuḍa. (On the date specified), he made a grant of lands (specified) for the god Prasanna-Mallinâtha, with certain grants of oil from the oil-mills. Usual final verses.

This śâsana of the god Prasanna-Mallinâtha was written (i. e. engraved) by âchâri Êchôja's son Sidôja Sômôja.

(On the date specified),—praised by all the world ; having gained five hundred vîra-śâsanas ; adorned with many good qualities, truth, purity, good character, respect, humility and intelligence ; embodiments of heroes ; protectors of the Vîra-Bananju-dharmma,—the Seṭṭi-guttas of the Arabala Seventy, the paṭṭaṇa-svâmi, temple priests and all the eighteen castes gave a śâsana as follows :—To Mâra-gavuḍa of Honneyakere we give the office of nâḍ-heggaḍe, with one paṇa from each of 40 villages, half a paṇa from each of 30 villages, and the tolls, etcetera, of the fair. In confirmation of of this, the own signature of the nâḍ,—śrî-Gavareśvara.

The heggaḍe Mâra-gavuḍa will provide 1 pa worth of oil every year for the light on the dîpa-mâla of the god Prasanna-Mallinâtha.

Obeisance to Ganâdhipati and to Sadâśiva

Be it well. (On the date specified), several gauḍas (named) of Jâjûru-sthala, with the approval of their wives, sons and claimants, granted to Guruvaṇṇa, son of Halattihâḷa Basavaṇṇa-pûjâri of the pancha-maṭha ...... the two villages Jâjûru and Kôṭehâḷa, bought for 200 ga., with the usual rights. Witnesses.

Works by the same Author.

(On sale by the Curator, Government Book Depôt, Bangalore).

Archæological Survey of Mysore.

1879. Mysore Inscriptions, translated for H. M. Secretary of State for India, from photographs in the India Office and original sources. With Introduction and Map. Price Rs. 6.

1891. Find of Roman Coins near Bangalore, with fac-similes.

1892. Edicts of Asoka in Mysore, with illustrations.

"Cette découverte fera époque dans l'archéologie indienne."—Presidential address (by M. Senart), Acade'mie des Inscriptions, Paris. "The most important epigraphic discovery which was made in India during the year 1892. These inscriptions have created no small stir in the learned world."—Presidential address (by Sir Charles Elliot), Asiatic Society. "Very interesting papers, not perhaps sufficiently known."—Dr. J. Burgess, in Academy.

Mysore Archæological Series.

Epigraphia Carnatica.

1886. I. Coorg Inscriptions, translated for Government, with Illustrations. Price Rs. 2-8.

1889. II. Inscriptions at S'ravana-Belgola, a chief seat of the Jains. With Illustrations, Introduction, Text and Translations. Price Rs. 12.

"Important volume."—Vienna Oriental Journal. "The editor has spared no pains in making the results of his long and arduous work of decipherment available to the student."—Trübner's Record. "A very valuable book."—Presidential address (by Mr. Beveridge), Asiatic Society. "To all who wish to study Indian Architecture of a particular class we recommend the volume as the best available professionally useful book on the subject."—Indian Engineering.

1894. III. Inscriptions in the Mysore District, Part I. Price Rs. 12.

"The numerous and various points of interest which the new epigraphic discoveries in Mysore offer, entitle Mr. Rice to the hearty congratulations of all Sanskritists, and to their warm thanks for the ability and indefatigable zeal with which he continues the Archæological explorations in the province confided to his care."—Dr. G. Bühler, in Academy. "Splendid work, of monumental character, which will bear your name to uttarâni yugâni."—Professor A. Weber. "Supplies a great desideratum, as it contains S'aka dates for several Chôḷa kings whose inscriptions in the Madras Presidency are only dated in years of the reign."—Dr. Hultzsch, in Report for 1894-95. "The volume redounds to the credit of the author......His work is always thorough, and in all the volumes he has published he has shown a comprehensive grasp of his subject, and placed before his readers most useful, lucid and detailed reports."—Madras Mail.

1898. IV. Inscriptions in the Mysore District, Part II. Price Rs. 10.

"The volumes contain an immense amount of most valuable information."—Professor Kielhorn. "A review of the whole field seems to show that despite all drawbacks and disadvantages there is promise in the literary activity of India to-day. And in forming this estimate we have taken no account of such official works as Mr. Rice's Inscriptions in the Mysore District (Part II) and ...... which are in themselves sufficient to make the year memorable."—Madras Mail. "Mr. Rice's labours in this direction are simply invaluable."—Report on Publications in Mysore for 1898.

1902. V. Inscriptions in the Hassan District. Price Rs. 20.

"A student of history will find the volume a repository of valuable historical material. Mr. Rice and the Mysore Government deserve to be congratulated on the great service they are rendering to the cause of Indian history."

1901. VI. Inscriptions in the Kadur District. Price Rs. 8.

Mr. Rice's archæological and epigraphical researches bear the impress of great ability and indefatigable zeal, and all his works have been characterized by an intimate and first-hand knowledge of the Kanarese people, their institutions and literature." Madras Mail.

1902. VII. Inscriptions in the Shimoga District, Part I. (Now ready).

1903. XI. Inscriptions in the Chitaldroog District. (Now ready).

(In the press).

VIII. Inscriptions in the Shimoga District, Part II.

IX. Inscriptions in the Bangalore District.

X. Inscriptions in the Kolar District.

XII. Inscriptions in the Tumkur District.

Gazetteers, &c.

1877. Mysore and Coorg, a Gazetteer compiled for the Government of India. In 3 volumes. With Maps and Illustrations. Price Rs. 11-8.

"Models of administrative research."—Sir W. W. Hunter in Preface to Imperial Gazetteer. "Mr. Rice has done his work well. He combines a comprehensive grasp of his entire subject with the faculty of lucid exposition, and also a careful attention to details."—Academy. "A mine of information about the country. Evidently written con amore, it shows great care and research, great knowledge of the language and literature of the country, and a thorough appreciation of the subject in hand."—Calcutta Review.

1881. Amarakos'a, the Nâmalingânus'âsana of Amara Simha, with Kannada and English meanings. Third Edition. Price As. 12.

1884. Report on the Mysore Census of 1881. Compiled for Government. With Statistical Tables and Map. Price Rs. 4.

"Has done good service to Mysore by the information he has given to the world in this valuable Census Report."—Surgeon General Balfour, in St. James's Gazette.

1884. Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in Mysore and Coorg. Compiled for Government. Price Rs. 3-8.

"Reichhaltiger Katalog, dessen Studium jeden Sanskritisten angelegentlich empfohlen werden kann."—Professor Jolly, in Oesterreichische Monatsschrift für den Orient.

1897. Mysore, a Gazetteer compiled for Government. Revised Edition. In 2 volumes. With Maps and Illustrations. (Archibald Constable & Co., Westminster). Price, half morocco, Rs. 20; full cloth, Rs. 18.

"A work of great magnitude and research, very carefully prepared and edited."—Annual Address by the Dewan (Sir K. Seshadri Iyer) to Representative Assembly, 1898. "A second edition of Mr. Rice's admirable Gazetteer. The first edition was published more than twenty years ago, and the immense progress made by the State in the interval fully justifies bringing the work up to date."—Pioneer. "Complete without being diffuse, and accurate without being dry."—Madras Mail. "Mr. Rice has shown how interesting a work of this sort may be made."—"It is a highly instructive work, and so readable that if once taken up one is quite fascinated by its contents."—"In order to bring the work up to date a great deal has been required of the author, as he indicates in the preface. Both volumes are provided with excellent maps."—Glasgow Herald. "As a repertory of all available knowledge about Mysore, admirably written and arranged, it is of inestimable merit and of the highest authority"—Scotsman. "Brought up to date not without considerable labour, for indeed there is much to be added and changed. Mysore was given back to native rule in 1881, and it is worth while to note Mr. Rice's opinion on the relations between the Imperial Government and the State."—Spectator. "The name of the author is sufficient guarantee for its excellence and accuracy."—Athenaeum. "Another proof (if further evidence were required) that good work gets found out. Mr. Rice himself remarks that when he first published his book he little thought he would ever be called on to issue a second edition. But during twenty years his Account of Mysore has served as a guide not only to the administrative staff, but also to the British investors who have sent their capital to the gold fields and coffee plantations of that State. It is difficult, indeed, to name a subject of interest, whether from the official, the antiquarian, or the industrial point of view, which does not find patient and thorough treatment in his volumes."—The Times.

Bibliotheca Carnatica.

(Works never before printed).

1884. I. Karnâtaka-Bhâshâ-Bhûshana, by Nâgavarmmâ; the oldest grammar extant of the language. In Sanskrit sûtras, with Commentary, and Introduction. Price Rs. 2-8.

1890. II. Karnâtaka-S'abdânus'âsana by Bhaṭṭâkalaṅka-Dêva. In Sanskrit sûtras, with its two commentaries—Bhâshâ-Mañjari and Mañjari-Makaranda: an exhaustive treatise on the grammar of the language, completed in 1604.
